MANILA, Philippines (SEPT. 18) UPI - The chief U.S. negotiator in talks that resumed Tuesday on the future of American military bases in the Philippines acknowledged Manila's demands for the withdrawal of American forces but appealed for ''time to do it right.''

Some 1,000 leftist protesters, pressing demands for the immediate dismantling of the U.S. facilities, burned an American flag at a rally several blocks from the tightly guarded Central Bank, the site of the talks on renewal of American basing rights.

Riot police armed with truncheons and shields prevented the protesters from marching on the bank. Several dozen people were injured Sunday and Monday in protests near the U.S. Embassy against the bases, regarded as a vestige of American colonial rule.

''It is clear to me that the days of a very large presence of U.S. sailors and airmen in the Philippines are coming to an end,'' special negotiator Richard Armitage said in his opening remarks at the Central Bank building.

''What remains for us to determine is the rate at which this presence will be reduced and the nature of the relationship our two governments wish to pursue during and after this transitional period.

''Let us take time to do it right. Let us be your partners in managing the changes,'' Armitage said.

President Corazon Aquino, facing substantial internal opposition to a continued U.S. military presence, called Monday for an ''orderly withdrawal'' of U.S. forces. She said she would not try to evade the Philippine constitutional provision that bans U.S. military bases after the 1947 treaty covering six U.S. facilities expires Sept. 16, 1991.

Aquino said the talks should hammer out a ''new relationship'' with the United States.

She did not give a timetable for the phaseout, but U.S. officials were reported to have said the post-Cold War era had diminished the importance of the facilities and were now receptive to a five- to 10- year pullout.

Some 41,000 troops, Defense Department employees and dependants are stationed in the U.S. facilities, which include Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Station.

Off-base leave and non-essential travel have been suspended at the facilities after communist guerrillas shot and killed two U.S. servicemen on the eve of exploratory talks on the bases in May. The guerrillas have threatened to kill Americans unless U.S. troops are withdrawn.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said a bomb exploded at the base of one of the towers at the transmitter station of the Voice of America Monday night, causing slight damage but failing to disrupt operations. No one was reported injured in the blast in Concepcion town, 50 miles north of Manila. Schrager refused to speculate on who was responsible for the bombing.

Restating Aquino's position on the bases, Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus said the talks should ''discuss the whole range of U.S.- Philippine relations to create a new basis, a new spirit, a new character for those relations.''

He said these ties ''transcend transitory crises elsewhere in the world, no matter how they may impact on our nation and no matter how attracted we may be to the American response to them.''

Manglapus apparently referred to the Persian Gulf crisis. Both Philippine and U.S. officials said the military buildup in the gulf was being done through Europe, not the Philippines, where some 14,500 troops are stationed.

''There must be more to U.S.-Philippine relations than marching to the same military beat,'' said Manglapus, who heads the Philippine panel at the talks on the U.S. bases.

Armitage said his mandate from President Bush was to discuss the defense aspects of the relationship but said he will do his best to reach a broad agreement.

He stressed both the Philippines and the United States should be allowed to adjust to the ''new circumstances.''

''Let us give our friends in this region adequate time to adjust to a world in which superpower rivalry is being replaced, it seems, by the proliferation of regional powers seeking domination of their respective neighborhoods,'' Armitage said.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - The government of South Africa says black activist Winnie Mandela will face prosecution on kidnap and assault charges in the 1988 slaying of a 14-year-old boy. Mandela's chief bodyguard, Jerry Richardson, was convicted of the youth's murder and sentenced to death. South African officials say the charges against Mrs. Mandela stem from the abduction of the teen-ager and three other black youths in December 1988. She is the wife of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

Saudi Arabian officials are conducting identity checks at the Arab kingdom's newly re-opened border with occupied Kuwait to screen out Iraqi infiltrators. Officials say the checks yesterday slowed the flow of refugees into Saudi Arabia from Kuwait to about 50 vehicles. That's down from an estimated five-thousand refugees who have entered Saudi Arabia since Saturday when Iraq opened the frontier.

Security officials in the Philippines report a bomb exploded at the transmitter site of the U-S Voice of America radio, in a town 50 miles north of Manila. Officials say the blast did NOT disrupt station operations. NO one was injured and NO damage was reported. The blast occurred last night before the resumption of talks the future of U-S bases in the Philippines.

Another disappointment for the shuttle Columbia crew. Today's launch was postponed until the end of October at the earliest after another leak was detected aboard the spaceplane during fueling last night. OSLO, Norway (SEPT. 18) UPI - Prime Minister Jan Syse is under fire following allegations of irregularities in his personal financial dealings.

But Syse, who admitted the irregularities and attributed them to pressure from work, told Norwegian newspapers he would not resign as head of a three-party, center-right coalition led by his Conservative party.

The controversy surrounding Syse emerged last week when Norwegian tabloid Verdens Gang revealed that a joint-stock company owned by Syse had neglected to file formal records of its annual general meeting.

Last weekend, another of Syse's companies was also found to have neglected to file records and it was alleged that company audits had been signed by Syse's lawyer, who was neither trained nor authorized to act as auditor.

But after a full apology by the premier, who said pressure of work had prevented him from keeping full overseeing control of his companies, opposition politicians said they were prepared to let the issue lie.

Syse also said he was relinquishing control of all of his private companies.

''We see no reason to pursue this matter any further,'' Labor Party Deputy Leader Gunnar Berge said Saturday.

Sunday evening, however, Norwegian Television alleged Syse had borrowed $10,000 and allowed his brother-in-law to borrow $16,500 from one of the companies.

Although the loans were not large, and were repaid three months later, they appeared in violation of a Norwegian law that prevents companies that owe more than they have in formal assets from lending money.

Late Monday, Syse announced he had ordered a full audit and scrutiny of his private financial affairs and declined further comment.

''We hope the investigation will be finished this week,'' said Conservative Party General Secretary Svein Groenern.

Prior to leaving Norway for India, Labor Party leader Gro Harlem Brundtland said her party was ''unhappy'' with the situation and would await the results of the ongoing investigation before deciding whether to take parliamentary action.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait:

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia - Many of the Kuwaitis crossing the newly reopened border with Saudi Arabia are sobbing women who said Iraqis were forbidding men between 17 and 45 from leaving. U.S. newspaper reports said the troops were seizing the men and in some cases forcing their women relatives to continue on without them.

Painstaking identity checks designed to screen out Iraqi infiltrators slowed the flow of refugees through occupied Kuwait's border with Saudi Arabia. Saudi authorities estimated more than 5,000 refugees had entered the kingdom since Iraqi border guards on Saturday inexplicably opened the frontier. But the departures slowed Monday, with officials saying only 50 vehicles had been allowed through.

BRUSSELS, Belgium - The European Community called for expulsion of all Iraqi military attaches and restrictions on other Iraqi diplomats in retaliation for Iraqi raids on Western diplomatic compounds in Kuwait last week. Some countries, including Britain and Belgium, announced such retaliatory measures Monday, and others were expected to quickly follow. France and Italy took steps over the weekend. ''We have decided on a common decision to expel military personnel connected to Iraqi embassies in our capitals, and to restrict the freedom of movement of personnel at their embassies,'' the 12 EC foreign ministers said in a communique following a daylong meeting.

WASHINGTON - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney fired Air Force Chief of Staff Michael Dugan, apparently for an interview in which he said U.S. bombing plans specifically target Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. Dugan's interview in The Washington Post and The Los Angeles Times followed a tour of Saudi Arabia in which he discussed possible war plans by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

AMMAN, Jordan - Palestinian spokesmen said Jordan's King Hussein met with the leaders of two radical Palestinian groups in a reconciliation move attributed to the Persian Gulf crisis. The meetings, another sign of the shifting political alliances in the Middle East, also reflected widespread empathy in Jordan for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and dissatisfaction with the U.S.-led multinational military force in the Persian Gulf.

TEHRAN, Iran - The daily Jomhuri Eslami newspaper Monday criticized the U.N. Security Council for enforcing resolutions against the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait while turning ''a blind eye'' to Iraqi atrocities during its 1980-1988 Gulf War against Iran. The former foes have made peace but oil officials in Cyprus said an oil deal between them appears to have fallen through.

U.S. crude oil zoomed to record price levels amid reports the Soviet Union was cutting back deliveries to the West and on continued concern over the situation in the Middle East. On the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday, West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery ended the day up $1.87 over Friday to $33.63 a barrel, after having breached the Merc's record $32.35 trading price of Aug. 2, 1983. It had previously equaled the record this past Aug. 23.

DEARBORN, Mich. - Nearly 800 Arab-Americans living in the Detroit and Chicago areas met to denounce U.S. intervention in the Persian Gulf and urge an Arab-led diplomatic solution to the crisis. Arab-Americans from Iraq, Syria, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon and Yemen heard impassioned calls from religious and political leaders during the Sunday meeting.

AL AZRAQ, Jordan - Tensions continue rising and fights are commonplace in Jordanian refugee camps as stranded Asians and other refugees wait to learn when they will be allowed to return home. Camp officials say the refugees can manage when they know their departure date, but become frustrated and unruly when they do not know when they will be allowed to leave.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - A man convicted hours earlier of raping and sodomizing a nun held a female probation officer hostage for seven hours in a Manhattan courthouse, but the woman escaped unharmed early Tuesday, officials said.

The woman, Maureen Trenk, 35, a four-year veteran of the city Department of Probation, fled about 12:15 a.m. from the courthouse holding room where the prisoner had held her with a homemade knife since 5:30 p.m. Monday.

Correction and police officers then rushed in to subdue the prisoner, Mauricio Estinal, who earlier Monday had been convicted of rape and sodomy.

The conviction stemmed from a 1986 rape in which Estinal attacked an East Harlem nun, Ryles said.

Trenk was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital after the ordeal, where a spokeswoman said she was stable ''and in good condition,'' and was likely to be released.

Correction Department spokeswoman Ruby Ryles said Estinal took the officer hostage in a 12th floor holding pen at state Supreme Court in lower Manhattan.

Ryles said Estinal had been convicted on first-degree rape and sodomy and was discussing probation possibilities with the officer prior to sentencing when he asked to go the bathroom.

While in the lavatory, the inmate took off the handle of a mop bucket, which he flattened out into a shank, Ryles said.

Estinal, who had been in custody since 1987, then returned to the room and took the woman hostage with the makeshift weapon, she said.

At one point Monday night, Cardinal John O'Connor was in the courthouse and was aware of the situation, but did not speak to the prisoner, Ryles said.

REDWOOD CITY, CA (SEPT. 18) UPI - The defense lawyer for a man accused of going on a murderous rampage that left seven people dead in California's wine country conceded his client committed the slayings but said the man was psychotic at the time.

Public defender Marteen Miller told the Superior Court jury in opening statements Monday that Ramon Salcido killed the seven people, including his wife and two of his daughters, but said the former winery worker was under a ''psychotic depression'' at the time of the 1989 rampage.

Sonoma County Assistant District Attorney Peter Bumerts, who is seeking the death penalty, said he would use a confession that Salcido made to sheriff's deputies en route back from Mexico to show the slayings were premeditated.

Salcido, 29, was charged with killing his wife Angela, 24, in their home near Santa Rosa; his daughters, Sofia, 4, and Teresa, 1, at a remote dump site; his mother-in-law, Marian Richards, 42; her daughters, Ruth, 12, and Maria, 8, in Cotati; and Grand Cru winery co-worker Tracy Toovey, 35, on April 14, 1989. He was arrested several days later in Mexico.

Salcido's 2-year-old daughter, Carmina, survived the knife attack that killed Sofia and Teresa.

Miller told the jury the confession would show Salcido was psychotic at the time of the killings. He also said psychiatrists who have examined Salcido agree ''he is severely mentally ill.''

Miller said Salcido has the mind of a 2-year-old and ''the world was him.'' He said Salcido loved his children ''only as an extension of himself.''

Bumerts said, ''You will hear Ramon Salcido, in his own words (in the confession), describe with exquisite specificity how he decided to kill his daughters because he was angry with his wife.''

The prosecutor said Salcido went on an alcohol and cocaine binge the night before the killings. When ge got home, his wife was gone and he was so angry he took his daughters to a garbage dump, where he slashed their throats and left them for dead, Bumerts said.

Then, Bumerts said, Salcido went to Richards' home where he waited until her husband left for work and then killed her and the two other girls. Bumerts said Salcido was angry with Mrs. Richards because she knew Sofia had been fathered by another man.

Salcido then went back home, where he found his wife and killed her, Bumerts said. Salcido proceeded to the winery where he killed Toovey because he felt the victim was trying to get him fired.

Salcido called his family in Mexico, and then drove there to meet with his mother, Miller said. His sister's husband reportedly called California authorities and Salcido was arrested at a train station near his hometown of Los Mochis.

The trial was moved to San Mateo County from Santa Rosa because of heavy pre-trial publicity.

BOSTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Voters went to the polls across Massachusetts Tuesday to choose among four primary candidates seeking to replace Gov. Michael Dukakis whose ''Massachusetts miracle'' fizzled during his 1988 presidential campaign and sent the state plummeting into economic chaos.

The polls opened across the state at 7 a.m. EDT and were to remain open until 8 p.m.

Bitterly fought battles from the top to the bottom of both ballots, coupled with the beautiful fall weather predicted for Tuesday, were expected to draw a big turnout, especially from independent voters who could be a key factor in both the Democratic and Republican gubernatorial primaries to narrow the field to two to compete in November to replace Dukakis, a Democrat who decided not to seek another term. Dukakis lost to George Bush in the 1988 presidential election.

Boston University President John Silber, who has run as ''the outsider the insiders are afraid of,'' was hoping that a big independent turnout would help him erase a substantial lead held by former Attorney General Francis Bellotti among registered Democrats.

Likewise, former U.S. Attorney and Assistant U.S. Attorney General William Weld during the past several days urged independents to back him in his battle against conservative House Minority Leader Steven Pierce in the GOP gubernatorial primary.

Voters will also select a Republican candidate to oppose first-term Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., in the November elections. Millionaire real estate developer Jim Rappaport is vying with businessman Dan Daly for the nomination in a contest that has focused more on Rappaport's credentials and rhetoric than on Kerry or the issues.

Rappaport, the son of politically influential Boston developer Jerome Rappaport, has spent $1.7 million of his own money in an aggressive media campaign that focused primarily on Kerry.

Bellotti, a liberal who has promised to streamline state government, had been engaged in a tight three-way battle with Silber and Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy for months. But he got a big boost when Murphy, whose campaign was failing, dropped out of the race and threw her support to him.

The move translated into a substantial boost in public opinion polls for Bellotti last week, but Silber has claimed that his internal tracking polls showed the gap narrowing.

Both Bellotti and Silber support existing abortion laws and have promised to cut bureaucracy. Both oppose the tax rollback petition being pushed by Citizens for Limited Taxation.

While Bellotti greeted people at factories in Brockton and office buildings in Worcester, Silber spent the morning on radio talk shows urging independents to take a Democratic ballot.

''I think we're dead even now,'' he said.

Pierce, a veteran state representative and the only gubernatorial candidate who opposes abortion rights, held a lead of as much as 33 points in polls taken during the summer. But he has watched that lead evaporate. Several polls taken in the last week show Pierce and Weld in a virtual dead heat and one even showed Weld with a 10-point lead.

Weld, the only remaining candidate who supports an amendment to the state constitution that would guarantee abortion rights through the full nine months of pregnancy, and Pierce support the limited taxation petition.

''The polls look great,'' said Weld as he shook hands with voters in Boston. ''But polls aren't votes. I think it's going to be a nail-biter.''

Pierce, who pressed the flesh at Boston's busy Downtown Crossing, also dismissed polling results, saying, ''I think they're pretty much useless.''

There are also two congressional primaries.

In the Republican 5th District race, state Rep. John MacGovern is running against Donal Coleman for the right to oppose Rep. Chester Atkins, D-Mass., in November. In the Democratic 2nd District primary, first term Rep. Richard Neal is being challenged by former Springfield Mayor Theodore DiMauro.

-In Oklahoma, Rep. Wes Watkins, who is giving up his District 3 seat to run for governor, and David Walters, who won the gubernatorial nomination four years ago but lost to Republican Henry Bellmon, are vying for the Democratic nomination. Republicans will choose between former U.S. Attorney Bill Price and restaurant operator Vince Orza. Voters will also decide on lieutenant governor, state treasurer and labor commissioner as well as eight races for state Senate seats, 10 for the state House of Representatives and three for district attorney. Three state questions also are on the ballot thast would place a 12-year limit on legislative service, create a constitutionally based ethics commission and allow the Legislature to determine which, if any, state employees should be allowed to work in places where alcoholic beverages are served.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Higher oil prices from the Persian Gulf crisis sent inflation at the consumer level up a sharp 0.9 percent in August, the Labor Department said Friday.

Economists had expected the department's Consumer Price Index to jump by as much as 0.8 percent.

The department said a sharp upturn in petroleum-based energy prices, fueled by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the subsequent U.S.-led military response and U.N. trading sanctions, were responsible for more than two-fifths of the overall price increase.

Gasoline prices rose 7.6 percent in August and fuel oil prices soared 15.4 percent, the department said.

Excluding the often volatile energy prices, inflation rose 0.4 percent in August after gaining 0.5 percent the month before.

The advances for gasoline, fuel oil and overall energy prices were the greatest since January when a brutal cold spell sent energy prices skyrocketing.

Although shelter costs advanced 0.7 percent in August, the rise was less than that of the two preceding months. Food prices also rose in August but at a lesser pace than the two preceding months.

For the first eight months of the year, inflation at the consumer level rose at an annualized rate of 6.2 percent, up from a rate of 4.8 percent for the same period last year.

The so-called core rate of inflation, which does not include prices for food, shelter and energy, has risen 5.4 percent so far this year, compared to a gain of 3.9 percent during the year-ago period.

The overall index for food and beverage prices rose 0.3 percent in August. Food on grocers' shelves inched up 0.3 percent during the month after gaining 0.4 percent in July. The increase was tempered by a sharp drop in prices for fruits and vegetables. Prices for fresh fruits dropped by 4 percent last month.

But overall prices for meats, poultry, fish and eggs gained 0.5 percent in August after falling by 0.4 percent the month before. Last month's gain was led by a sharp turnaround in egg prices, which rose 9.9 percent last month.

Beef and poultry prices fell 0.5 percent and 1.3 percent respectively while pork prices rose 0.7 percent.

Consumers also paid more to dine out in August. Restaurant meal prices gained 0.3 percent and alcoholic beverage costs gained 0.2 percent.

Atlanta beat out five other cities- including a sentimental favorite, Athens, Greece. 1996 is the 100th anniversasry of the modern Olympics which began in Athens. Other cities in the running were Toronto... Melbourne, Australia... Belgrade, Yugoslavia... and Manchester, England.

Prices took a big jump last month mostly because of higher oil prices caused by the Persian Gulf crisis. The Labor Department reports prices jumped eight-tenths of one percent. Gasoline prices rose nearly eight percent and fuel oil prices by more than 15 percent. Without energy prices, influation was up four-tenths of one percent. .

In another economic report, the Commerce Department says the trade deficit in July had its worst showing since January. It soared 75 percent to more than nine-BILLION dollars. Exports fell to 32- BILLION while imports increased to more than 41-BILLION.

Energy analysts predict higher prices for heating oil this winter if there's NO peaceful end to the Persian Gulf standoff. This... despite the fact that U-S inventories of heating oil are at a five-year high. The experts believe other sources may NEVER make up for the shortfall caused by the embargo against Iraq and Kuwait. They say out-of-sight prices may result if war breaks out.

Iraqi guards have slowed down the flow of refugees from Kuwait to Saudi Arabia. Most of those allowed to cross the border were women who said the Iraqis were NOT letting any men aged 17 to 45 leave. The border was opened Saturday, but the Iraqi soldiers took identification from refugees. U-S and Saudi officials are concerned that may have been a cover-up to let Iraqis pose as refugees and get into Saudi Arabia.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Higher oil prices from the Persian Gulf crisis sent inflation at the consumer level up a sharp 0.9 percent in August, the Labor Department said Friday.

Economists had expected the department's Consumer Price Index to jump as much as 0.8 percent.

The department said a sharp upturn in petroleum-based energy prices, fueled by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the subsequent U.S.-led military response and the United Nations' trading sanctions, were responsible for more than two-fifths of the overall price increase.

Gasoline prices rose 7.6 percent in August and fuel oil prices soared 15.4 percent, the department said.

Excluding the often volatile energy prices, inflation rose 0.4 percent in August after gaining 0.5 percent the month before.

The advances for gasoline, fuel oil and overall energy prices were the greatest since January when a brutal cold spell sent energy prices skyrocketing.

Although shelter costs advanced 0.7 percent in August, the rise was less than that of the two preceding months. Food prices also rose in August but at a lesser pace that the two preceding months.

For the first eight months of the year, inflation at the consumer level rose at an annualized rate of 6.2 percent, up from a rate of 4.8 percent for the same period last year.

The so-called ''core'' rate of inflation, which does not include prices for food, shelter and energy, has risen 5.4 percent so far this year, compared to a gain of 3.9 percent during the year-ago period.

The overall index for food and beverage prices rose 0.3 percent in August. Food on grocers' shelves inched up 0.3 percent during the month after gaining 0.4 percent in July. The increase was tempered by a sharp drop in prices for fruits and vegetables. Prices for fresh fruits dropped 4 percent last month.

But overall prices for meats, poultry, fish and eggs gained 0.5 percent in August after falling by 0.4 percent the month before. Last month's gain was led by a sharp turnaround in egg prices, which rose 9.9 percent last month.

Beef and poultry prices fell 0.5 percent and 1.3 percent respectively while pork prices rose 0.7 percent.

Consumers also paid more to dine out in August. Restaurant meal prices gained 0.3 percent and alocholic beverage costs gained 0.2 percent.

Housing costs advanced 0.7 percent in August after gaining 0.5 percent in July. The department attributed the increase to higher prices for household fuels and other utilities, which rose 1.3 percent last month after falling 0.8 percent in July.

Fuel oil prices shot up 15.4 percent in August but the two other major household fuels - natural gas and electricity - were unchanged.

Overall costs for renters and homeowners rose in August but maintenance and repair costs slid 0.7 percent.

Prices for telephone services gained 1.9 percent in August and cable television costs advanced 1.1 percent. For the past 9 months, cable costs have increased 13.3 percent.

Transportation costs climbed 1.8 percent last month after rising 0.3 percent in July. The department attributed the increase to an 8.1 percent gain in motor fuel prices, which had dropped 0.4 percent in July.

Gasoline prices were 16.1 percent higher as of August than at the end of 1989 but remained 11.5 percent below their peak of March 1981.

Prices for new vehicles remained unchanged and used car prices rose 0.3 percent during the month.

Apparel and upkeep costs gained a modest 0.1 percent in August after declining for the preceding three months.

Medical care costs advanced 0.9 percent in August and cost 9.5 percent more than a year ago. Prescription and nonprescription medicines gained 0.5 percnet while medical services costs increased 1 percent.

Entertainment costs climbed a slight 0.2 percent but remained 4.5 percent more expensive than in the year-ago period.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - America's trade deficit soared by 75 percent to $9.33 billion in July in the worst showing since January, the Commerce Department announced Tuesday.

Private economists had expected a deficit of $7.3 billion after a revised shortfall of $5.34 billion in June. In May, the nation's trade deficit stood at $7.77 billion.

Exports fell to $32.03 billion in July from a revised $34.22 billion in June, while imports increased to $41.36 billion in July from a revised $39.56 billion, according to the department's Census Bureau.

The totals were adjusted for seasonal factors.

In January, the trade deficit totaled nearly $10.2 billion.

A government spokesman noted that commercial aircraft exports - which have been a driving force in the industrial sector in recent months - were off by an estimated $500 million in July.

Imports of petroleum products, before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the subsequent global oil shock, advanced to a $4.04 billion in July from $3.76 billion in June, not adjusted for seasonal factors.

The Commerce Department also said ''the June to July change in imports reflected increases in consumer goods, capital goods, industrial supplies and materials, and automotive vehicles, parts and engines.''

''Foods, feeds and beverages, and other merchandise were virtually unchanged '' it added.

''The June to July change in exports reflected decreases in capital goods, foods, feeds and beverages, automotive vehicles, parts and engines, industrial supplies and materials, and consumer goods,'' the department said.

The July trade deficit with Japan fell to $2.97 billion from $3.07 billion in June, while the deficit with the Organization of Petroleum Countries, OPEC, increased to $1.55 billion from $1.18 billion, not adjusted for seasonal factors.

Looking ahead, analysts at Mitsubishi Bank in New York said, ''Oil will be a problem in August'' as a result of the Iraq crisis.

''We figure that higher August imported crude oil prices will cause the monthly trade deficit to balloon by $2 billion in August,'' the analysts predicted in a newsletter to investors.

FARMINGTON HILLS, MI (SEPT. 18) UPI - Services are scheduled Wednesday for Kenneth M. Meisel, a musician who played with the Les Brown and Charlie Barnett big bands.

Meisel, a Detroit native who taught himself to play the trombone, drums and various other instruments, died of a heart attack Friday while on a fishing trip near Petoskey. He was 76.

He played with Brown's Band of Renown from 1944-1946 and was the lead trombone in the group's popular recording of ''Sentimental Journal.''

From 1946 to 1947, Meisel played with the Charlie Barnett band. He turned down an offer to play with the Count Basie Orchestra while under contract to Les Brown.

Meisel was employed by the Michigan Mutual Insurance Co. from 1950 until he retired in 1977.

Survivors include his former wife and close friend, Kathleen M. Meisel; two daughters, Kathleen A. Spencer and Kelly P. Meisel; two sons, Kevin M. and Keith E.; two grandchildren; and a brother.

Services are planned for Wednesday at the Ted C. Sullivan Funeral Home in Novi.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Philadelphia Orchestra's new season is starting on a sour note with musicians vowing to pick up protest signs instead of instruments for Tuesday's opening concert.

Orchestra members Monday night rejected the Philadelphia Orchestra Association's latest contract offer and voted to go on strike at the start of the 91st season.

Negotiators talked into the early morning before breaking off and were set to resume talks Tuesday in hopes of averting an opening night strike.

The 105 musicians and four orchestra librarians represented by the American Federation of Musicians Local 77 planned to begin picketing outside the Academy of Music if no agreement is reached.

Musicians with the world-renown orchestra are displeased with association proposals concerning pensions, seniority, medical benefits and radio broadcasts, musicians' representative John Hood said. No association members could be reached for comment.

The previous three-year contract expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday, timed to coincide with the start of the fall season.

The strike vote came seven hours after the musicians voted 52-49 to accept the association's latest proposal. With such a close vote, players' committee members had sought contract modifications from the association.

Orchestra musicians last went on strike on the eve of the 1966 concert season.

Three years ago, musicians finally approved a contract in November but also passed a resolution expressing unhappiness with the orchestra's management.

The threat of a divisive strike action comes one week after the association appointed German impresario Wolfgang Sawallisch as the sixth musical director of the 90-year-old orchestra. Sawallisch will pick up the baton when the current conductor, Riccardo Muti, steps down after in 1992 season.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 18) UPI - Thousands of jubilant Atlantans poured into the streets as dawn broke Tuesday to celebrate the city's success at landing the 1996 Summer Olympics.

Crowds stayed up all night at the Underground Atlanta tourist attraction downtown, awaiting news of the announcement from Tokyo on giant-screen TV sets.

When the word came that Atlanta had been chosen over five other cities to host the centennial of the modern games, hundreds of citizens jumped, whooped and danced through the streets. Bands and fireworks added to the clamor as the downtown business district erupted into a New Year's Eve-style party.

''I jumped up when I heard it and I started hugging this man I didn't even know,'' squealed a University of Georgia cheerleader, who said she had been at Underground Atlanta since 3:45 a.m.

Atlantans driving to work down the city's famous Peachtree Street began honking their horns, hanging out their car windows and screaming at fellow motorists when the announcement came over the radio.

''This is the biggest day in the history of the city,'' said Dennis Berkholz, an official of the Georgia Dome stadium project under construction. ''It will really push us forward.

The 80,000-seat arena will be part of the city's Olympic complex. Atlanta also must build another new stadium adjacent to its current baseball-football arena as well as an Olympic village around the campus of Georgia Tech.

''I was stunned,'' Berkholz said of Atlanta's selection. ''I think we all thought that Athens was going to get this.''

Athens hosted the 1896 Olympics and had been a favorite to be the site of the 100th anniversary of the modern games.

Moments after the announcement came, trucks from the Atlanta Journal pulled up and newspapers with the huge headline ''It's Atlanta'' started flowing through the throng.

Fulton County Commission Chairman Michael Lomax advised residents to ''celebrate and strut for a while because we have worked hard - 3 1/2 years - then roll up our sleeves and get to work.''

At the ceremony in Tokyo, Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson lurched backward, gasped and wiped tears from his eyes when his city was proclaimed host for the games.

''This proves if you don't run the race, there is no way to win,'' a grinning Jackson declared. ''This is the most hotly contested Olympic race in a long, long time.

''This is a victory for the people of Atlanta,'' he said. ''The people made this happen.''

Georgia Gov. Joe Frank Harris, also in Tokyo, said Atlanta won on the ''fourth or fifth'' ballot, eventually getting 51 votes of the 86 votes. Only 44 were needed to win.

Athens led the first two rounds of voting and was tied with Atlanta in the third round, Olympic officials said.

Atlanta, which hosted the 1988 Democratic National Convention, has the necessary lodging facilities to accommodate Olympic spectators with an estimated 35,000 hotel rooms.

''What I want now is for all of our young people to start training at something,'' said former Atlanta mayor Andrew Young, a leader of the city's quest for the games. ''We can't have the world coming to Altanta for the Olympics and not have some Atlantans win some gold medals.

''What we have to work at now is the spirit of the Olympics infusing the lives of our children. We have enough money we have enough spirit.''

In the coastal city of Savannah, site for many waterfront events during the Games, about 80 business leaders and government officials erupted into cheers, whistles and hugs when the announcement of Atlanta's selection was made.

Savannah is to be site of the yachting competition, and local officials predicted the games would bring 7,500 visitors and $80 million to the city.

''It's incredible. It's an incredible feeling. It vindicates that you have to be able to dream,'' said Eli Karatassos, chairman of the Savannah Area Chamber of Commerce, as he dispensed champagne into styrofoam cups.

TOKYO (SEPT. 18) UPI - Japan, struggling to find 100 volunteer doctors and nurses to go to the Middle East, dispatched an advance team to Saudi Arabia Tuesday to investigate conditions there.

Also Tuesday, two Japanese airliners prepared to fly to Jordan to pick up Philippine refugees stranded there and fly them to Manila.

And a senior Japanese official said Japan will make no further financial commitments to help in the Persian Gulf crisis.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu pledged Aug. 29 to send 100 medical volunteers to Saudi Arabia, but opposition from the nation's largest medical union and the reluctance of individual doctors and nurses to sign up has hampered the effort a senior Foreign Ministry official acknowleged Tuesday.

Asked how many had volunteered, Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe, said aside from the five doctors and four nurses on the 17- member fact-finding team, others were waiting for detailed information from the team before making a decision.

The medical team, led by a Japanese diplomat, will look into conditions and needs in several Saudi cities, Watanabe said. Most of the medical personnel on the team will remain in Saudi Arabia for one to three months to provide care to refugees and possible military casualties, he said.

The team will will not visit the front lines where U.S.-led multinational forces are gathered, because the medical community fears it would be unconstititutional to send personnel into a possible combat zone, Watanabe said.

The Japanese government does not share that view, Watanabe said, but would respect it ''for the time being.''

Japan's Constitution forbids the use of force in settling international conflicts.

In another phase of Japan's effort to help in the crisis, the government announced it had arranged for two chartered commercial airliners to fly to Jordan to pick up some 600 Philippine refugees who had fled Kuwait after Iraq invaded Aug. 2.

The first plane, a Japan Airlines Boeing 747, was scheduled to leave Tokyo Tuesday night, and the second, an All Nippon Airways 747 was set to take off Wednesday morning.

The planes were to carry food and blankets for refugees who remain in Jordan.

Altogether, Japan has donated $12 million to underwrite the airlift of thousands of refugees out of Jordan, the Foreign Ministry said.

Meanwhile, a senior Finance Ministry official said Japan's total commitment of $4 billion to the Persian Gulf effort had exhausted the government's reserves and forced it to ask agencies to return funds already allocated to them.

No further commitments will be forthcoming, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The government had adequate reserves to cover Japan's first commitment of $1 billion, made Aug. 30, he said. But there are no spare funds to cover the latest commitment, made Friday, of an additional $3 billion, he said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - America's trade deficit soared an alarming 75 percent to $9.33 billion in July in the worst showing since January, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

''Trade had been expected to be the cushion for the United States in a recession with exports holding up and non-oil imports declining,'' Boston Co. economist Allen Sinai said. ''The July figures showed just the opposite.''

''This ... hints at a bigger recession than expected,'' Sinai said, warning ''the trade deficit can't get any better'' with the Middle East crisis pushing oil prices higher.

Private analysts had expected a deficit of roughly $7.3 billion after a revised shortfall of $5.34 billion in June. In May, the nation's trade deficit stood at $7.77 billion.

Exports, which had provided much of the strength, fell to $32.03 billion in July from a revised $34.22 billion in June, while imports increased to $41.36 billion from a revised $39.56 billion, the department's Census Bureau said.

The totals were adjusted for seasonal factors, and the overall July deficit was the widest since nearly $10.2 billion in January.

Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRI/McGraw Hill in Lexington, Mass., said, ''It looks to me that we had some months that were extraordinarily low. Overall, the deficit is still running a little less than last year.''

A government spokesman noted that exports of commercial aircraft - which have been a driving force in the industrial sector in recent months - were off an estimated $500 million in July.

Imports of petroleum products, before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the subsequent global oil shock, advanced to $4.04 billion in July from $3.76 billion in June, not adjusted for seasonal factors.

The Commerce Department also said ''the June to July change in imports reflected increases in consumer goods, capital goods, industrial supplies and materials, and automotive vehicles, parts and engines.''

(SEPT. 18) UPI - It doesn't take much to figure that inflation is up because of higher oil prices. And that is what the Iraq crisis produced for the U-S in August. Consumer prices jumped eight-tenths of one percent last month... half of it traced to higher oil costs. The energy jump is the worst since January.

The nation's love for anything foreign continued in July with the worst monthly trade deficit figure since January. The trade deficit soared to nine-point-three-BILLION dollars, up 75 percent. NONE of this includes any of the higher oil prices that ripped through the economy in August.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 18) UPI - An electrical problem caused a partial power outage at the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday, delaying the opening of trading in several contracts.

The problem also affected elevators and telephone service in the building.

Power was restored at 7:40 a.m., and trading was scheduled to begin at 8:45 a.m.

''The outage was caused by a transformer failure on the 13th floor and affected the board's computers,'' CBOT spokesman Mark Prout said. ''We had lights, but it brought down the central computer system and the elevators.''

Trading could not be conducted during the outage because all quotes must be entered in the computer.

''If you can't put quotes in (the computer) you can't trade. It's against the Commodities Exchange Act,'' Prout said.

The first to be affected were Treasury Bond futures which were scheduled to open at 7:20 a.m. and Major Market Index futures at 8:15 a.m.

Trading in other commodities at the exchange were scheduled to open at their normal times.

MIAMI (SEPT. 18) UPI - Part of the national AIDS Memorial Quilt was vandalized after members of a singles club meeting at a Miami hotel asked that it be removed from display because it was ''ugly.''

Two teddy bears were cut from quilt panels during the weekend and were later found in boxes headed for the garbage, the display organizer and a hotel manager said.

''It's like going to a cemetery and kicking over tombstones,'' said Jerry Suarez, chairman of the South Florida Names Project, which set up the quilt display.

Officially called the Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt, it is a handmade memorial to people who have died of the incurable virus. The full patchwork, made of 3-foot-by-6-foot panels, bears 12,600 names and is the size of four football fields.

Four 12-foot-by-12-foot sections, each made of eight panels, were on display in the mezzanine at the Hotel Inter-Continental. They were to have been on display until Saturday in conjunction with a conference of the National Council on Foundations, a consortium of grant-awarding groups.

The vandalism apparently occurred after a hotel employee took down one of the sections Friday night, said Jurgen Dinger, the hotel's resident manager.

The Club Connection, which touts itself as ''Miami's most selective singles social club,'' was holding a function in the hotel ballroom and asked that the quilt be removed because someone in the group considered it ''ugly,'' Dinger said.

''There was no management employee who was there to see that it did not happen '' Dinger said.

The club's owners could not be reached for comment.

Suarez went looking for the quilt Saturday and hotel employees found it wadded up in a closet.

Suarez inspected the sections and found that teddy bears had been removed from two panels, the one he made for his father and the one Shelley Rappaport made for her friend, Mickey Bonavina.

''It's not just a teddy bear,'' Rappaport said. ''It's the only memorial I have. That's why it hurts so much.''

Bonavina had given the bear to a friend, who gave it to Rappaport and asked her to add it to the memorial quilt. Suarez's teddy bear wore surgical scrubs and had been given to his father, a doctor, just before he died.

''I sewed the one on my father's panel,'' Suarez said. ''It didn't just come off. I used nylon fishing line. You could tell someone took scissors to it.''

The bears were found Saturday night and had been dumped into a box with papers that the hotel manager said would have been thrown out.

Scott Lago, head of display marketing for the national Names Project, said sections of the three-year-old quilt have been displayed around the world, including 257 times this year alone, and have never been vandalized.

Although the patchwork will be repaired, Suarez and Rappaport said the incident is indicative of insensitivity about AIDS.

''It was very difficult to explain how much this meant,'' Rappaport said. ''It's like, would someone walk up to the Vietnam War Memorial and start scratching names off?''

TAMPA, FL (SEPT. 18) UPI - A man convicted in California of raping a 15-year-old girl and hacking off her arms walked out of a county jail Tuesday after serving 48 days on a petty theft charge.

Lawrence Singleton, 62, initially pleaded innocent to the second- degree misdemeanor charge of petty theft, but changed his plea July 31, citing his past record and saying he didn't believe he could get a fair trial.

He was released at about 6 a.m. Tuesday - 12 days short of his maximum 60-day sentence.

Singleton was arrested by sheriff's deputies April 8 at a Brandon drugstore in rural Hillsborough County.

He was at the center of controversy in 1987 after serving eight years and four months of a 14-year sentence for raping the teenager and leaving her for dead along a roadside in central California in 1978.

A storm of protests followed his release from prison in San Quentin, Calif., as officials tried in vain to find a community where he could serve out his one-year parole.

He was finally housed within San Quentin for his protection, officials said.

Singleton was arrested in Brandon after a security guard at a Phar- Mor drugstore spotted him taking a Fuji Quicksnap camera from a display.

A Sheriff's Office report says Singleton removed the $9.98 camera from its package and headed for the store exit. He was stopped by the security guard before he could leave the store.

The guard held him for about 15 minutes until deputies arrived and arrested him. Singleton was given a court notice and released. He said nothing during the process, sheriff's records show.

A former merchant seaman and two-time divorcee, Singleton arrived in Tampa in May 1988. When he registered as a Florida citizen, he told authorities he was fully disabled and living on social security.

Shortly after his arrival in Tampa, someone tossed a homemade bomb on the front lawn of Singleton's brother's house, where he was staying. No one was injured, and there were no arrests.

Singleton had managed to maintain a low-key lifestyle until his April arrest, and shied away from reporters when he had to make appearances in court.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Federal National Mortgage Association announced Tuesday the retirement of chairman David Maxwell effective Jan. 31 and said he would be replaced by vice chairman James Johnson.

Roger Birk will continue as president of Fannie Mae, a congressionally chartered, shareholder-owned company, and the nation's largest investor in home mortgages.

''I have long believed that if, after 10 years as head of a large corporation, you have accomplished what you set out to do, you should make way for fresh leadership,'' said Maxwell, whose contract expires at the end of January.

''I will leave Fannie Mae with a deep sense of accomplishment,'' he said. ''I am proud that we have made homeownership more affordable for millions of Americans of modest means and that we have built one of the strongest financial institutions in America.''

Fannie Mae said it completed 10 consecutive quarters of record earnings at the end of the second quarter and has added $1.8 billion to capital and reserves for a total of more than $4 billion.

The government-sponsored enterprise also said that since Maxwell became chairman, it has channeled more than $450 billion in mortgage money from financial markets to more than 7 million families.

Johnson, the chairman designate, joined Fannie Mae in January as vice chairman from Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., where he was a managing director.

He also served as president of Public Strategies, a Washington consulting firm and worked as an executive assistant to former Vice President Walter Mondale.

''I am committed to fulfilling Fannie Mae's responsibility to meet both conventional and special housing needs and to maintaining and enhancing our financial strength,'' Johnson said.

Fannie Mae expects to finance 10 million homes in the 1990s.

SAN ANTONIO, TX (SEPT. 18) UPI - A U.S. Bankruptcy Court judge late Monday approved a proposal to sell Fairchild Aircraft Corp. for $66.5 million to a group made up mostly of former company executives.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Leif Clark decided following an eight-hour hearing that the best bidder was Fairchild Acquisition Corp., headed by Carl A. Albert, chairman of the Wings West regional airline, and several former Fairchild Aircraft executives.

The trustee for the financially ailing regional airplane maker had approved on Aug. 14 a preliminary plan for Fairchild Acquisition to purchase Fairchild Aircraft, but a special provision allowed negotiations to continue with other companies until Monday's confirmation hearing.

Fairchild Acquisition will begin operations Monday, assuming a $37 million debt to Chicago-based Sanwa Business Credit Corp., Fairchild Aircraft's chief lender.

Fairchild Acquisition will provide $5 million in cash to pay secured debts, priority claims such as employee paychecks and administrative expenses, using remaining funds to pay any unsecured creditors.

Fairchild Aircraft had filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection on Feb. 1, listing total assets of $92 million and total liabilities of $86.4 million.

The world's leading manufacturer of 19-seat regional airplanes now employs about 230 people after laying off more than 700 workers since last summer.

While Fairchild Aircraft trustee Bettina White said Fairchild Acquisition was the only prospective buyer with the money in place by Monday, other bidders had come forward, including Los Angeles-based Futuristic Acquisition Inc. and Columbus, Ohio-based Snow Aviation International Inc.

Representatives of Israel Aircraft Industries Limited and Quadrant Management Inc. of New York were on hand at Monday's hearing. The two groups had proposed a joint venture, but Sanwa reportedly turned down their financing proposal.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 18) UPI - Viktor Ambartsumyan, the father of Soviet astronomy and president of the Armenian Academy of Sciences, spent his 82nd birthday on a hunger strike ''to let the world know'' about the situation in Nagorno-Karabakh.

Decrying what he described as Azerbaijan's denial of rights to the Armenian inhabitants of the Nagorno-Karabakh enclave, Ambartsumyan said: ''I want to make a huge resonance in the world - to let the world know.''

Ambartsumyan, an honorary or corresponding member of the academies of sciences of at least 10 countries, spent the fifth day of his political protest fast in the Moskva Hotel within the sight of the Kremlin.

A vase of pink roses to mark Ambartsumyan's birthday stood on a table next to the bed on which the world renowned scientist rested under a blue blanket and recounted details of his life and his battle for the Armenians of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Ambartsumyan recalled that dictator Josef Stalin gave Nagorno- Karabakh with its Christian Armenian majority to Moslem Azerbaijan in 1923 to curry favor with Turkey - the starting point he said for the present Armenian dispute with the Azerbaijanis.

Ambartsumyan, in the fifth day of his hunger strike, was in the same hotel room with another Armenian political faster Zori Balayan, 55, a people's deputy and writer for the prestigious Literaturnaya Gazeta newspaper.

Ambartsumyan and Balayan said the Soviet authorities had inflamed the atmosphere 21 months ago when the local regional council that ruled Nagorno-Karabakh was disbanded depriving the Armenians of their representatives.

The two protesters, who said they eventually want Nagorno-Karabakh ''reunited'' with Armenia, said the goal of their current fast was to press for the immediate restoration of the legal authority in Nagorno- Karabakh.

''This is a modest step,'' Ambartsumyan said.

Ambartsumyan, an astrophysicist and one of the first renowned scientists of the Soviet Union, is known for his work on the how planets reflect light and for devising a method for estimating the age of stellar clusters.

Ambartsumyan said he would continue his hunger strike for about two more days, noting his age and that he was on vacation in Moscow when he decided to stop eating and sip only distilled water.

Ambartsumyan's son, Ruben, 50, a mathematician and member of the Armenian Academy of Sciences also, watched over his father on his 82nd birthday.

''I remember the the beginning of the century and now the 20th century is ending,'' the famed scientist reflected.

MIAMI (SEPT. 18) UPI - Pan American World Airways is poised to cut up to 10 percent of its work force, or about 2,800 workers nationwide, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

Airline officials in New York declined to comment on the report but Bill Genoese, director of the airline division of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents about 6,500 Pan Am employees, said the cuts were triggered by soaring fuel prices.

''Pan Am has plans to cut up to 10 percent due to the fuel crisis. The cuts will be across the board,'' Genoese told The Miami Herald.

''Right now, I have no comment other than to say we are studying work force levels,'' Pan Am spokeswoman Susan Timper said Tuesday.

Pan Am could announce the cuts as early as Wednesday, when company Chairman Thomas Plaskett is scheduled to address analysts in New York, the Herald said.

The airline employs about 28,000 workers nationwide, including about 7,000 in Miami. The newspaper said south Florida workers may be spared, however, because of Pan Am's continued emphasis on its hub operation in Miami.

The price of jet fuel has soared in the wake of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2. Major U.S. carriers hiked ticket prices by 5.3 percent on Aug. 30 in an effort to recoup some of that additional cost.

Several airlines, including Delta Air Lines, Eastern Airlines, American Airlines and USAir, announced plans last week to raise prices by an additional 4.2 percent on Oct. 1.

Pan Am annnounced plans to raise its fares by 4.4 percent.

Airline officials have said the fare hikes will not cover the additional cost of jet fuel, however.

A spokesman for Delta in Atlanta said jet fuel prices at his airline have risen by 33.5 cents a gallon since the crisis began, boosting the airline's fuel bill by about $670 million annually.

Pan Am would be the second major carrier to announce such layoffs.

Last month, USAir announced plans to cut 7 percent of its workforce, or about 3,600 workers.

BEIJING (SEPT. 18) UPI - Kuwaiti athletes defied Iraqi demands they compete at the Asian Games under Baghdad's banner and instead hoisted their own national flag Tuesday, officially entering 43 athletes as a team devastated by the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

The 43 Kuwaitis, remnants of a delegation that originally numbered about 330, were believed to have been training in Europe when the invasion occurred.

''With so many friends gathering in the big sports family, this fact shows in itself that the people of Asia love peace,'' said Sheikh Ahmad Fahad al Sabah, the new president of the Kuwait National Olympic Committee.

''We believe that in the near future, we can entertain our Chinese friends in the state of Kuwait,'' said Sabah, who succeeded his father, Fahad al Ahmad al Sabah, after he was slain during the assault by Iraqi troops into Kuwait.

The Kuwaiti delegation hoisted their flag and registered to participate despite Iraqi demands they compete under the Iraqi flag when the Games open Saturday.

The 38 members of the Olympic Council of Asia have scheduled a vote on Thursday in Beijing on a proposal to bar Iraq from the Games. The OCA executive committee has recommended ouster, and China has indicated it will abide by the full council's vote.

The Kuwaiti act of defiance came as Mars Inc. said it has no immediate plans to change its distribution of M&M candies at the games despite a threat that a package of the candies was poisoned in Hong Kong as an anti-Games protest, a spokeswoman said.

The threat, reported by a Chinese-language newspaper in Hong Kong, was the first such incident reported related to the Games, the first major international sports event hosted by China.

Stores in Hong Kong began pulling M&Ms from their shelves Tuesday after the newspaper reported receiving an unsigned letter claiming an anonymous group had poisoned a single package of the candies in Hong Kong with sodium cyanide.

The American candy maker Mars Inc. is a major sponsor of the Asian Games and plans to sell and give out large quantities of M&Ms in Beijing during the two-week event.

Jane Brook, a Mars spokeswoman in Beijing, noted the threat did not pertain to local supplies. She said the company had no immediate plans to change its distribution or withdraw any of its candies, but was still working on its response.

''What we're thinking of first is the safety of Hong Kong consumers,'' Brook said. ''The letter said a single packet on the shelf in Hong Kong had been opened, so it doesn't affect any products here and doesn't look like it will affect (Beijing) operations at all.''

The anonymous letter was first believed to be a hoax, but the Hong Kong distributor later urged consumers to inspect packages.

The letter criticized the Chinese government for the suppression of the pro-democracy movement in June 1989 and charged the Games were being ''used shamelessly by the authorities to promote a state of tranquility and show the butchers are firmly in power.''

''M&M chocolates, which called itself the official sponsor of the Games, is guilty of supporting the illegal regime,'' it said.

Mars, which has pledged $2 million to the Games, has blanketed Beijing and the Asian Games sites with promotional posters, candy kiosks and logos.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Several groups favoring abortion rights urged the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday to reject David Souter's nomination to the Supreme Court, saying he could be the deciding vote toward overturning a landmark abortion ruling.

Souter spent his 51st birthday Monday in a third session before the panel - a grueling 9 1/2-hour session side-stepping more abortion questions and defending his views about court activism on social issues.

On Tuesday, several groups favoring abortion rights urged the panel to reject the nomination of the federal appeals court judge, saying Souter likely will cast the deciding vote toward overturning the 1973 landmark Roe vs. Wade ruling that guaranteed a woman's right to an abortion. Meanwhile, supporters defended the nominee, saying it is useless to speculate on how Souter would rule on such issues because the jurist, as the head of the New Hampshire Bar Association said, ''simply does not prejudge cases.''

''Nothing in Judge Souter's record or testimony has convinced us that he recognizes a fundamental right to privacy, including the right to choose (abortion),'' Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, testified.

''After listening to the testimony, we remain intensely concerned that, if confirmed, Judge Souter would destroy 17 years of precedent and cast the deciding vote to overrule Roe vs. Wade,'' Michelman added.

The high court has chipped away at Roe vs. Wade in recent years and is likely to consider a full challenge to the case. The court is seen as one vote away from reversing the decision.

Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, told the committee that Souter's testimony should raise concern not only that Souter would cast the deciding vote in an abortion challenge, but a Supreme Court that includes Souter also could reverse earlier privacy rulings establishing a right to use birth control devices.

''I tremble for this country if you confirm David Souter,'' Yard said.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., who was considered a potential swing vote entering the hearings, on Monday told Souter, ''I believe you will be confirmed.'' Several Republican committee members also have expressed confidence the nominee will be endorsed by the committee. No committee member has publicly announced an intention to vote against Souter.

Souter, nominated by President Bush to replace retired liberal Justice William Brennan, again refused Monday to answer questions relating to his personal views on abortion, having said such an answer would be inappropriate because of the likelihood he would have to rule on an abortion challenge if he is confirmed.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., asked Souter what would be the practical effect if the Supreme Court overturned Roe vs. Wade.

''The issue would become a legislative judgment in every state,'' Souter said. ''I think that it's safe to say that those legislative judgments would not be uniform. There would be, I'd dare say, a considerable variety in scope of protection afforded or not afforded (for abortion).''

Souter also said a successful challenge to Roe vs. Wade would call into question several earlier Supreme Court rulings, such as a marital privacy case involving the right to use contraception that served as the underpinning of the abortion decision.

''Whatever the court does,'' Souter said later, ''someone's life, indeed thousands of lives, will be affected and that fact must be appreciated.''

Some members of the panel have said they believe Souter will be confirmed, but chairman Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., cautioned, ''Some of us still haven't made up our minds'' and said he had ''gone from leaning against voting for to leaning for voting for you to leaning against voting for you.''

Souter, the quiet jurist who remained unflappable throughout his three days before the committee, wrapped up his appearance by thanking Biden for his ''consummate fairness.'' Smiling broadly, after concluding his testimony, he shook hands with Biden and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D- Mass., who had posed the toughest questions to the nominee.

TOKYO (SEPT. 18) UPI - Japan officially dropped the phrase ''Soviet threat'' from its vocabulary Tuesday with the release of a Defense White Paper that concludes Soviet aggression in Asia is unlikely.

Japan, a latecomer to detente, continued to refer to the Soviets as a threat throughout the 1980s.

But the 1990 Defense White Paper concluded that, ''Considering the recent Soviet domestic situation and international environment, the Soviet Union would have difficulty pursuing an aggressive action against other nations.''

A year earlier, the white paper insisted there was no change in the Soviet Union's military power in the Far East. Based on that analysis, Japan decided to increase defense spending for fiscal 1990 by 6.1 percent.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, not wanting to seem too far out of step with other major democracies, pressured the Defense Agency to drop the phrase ''Soviet threat'' in this year's white paper, news reports said.

Kaifu is preparing to welcome Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to Japan in April 1990, and both sides are looking for ways to improve relations before the visit, the first ever by a Soviet leader.

Tokyo and Moscow have been at odds since the end of World War II over the ownership of a chain of desolate islands north of Japan that are occupied by the Soviets but claimed by Japan.

The Defense Agency reportedly wanted to continue using the phrase ''Soviet threat,'' in part because it hopes to avoid major budget cuts. This year Japan will write a new five-year defense plan to begin in fiscal 1991, and many politicians are pushing for reductions.

Defense Agency officials, commenting on the white paper, said their basic evaluation of Soviet strength has not changed, but they expect the Soviet threat to diminish.

''The agency decided to eliminate the phrase in question out of an expectation that the Soviet Union will most likely reduce its military force in the Far East,'' said Defense Minister Yozo Ishikawa.

The paper details cuts in Soviet forces in the Far East, saying 30, 000 troops 15 warships and 190 airplanes have been withdrawn from the region.

But it cautions the Soviets are improving the quality of their forces while reducing the quantity.

The report also warns the situation in Asia is ''fluid and uncertain, '' and points to the civil war in Cambodia, tension in Korea and the Soviet-Japanese conflict over islands as possible hot spots.

BOSTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - A Boston Herald pressman shot and critically wounded by a masked gunman Monday night shortly after he arrived for work died Tuesday morning, authorities said.

The victim, Joseph Gauthier, 30, of the Charlestown section, died at Boston City Hospital where he had undergone emergency surgery for multiple gunshot wounds, the hospital said.

The shooting took place in a lockerroom in the newspaper's press area shortly after 10 p.m., a Herald spokesman said.

Witnesses told police a masked man walked up and down between the rows of lockers, nodding to other pressmen in the room at the time. Then a number of shots rang out, and Gauthier ran from the building shouting, ''I've been shot.''

The gunman, wearing a Halloween-type mask, fled the building and escaped, he said. How he escaped from the building was not immediately known, police said.

The wrinkled rubber mask made the gunman look like an old man, witnesses said.

''I saw this guy walk in and thought to myself that he looked kind of sickly '' said one Herald employee.

Police said witnesses described the assailant as about 6-foot-4, 250 pounds and wearing a black and white lumber jacket in addition to the mask.

The Herald has security personnel at the parking lot and front door, but there are several other ways of getting into the building.

Gauthier had just arrived for work and was getting ready for his shift when the gunman entered the lockerroom and began firing, the Herald spokesman said.

He said the pressman was struck at least twice, in the arm and chest.

The Herald said the victim was a former Marine who served in Lebanon and Grenada. He had worked as a guard at the Charles Street Jail in Boston before coming to the Herald about 18 months ago.

There was no known motive for the shooting, he said.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - Allied naval forces working in the Persian Gulf area will now co- ordinate their activities to avoid duplication as they enforce the U-N shipping embargo against Iraq. The agreement breaks the search areas down to geographical reference points and should increase the embargo's effectiveness. The French Navy announced the agreement on spheres of responsibility for the United States, Australia, France, Britain, the Netherlands and Italy. .

At the same time, the flow of refugees trying to get out of Kuwait has slowed as Saudi Arabia carefully checks identity papers. There are reports of occupying Iraqi forces detaining young Kuwaiti men on the other side of the border. Saudi authorities want to block the possibility of terrorists infiltrating the kingdom on stolen identification papers.

Several groups favoring abortion rights urged the Senate Judiciary Committee today to reject David Souter's nomination to the Supreme Court. The groups said Souter could be the deciding vote toward overturning a landmark abortion ruling. But supporters defended Souter, saying it's useless to speculate on how he would rule on such issues because he does NOT pre-judge cases.

A court appearance could come as early as next week as South Africa pushes ahead with a possible trial for Winnie Mandela, wife of black leader Nelson Mandela. She faces charges in the 1988 kidnapping-murder of a 14-year-old boy, a crime that has led to a death sentence for her chief bodyguard.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 18) UPI - Trading was choppy and grain and soybean futures were mixed at midmorning Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans rallied early on reports of a slight deterioration in the condition of the crop during the past week. A pick-up in export business and the forecast for cooler weather provided additional support, but the early gains were eroded by profit-taking and liquidation.

Soybean oil and meal prices were virtually unchanged.

Corn futures were narrowly mixed and the volume was light as traders were on both sides of the market. The weekly crop survey indicated little change in the condition of the corn crop last week.

Wheat prices turned lower on the lack of export business and adequate supplies around the world.

Country movement was very light and basis levels were mixed.

Overnight rainfall amounts in the Grain Belt ranged from a trace to just over an inch in eastern North Dakota and 1.36 inches at Russell, Kan.

The midmorning prices:

Corn Sep 2.36 1/2 up 3/4; Dec 2.25 1/2 unch; Mar 2.35 1/2 up 1/4.

DAYTON, Ohio (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Standard Register Co. said Tuesday it will be forced to lay off workers and close plants because of poor operating results in July and August.

The manufacturer of business forms had no word on the plant locations or the size of the layoffs, but said details would be released soon. Douglas Lunne, company spokesman, said an announcement will probably be made within 60 days.

The company said a weakening economy and a Sept. 1 increase in paper prices would hurt profits in the quarter ending Sept. 30. As a result, Standard Register is beginning a major cost reduction program, Lunne said.

Along with the layoffs, Standard Register will close several production facilities in an effort to cut costs in the next six months, said John Darragh president and chief executive officer.

Darragh said savings from the cutbacks will begin showing up in the fourth quarter.

Standard Register has 37 major production facilities in about 23 states. There was no word on whether some of the layoffs could occur at the company's Dayton headquarters or a local printing plant.

The cutbacks are necessary because the company doesn't foresee an early end to the decreased demand for business forms, and because of price competition, Darragh said.

Standard Register's third-quarter earnings per share will be below the 25 cents recorded in the same quarter a year ago, and net income for 1990 will fall below the $1.35 a share in 1989, the company said.

Standard Register reported record earnings in the first quarter this year of $9.5 million, or 32 cents a share. In the second quarter, earnings were $8.7 million, or 30 cents a share - a drop of 7 percent from the same period in 1989.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Budget negotiators, deadlocked Tuesday over Republican insistence on cutting capital gains taxes without a corresponding tax increase on the rich, hoped congressional and administration leaders could find a way out of the impasse.

The five top congressional leaders are scheduled to meet Tuesday afternoon with three top Bush administration officials to try and resolve the issue.

That Capitol Hill leadership meeting was set up after the larger group of 17 negotiators, meeting at the officers' club at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, concluded late Monday they could not break the deadlock on capital gains and that further talks were pointless.

''Capital gains is the primary barrier towards getting an agreement,'' House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., a negotiator, told reporters Tuesday. ''With no give on capital gains, we simply can't pull an agreement together.''

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., sharply criticized President Bush and Republican negotiators for continuing to press for a capital gains tax cut, which he said benefits the wealthy, without agreeing to an offsetting increase in taxes on the rich.

''The administration wants to hand them (the rich) a major tax reduction ... and I think that is unjustifiable," Foley said. "I do not think it is possible to defend, to justify, any reduction in capital gains standing alone.''

"We really have a serious problem - there's no question about it," Foley said.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine told reporters that ''while some specifics remain, those could be resolved quickly if we can resolve the tax issue. The main obstacle is the tax issue.''

Talking to reporters aboard Air Force One before leaving on a two-day political trip, Bush said, ''I can't really predict what's going to happen'' at the talks.

''I think everybody ... agrees we've come a long ways but it's not done by a long shot,'' Bush said.

Bush, the chief proponent of cutting capital gains taxes on profits from the sale of assets, said the cut was not a stumbling block to agreement ''as far as I'm concerned.''

In a statement released Monday night after talks broke off, Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said, ''It's not quite an impasse but it's pretty close to one.''

''It's going to be tough, but it's still not impossible and no one is giving up,'' Dole said. ''The problem is we're running out of time. It's going to take a miracle finish by Congress to get the job done.''

Negotiators at the bipartisan budget talks - which began May 15 and moved to Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Washington Sept. 7 - are trying to craft a package of tax increases and spending cuts to slash the federal budget deficit by $50 billion in fiscal year 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and by $500 billion over five years.

Negotiators are facing an Oct. 1 deadline for a deal. Without one, $105.7 billion in automatic, across-the-board spending cuts, split between defense and domestic programs, will be triggered.

Those cuts are the punishment imposed for failing to meet deficit targets of the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law. The target for fiscal 1991 is $64 billion and the projected deficit is $168.8 billion.

''We have gotten down to the very end point,'' a Democratic source said late Monday. ''We (Democrats) have come as far as we can come, and they have come as far as they can come. ... It all depends on exactly how intransigent they are on capital gains. I think we have made every concession we can.''

The source said both sides put new offers on the table Monday and that ''the Democratic package has moved substantially toward what the Republicans are demanding.''

However, the Democratic source said of the GOP proposal: ''Their final offer is very similar to what their first offer was,'' except on defense spending, where Republicans have agreed to cut about $9.9 billion in 1991 and $170 billion over five years.

Democrats, the source said, have proposed a $10 billion Pentagon spending cut next year and at least $178 billion over five years.

GENEVA (SEPT. 18) UPI - U.S. trade representative Carla Hills said Tuesday she believes there can still be a ''good'' agreement by the scheduled conclusion in December of the Uruguay Round of global trade liberalization negotiations.

The talks began in 1986 but are snarled 10 weeks before the scheduled end, mainly because of a U.S.-European Community dispute over agriculture and differences over service sectors such as banking and insurance.

Trade ministers from the 97 Uruguay Round participating nations are supposed to adopt a final package at a Dec. 4-7 conference in Brussels, Belgium.

Hills said after three days on assessment talks in Geneva that she was ''somewhat concerned.''

''We have only 45 working days left.....but a long way to go,'' she said. ''But I remain an optimist and believe we will conclude in December with a good agreement.''

Hills, the chief U.S. trade negotiator, was scheduled to accompanied by a U.S. business and labor delegation Tuesday evening night as she flew to Brussels for talks with EC representatives on major remaining issues.

Hills said she would also seek resolution of the sideline dispute over the Airbus jetliner which the U.S. maintains is subsidized against rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The United States is ''not satisfied'' with EC offers so far, she said. Talks will proceed, but the issue may be resolved as the U.S. is scheduled to ask Sept. 30 for a special GATT trade dispute panel to rule on the complaint.

U.S.-EC differences also have jeopardized the Uruguay Round objective of first-time inclusion of farm products in a trade liberalization agreement.

Hills said the EC so far has come ''nowhere near'' matching the U.S. proposal for a 70 percent cut in domestic farm supports, and an even steeper cut in export subsidies like those provided European farmers.

''I do not see any possibility of extending the Round,'' she said when asked about private remarks by delegates that any significant package is impossible in the little time remaining.

Hill said the U.S. government is ''politically committed'' to a December conclusion.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (SEPT. 18) UPI - African National Congress leaders met in urgent session Tuesday to plan their response to tough security measures implemented by the government to quell black internecine strife.

ANC spokesman Saki Macozoma said there was ''quite a significant chance'' the policy-making National Executive Committee would suspend peace talks with Pretoria in retaliation for the security measures but ANC leader Nelson Mandela said Monday negotiations may continue.

Mandela told reporters in the Cape Province during a visit Monday the 34-member ANC executive committee would meet over two days to discuss the government's ''intolerable'' response to the violence in black townships surrounding Johannesburg.

''If we find there is no will on the part of the government to take emphatic steps to stop this violence, then we will have to take a decision that will reverse almost everything that was done since May this year,'' Mandela said.

But he added it was unlikely the talks would be called off ''because we initiated them... We must hold our ground. But all this is subject to the government carrying out its duties.''

Relations between the ANC and the government also received a blow Tuesday from the announcement that prosecutors would try Mandela's wife Winnie Mandela on charges of kidnapping and assault in connection with the 1988 abduction and murder of a 14-year-old boy by her chief bodyguard.

Seven weeks ago, before the outbreak of the conflict which has killed as many as 750 people, the ANC and the government were moving steadily towards power-sharing negotiations on ending apartheid.

Mandela told President Frederik de Klerk Friday the ANC executive committee would be discussing demands from township residents that they be armed to protect themselves from further attack if the government failed to take adequate security measures.

On Saturday, police announced operation ''Iron Fist'' - a sweeping strategy to curb the township conflict with roadblocks, heavily armed patrols, and barbed-wire barricades. Mandela immediately condemned the measures as excessive, ''a licence to kill'' township residents.

The ''Iron Fist'' measures have apparently calmed the townships and restored a tense peace after the savage, tribal-style battles between mainly Xhosa supporters of the ANC and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha.

But the ANC noted the security force action does not address the cause of the strife, which the movement claims is a shadowy ''third force'' manipulating clashes between migrant-worker Zulus supporting Inkatha and the predominantly Xhosa township dwellers.

De Klerk has conceded there may be a hidden force, but insists the original cause is tribal conflict. He also has said the talks process may be threatened if the parties lose trust in each other.

De Klerk legalized the ANC in February as part of his sweeping racial reforms, and on May 2-4 held the first round of talks with the movement aimed at clearing the way to substantive negotiations on ending apartheid.

ANC and Cabinet teams met for the second time Aug. 5, and after more than 12 hours of discussion apparently opened the way to full-blown negotiations after the ANC announced a suspension of its 29-year guerrilla war.

DETROIT (SEPT. 18) UPI - The United Auto Workers union achieved its priority goals of protecting workers' jobs and incomes against sales-related layoffs in the tentative agreement with General Motors Corp., UAW officials said Tuesday.

The union also said it won improvements to restrict outsourcing and managed to protect pensions against inflation.

Members of the union's GM Council met Tuesday morning to hear details of the agreement reached early Monday and they were expected to approve the settlement.

After that, the agreement goes before GM's 310,000 hourly workers. A ratification vote is expected by Sept. 30 or shortly thereafter.

If the contract is ratified by the rank-and-file at GM plants, the UAW then will try to fit the agreement to workers at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

Highlights of the tentative agreement include a 3 percent general wage increase in the first year and 3 percent lump-sum payments in the second and third years, with cost-of-living formulas maintained.

GM workers also will receive $600 Christmas bonuses in 1991 and 1992. Under a new job security program, layoffs for any reason are limited to 36 weeks while GM must still hire one worker for every two who quit, retire or die.

GM has earmarked more than $4.2 billion for an unprecedented income security program. Health care benefits have been improved with the UAW resisting any efforts by GM to have workers share in health care premiums.

There also were major gains in health and safety, a new child care pilot program and a revised attendance program. The union said it also won an enriched profit-sharing formula.

At the same time, workers at four plants ''idled'' by GM under the 1987 agreement are eligible for substantial benefits. They also would receive an additional 12 weeks of full supplemental unemployment and preferred hiring rights at other GM locations.

Those plants are the Fiero plant in Pontiac, Mich.,; the Leeds plant in Kansas City, Mo.; and plants in Framingham, Mass., and Lakewood, Ga. The estimated costs of the extra payments to workers at these plants is $340 million over the life of the new agreement.

A summary of the contract indicates that the ban on plant closings in the 1987-90 agreement has been lifted, which may allow GM to close additional plants if they are under-used. The four GM plants currently on indefinitely idled status apparently will be permanently closed.

''It appears as if this gives GM the opportunity to close those plants, but the ban in 1987 didn't work anyway,'' said Frank Hammer, of UAW Local 909 at GM's Hydramatic plant in Warren, Mich., and chairman of the bargaining committee.

Hammer said the initial readings of the contract shows that GM may have just ''expanded all the safety nets,'' which simply makes it more costly for GM to pay unemployment benefits to laid-off workers.

''But the real issue is can you stop plant closings,'' Hammer said.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - The timetable for a meeting on the budget impasse has been pushed back two hours in Washington. Five top congressional leaders are plannning to meet with three top Bush administration officials in an effort to get something that works. Fiscal year 1991 starts on October 1st, and mandatory cutbacks will be automatically set in place unless a voluntary accord is reached.

News reports say a state grand jury in Los Angeles has issued sealed indictments against Phoenix developer Charles Keating Junior and three others in the one of the nation's costliest thrift failures. The indictments would be the first criminal charges brought in connection with Lincoln Saving and Loan. The collapse 17 months ago is expected to cost taxpayers more than two-BILLION dollars.

Gasoline, fuel oil and overall energy price hikes in August were the biggest since January. The government says the surge last month led to a sharp eight-tenths of one percent leap in consumer prices- double the July rate of inflation. The Labor Department says the increase in petroleum-based energy prices resulting from the Persian Gulf crisis accounted for more than two-fifths of the overall increase in the Consumer Price Index.

An economist says foreign trade had been expected to be the cushion for the United States in a recession, with exports holding up and non- oil imports declining. But, Allen Sinai of the Boston Company says the July figures show just the opposite. The Commerce Department says America's trade deficit soared an alarming 75 percent, to nine-BILLION 330-Million dollars in July... the worst showing since January.

LONDON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Stock prices closed sharply lower in moderate trading Tuesday on the London International Stock Exchange amid growing worries over surging oil prices.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which slipped 0.5 points Monday fell 30.3 points to 2,064.0. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 29.3 points to 1,576.8.

Volume amounted to around 379 million shares compared with only 287 million shares changing hands Monday.

Analysts said the increasing price of crude oil on global markets sent prices lower amid worries over the impact higher fuel costs would have on inflation.

The market downturn reflected fears of dreaded stagflation, the combination of inflation and recession, stalking the British economy, analysts added.

Market worries are based on U.S. trade deficit figures for August, showing a jump to $9.3 billion in July, along with the highest crude oil prices since 1982.

Brent crude for November delivery surged to $33.70 a barrel in London, its highest level since November, 1982, although prices reached $35 a barrel that same year.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Kingfisher proved an exception to the rule. The retailing conglomerate, benefiting from favorable interim profit returns, gained 30 cents to $5.83.

British Aerospace continued to fall, dropping 18 cents to $9.77 despite the company denying rumors that it stood to lose out on expected contracts to furnish Saudi Arabia with advanced Tornado jet fighters.

In a strong oil patch, oil companies continued to benefit from surging oil prices. British Petroleum gained 7 cents to $6.64, Shell added 4 cents to $8.80 and Enterprise Oil gained 20 cents to $11.86.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange fell sharply in light trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 12.92 points Monday, lost 33.88 points to 1,507.27.

Analysts said stock prices responded to the escalation in world oil prices.

ORLANDO, Fla. (SEPT. 18) UPI - The average price of a gallon of regular gasoline nationwide ebbed slightly in the past week, dropping two-tenths of one cent to $1.292, the American Automobile Association said Tuesday.

Nevertheless, U.S. consumers are still paying an average 21.7 cents a gallon more for self-service regular gasoline today than on Aug. 1, the day before Iraq invaded Kuwait and triggered the worldwide run-up in oil, the AAA said.

The AAA said gasoline prices dipped slightly over the past week in the Midwest Southeast and West. Prices in New England and the Mid- Atlantic and Great Lakes regions rose slightly, the AAA said. Prices in the Southwest were unchanged.

The average price of mid-grade gasoline nationwide stood at $1.365 a gallon this week, while the cost of premium gasoline was $1.461, the association said.

Gasoline supplies remain adequate throughout the nation, the AAA said.

WARSAW, POLAND (SEPT. 18) UPI - Poland's Roman Catholic primate Tuesday invited political leaders to a meeting to resolve calls for sweeping economic and political reform that have split Prime Minister Tadesz Mazowiecki and Solidarity founder Lech Walesa.

The meeting at the residence of Cardinal Jozef Glemp came a day after Walesa officially announced his decision to run for president.

Glemp hosted a lunch for Walesa, Mazowiecki, communist President Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Senate chairman Andrzej Stelmachowski and Mikolaj Kozakiewicz, chairman of the lower house of Parliament or Sejm.

''I expect talks to be frank,'' said Mazowiecki.

Walesa got an enthusiatic welcome by several dozen people when his car drove into Glemp's residence. The crowd whistled when Jaruzelski arrived.

Walesa told the reporters he would not urge Jaruzelski to step down but said ''The situation is different now (than last year) and we have to update it.''

The church-sponsored meeting was dubbed a mini round-table - a reference to an historic dialogue between communists and Solidarity held last year which produced the accord that allowed Solidarity to participate in parliamentary elections.

The union swept the elections, formed a governemnt with Mazowiecki as premier and struck a deal with the weakened Communist Party to let Jaruzelski remain as president.

A source close to the church said Tuesday's meeting would focus on whether presidential elections set for next year should be moved forward to this fall ahead of parliamentary elections.

Walesa has been pushing for early presidential elections, while Mazowiecki favors keeping the election as scheduled.

Mazowiecki's political standing has been weakened by a year of economic austerity measures which has impoverished workers while various communist officials were allowed to run high profit businesses.

Aleksander Jedraszczyk, Poland's leading economist and the expert of the Union of Real Policy, the party which advocates quick reinstallment of capitalism in Poland, handed a gloomy report to Glemp before the meeting on the economic performence of Mazowiecki's government.

The report said hyperinflation was stopped but inflation has run at an annual rate of 200 percent since January.

''Wages dropped by 40 percent and decrease of the income of farmers was even bigger,'' it said.''The living standards lowered by 30 percent.''

It said about 1 million people were jobless and a national income is smaller by 20 percent as compared to the last year.

The report strongly criticized slowing Polish exports to the Soviet Union and predicted a disaster if it continues.

''The slowing down of exports resulted in the reduction of the deliveries of Soviet gas and oil to Poland,'' it said.

''The review of the economic statistics shows that we are facing a case of one of the biggest economic collapses in the contemporary history,'' said Jedraszczyk.

Walesa has criticzed Mazowiecki for dragging his feet on political reforms and eradicating the remnants of communism.

He has also frequently lashed at Jaruzelski for being inefficient as president. Jaruzelski earlier said he would resign if the Parliament requested him to do so.

Following the two-hour lunch Tuesday about 18 represenatives of major political parties such as Democratic, Peasent or Christrian Democratic parties joined the meeting at Glemp's residence.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - The state of Massachussetts and activists asked a federal appeals court Tuesday to rule the Nuclear Regulatory Commission violated its own regulations when it licensed the Seabrook nuclear power plant to begin operations.

Opponents contend the New Hampshire plant, located on the Massachussetts border, was granted a full-power license in March despite inadequate evacuation plans, especially during the summer when beaches within 2 miles of the plant often are packed with vacationers.

The NRC's evacuation plans are supposed to ensure all people living within 10 miles of a plant can escape to safety in the event of a nuclear accident releasing radiation.

But attorneys for the NRC and the plant operator argued during the hour-long hearing Tuesday before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia that there are no regulations that can be cited, which would have legally barred licensing.

In its brief to the court, opponents contend Seabrook was licensed ''on the basis of an emergency response plan when there was no showing that the plan, if implemented, would provide any meaningful public protection whatsoever.''

Massachussetts Assistant Attorney General John Traficonte said the NRC's own 1980 emergency planning regulations and congressional intent, while vague, require ''adequate protective measures'' before licensing a nuclear power plant, a standard he claimed was never met.

The NRC approved ''an eviscerated application of its own safeguards,'' said Traficonte.

But NRC attorney John Cordes said adequate and reasonable protection has been safeguarded around Seabrook and said evacuation time is ''not out of line'' with other nuclear power plants across the country, despite contentions that evacuation on a crowded summer day could take up to 8 1/2 hours.

Critics charge local roads are incapable of handling the crush of traffic that would result in an emergency situation.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency initially agreed with the critics, but under pressure from the NRC eventually reversed its position. Subsequently, an NRC licensing board also found evacuation plans flawed, but the full agency overruled its board.

A decision by the three-member appeals panel is not expected for about two months.

Tom Dignan, a spokesman for New Hampshire Yankee, operator of Seabrook, said the plant is ''very, very unlikely'' to suffer an accident causing a significant radioactive release with less than 20 hours public notice.

''It's impossible to protect the public absolutely,'' in fast- breaking accidents at Seabrook or any nuclear power plant, acknowledged Cordes.

Dignan called that a risk society has accepted in return for nuclear power.

Seabrook first produced electricity for the New England power grid on May 29 during tests.

The $6.6 billion plant has been in permanent full-power operation since August. At full power, Seabrook produces 1,150 megawatts of power, enough to supply 1 million homes.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - Defiant Kuwaiti athletes hoisted their national flag at the Asian Games in Beijing Tuesday despite Baghdad's orders to compete as Iraqis, while the reported resignation of a senior aide to Saddam Hussein sparked speculation of a split within the Iraqi leadership over the Persian Gulf crisis.

Cairo Radio reported Iraqi troops with tanks had set up new camps near a number of foreign diplomatic premises in Iraq-occupied Kuwait, including the U.S. Embassy, which is among a handful of countries refusing to shut down its diplomatic representation.

In another show of Western unity, the French Navy announced the United States, Australia, France, Britain, the Netherlands and Italy have agreed to divide the Persian Gulf region into separate areas of patrol to better enforce the U.N. trade embargo against Iraq.

An Iraqi newspaper reported Tuesday that senior Iraqi Revolution Command Council member Saadoun Shaker, 51, a childhood friend of Saddam Hussein and a former interior minister, resigned his post ''for health reasons at his own request.''

The government-run daily Al Waqaie al Iraqia (Iraqi facts) gave no other details, but one Western diplomat said he was forced out for opposing the Iraqi leader's policy on Kuwait. The resignation was the first from the ranks of Saddam's senior aides since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

It also came a day after Defense Secretary Dick Cheney fired Air Force Chief of Staff Michael Dugan for "poor judgment" in publicly discussing U.S. bombing plans. Dugan said in an interview the plans specifically targetted Saddam.

In Cairo, an Egyptian Foreign Ministry source familiar with Iraqi politics said there were also divisions over policy toward Kuwait among Saddam's other key aides including Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, son-in-law Hussein Kamel and Taha Yassin Ramadan, deputy premier and head of the powerful militia of the ruling Baathist Party and Izzat Ibrahim, the council's deputy chairman.

Saudi officials said an estimated 8,000 Kuwaitis fled across the border since Iraq opened the crossing on Saturday, while sobbing women crossing the border said Iraqis were forbidding Kuwaiti men between 17 and 45 from leaving.

In a memorandum quoted by the official Saudi Press Agency, Kuwait's exiled government complained to the Arab League that Iraqi authorities decided a week ago to tighten their grip on Kuwaitis ''through inhuman ill-treatment and more repressive measures,'' with the aim of driving them from their homeland.

The Kuwaiti memorandum said Iraqis arrested a large number of Kuwaitis for refusing to cooperate with them, subjecting them to torture and ''all sorts of humiliation." It said Iraq had also carried out "barbaric" public executions.

It cited the example of a man who was shot dead for refusing to switch a portrait of the toppled Kuwaiti emir in his shop with a picture of Saddam.

In addition, the memorandum said all those leaving Kuwait were being asked to surrender all their official documents.

''This seems to be aimed at obliterating the Kuwaiti identity and resettling Iraqi families or families of pro-Iraqi nationalities in the Kuwaiti homes,'' it said.

The exodus of Kuwaitis slowed as Saudi officials made painstaking identity checks to screen out Iraqi infiltrators.

The French Navy said agreement among Western nations to divide into spheres of influence the Gulf of Oman, the Strait of Hormuz and the western Gulf waters was hammered out at a meeting of officers from the four West European countries aboard the French frigate Dupleix in the Strait of Hormuz Friday.

A separate meeting of U.S. and Australian naval commanders reserved other sectors of the region for their vessels, the statement said.

The announcement precedes a meeting later Tuesday of foreign and defense ministers of the nine-member Western European Union in Paris to discuss further coordination of European defense forces in the gulf region.

France had been pressing for such a formal agreement for some time because of considerable duplication of efforts by different navies checking on ships that might be trying to break the embargo. Sometimes the same cargo ship would be questioned as many as 15 times, French defense ministry sources said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - MCI Communications Corp. said Tuesday it will provide free long-distance telephone service to U.S. military personnel serving in Saudi Arabia in the event of a family emergency.

Working with the Red Cross, MCI said it will provide the service to ''all 50 states, 24-hours a day, seven days a week on an indefinite basis'' in the event of a birth, a death or family illness.

''By donating free long-distance service, MCI is offering a crucial link to connect families and friends of U.S. military personnel in emergency situations,'' MCI President Bert Roberts said.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - Lincoln Savings and Loan executive Charles Keating was arraigned in Los Angeles today on charges of defrauding investors who bought his now- worthless junk bonds. Keating and three other Lincoln executives were named in a 42-count grand jury indictment unsealed today. Lincoln S-and- L collapsed 17 months ago in the nation's worst thrift scandal.

DENVER (SEPT. 18) UPI - President Bush signed legislation Tuesday that will enable American military personnel in the Persian Gulf to send mail home without cost.

The bill, the first to be signed by Bush aboard his new Boeing 747 Air Force One, expands conditions in existing law for U.S. troops to enjoy free mail privileges.

The legislation amends the law to grant that benefit to personnel ''engaged in temporary military operations under arduous circumstances.''

Previous law authorized free mail only for those engaged in combat or military operations against a hostile foreign force.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - America's trade deficit soared an alarming 75 percent to $9.33 billion in July in the worst showing since January, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

''Trade had been expected to be the cushion for the United States in a recession with exports holding up and non-oil imports declining,'' Boston Co. economist Allen Sinai said. ''The July figures showed just the opposite.''

''This ... hints at a bigger recession than expected,'' Sinai said, warning ''the trade deficit can't get any better'' with the Middle East crisis pushing oil prices higher.

Added Norman Robertson, chief economist at Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh: ''If our exports should falter that would have a very damaging effect on what is already a dim economic outlook.''

Private analysts had expected a deficit of roughly $7.3 billion after a revised shortfall of $5.34 billion in June. In May, the nation's trade deficit stood at $7.77 billion.

Exports, which had provided much of the strength, fell to $32.03 billion in July from a revised $34.22 billion in June, while imports increased to $41.36 billion from a revised $39.56 billion, the department's Census Bureau said.

The totals were adjusted for seasonal factors, and the overall July deficit was the widest since nearly $10.2 billion in January.

Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRI/McGraw Hill in Lexington, Mass., said, ''It looks to me that we had some months that were extraordinarily low. Overall, the deficit is still running a little less than last year.''

Robert Dederick, chief at Northern Trust in Chicago, suggested a slowdown in the Canadian and British economies may have contributed to the drop in July exports, and predicted ''a gradual ebbing of the trade deficit.''

But release of the trade report coincided with August data showing a 0.9 percent leap in consumer prices.

''If you were going to write a novel and make it a horror story, this is basically the script you would write,'' Norman Mains, chief economist at Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, said on the Financial News Network.

''You've got a worsening trade deficit, you've got high inflation, you've got (higher) oil prices, (and) you've got stock prices down around the world,'' Mains said.

A government spokesman noted that exports of commercial aircraft - which have been a driving force in the industrial sector in recent months - were off an estimated $500 million in July.

Imports of petroleum products, before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the subsequent global oil shock, advanced to $4.04 billion in July from $3.76 billion in June, not adjusted for seasonal factors.

The Commerce Department also said ''the June to July change in imports reflected increases in consumer goods, capital goods, industrial supplies and materials, and automotive vehicles, parts and engines.''

''Foods, feeds and beverages, and other merchandise were virtually unchanged '' it added.

''The June to July change in exports reflected decreases in capital goods, foods, feeds and beverages, automotive vehicles, parts and engines, industrial supplies and materials, and consumer goods,'' the department said.

The July trade deficit with Japan fell to $2.97 billion from $3.07 billion in June, while the deficit with the Organization of Petroleum Countries increased to $1.55 billion from $1.18 billion, not adjusted for sesaonal factors.

Looking ahead, analysts at Mitsubishi Bank in New York said, ''Oil will be a problem in August'' as a result of the Iraq crisis.

''We figure that higher August imported crude oil prices will cause the monthly trade deficit to balloon by $2 billion in August,'' the analysts predicted in a newsletter to investors.

MIAMI (SEPT. 18) UPI - The 11th tropical depression of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season formed Tuesday in the mid-Atlantic Ocean, and forecasters predicted it could develop into a tropical storm by the end of the day.

At noon EDT, the depression was centered near latitude 15.8 north, longitude 46.7, or about 950 miles east of the Windward Islands, the National Hurricane Center said.

The depression was moving west at about 14 mph, and was expected to continue that direction for the next day or two. Maximum sustained winds were near 35 mph, just 4 mph shy of tropical storm strenth.

Forecasters predicted the system could strengthen into the season's 10th tropical storm, which would be named Josephine, by late Tuesday.

Four storms - Bertha, Diana, Gustav and Isidore - have developed into hurricanes with winds of more than 74 mph so far this season. But none caused significant damage to land.

The hurricane season runs June 1 to Nov. 30.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Food and Drug Administration Tuesday asked all makers of toothpastes and mouthwashes to submit scientific proof to back up claims that their products combat tooth-threatening plaque.

Plaque is a sticky film of food debris and other material that builds up on teeth, promoting the bacteria growth. Studies show plaque is directly linked to development of cavities and to gingivitis, a painful inflammation of the gums that can lead to tooth loss.

Toothpastes contain abrasives that manufacturers contend can scrape away plaque, while mouthwash manufacturers claim their products thwart plaque through microbe-fighting or chemical activity.

Under federal law, statements that dental products can fight plaque and gum disease constitute drug claims because they deal with the treatment or prevention of disease and because they affect the structure or function of the body. Therefore, the safety and effectiveness of such products must be demonstrated, the FDA said.

More than two years ago, the FDA sent letters to several toothpaste and mouthwash manufacturers, including the producers of Listerine, Plax and Viadent, threatening regulatory action unless they proved their claims that the products could help reduce plaque. FDA spokeswoman Bonnie Aikman said the agency is still working with those manufacturers to settle the problem, and they might still be subject to regulatory action.

Although the FDA considered dental products in 1982 during its ongoing review of over-the-counter drugs, the agency said a recent upsurge in products purported to fight plaque spurred the decision to allow companies to present more data to back up their claims.

Supporting data must be submitted within six months. Failure to produce such proof could lead to the FDA requiring the manufacturer to drop the claims.

Phillip Weintraub, a spokesman for the American Dental Association in Chicago, said his group welcomes the FDA's latest step, saying it should create ''a level playing field'' for a group of products that many consumers now find confusing.

The dental group has given its seals of approval to three anti-plaque products - Listerine, Peridex, and Vi-John Pharmaceuticals' generic dental rinse. However, other similar products submitted to the ADA have not met its standards for effectiveness and-or marketing claims, said Weintraub, who would not name the products.

In July 1989, Consumer Reports Magazine said its dental consultants consider floss the single most important weapon against plaque, perhaps more important than the toothbrush. The magazine said its study also found claims made by some dental products that they can fight plaque are misleading and even deceptive.

MUNICH, WEST GERMANY (SEPT. 18) UPI - France will withdraw half of its 51,000 troops stationed in West Germany after Oct. 3 unification, French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Tuesday.

In a joint statement issued after a two-day summit in the southern West German town of Munich, the two leaders said the withdrawal will be ''a first phase,'' but did not specify whether further French troops will be pulled back later.

Officials close to the talks said the troops would leave Germany within the next two years.

''The French government informed the German government in this context of its intention to reduce the French armed forces in Germany by half in a first phase, which excludes the German-French brigade and the French armed forces in Berlin,'' the statement said.

The 4,000-strong Franco-German brigade was established in 1988 in West Germany as a kernel of a future European army.

As one of the four victorious World War II allies, France had about 51,000 troops permanently stationed in the western part of West Germany since the creation of the country in 1949.

''The Federal Republic of Germany thanks France for its solidarity for the security of its liberty in the last 40 years particularly through the stationing of armed forces,'' the statement said.

Horst Teltschik, a senior aide to Kohl, said the troop reduction is ''no sensational undertaking'' and complies with overall cuts in conventional forces in Europe.

In the statement, Kohl and Mitterand emphasized the close relations between France and Germany, saying the two countries are setting ''a unique example for friendly and trusting relations between two neighboring states and people.''

They said Bonn and Paris will continue to be the driving force behind European integration and ''the engine of the European unity undertaking.''

The 12 governments of the European Community are due to start negotiations on economic and monetary union in three months time, in advance of the planned creation of a single European market in 1992.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - New York Post owner Peter Kalikow Tuesday hailed union workers for voting for tough wage cuts that he said would save the nation's oldest continuously published daily newspaper.

''YES!'' proclaimed the Post's front page in letters four inches high.

Employees filing into the building alongside a sun-drenched East River gave each other thumbs up signs and readied champagne bottles as they exchanged greetings of ''we're still here.''

The 350 members of the paper's Newspaper Guild, including reporters, editors, photographers and advertising employees, voted Monday night to accept management's demands for a four-day work week, and 40 layoffs, effectively imposing a 20 percent pay cut on themselves and saving the paper $5 million annually.

''After two weeks of negotiations with the unions this brings all the unions into line with what we feel we need to save the paper,'' Kalilkow said.

He credited employees' commitment to the newspaper, along with support from union leadership and state and city labor department representatives who worked to keep the 189-year-old paper afloat following days of touch-and-go negotiations and predictions of its demise.

He also praised Cardinal John O'Connor for his last-minute plea to union members to save the paper for ''its real owners, the people it serves.''

''On Friday, when this deal was in five million pieces, like Humpty Dumpty, they put it back together,'' Kalikow said. ''It shows what can be accomplished when government, labor and management want to get together.''

He also expressed regret over the people who lost jobs and salaries ''when mortgage prices and food prices didn't go down.''

Guild President Barry Lipton said Kalikow's last-minute offer to grant severance pay to all Guild members wishing to leave the newspaper was a ''very important'' factor in the 242-45 vote.

Other union officials said it was Kalikow's commitment to New York that created the trust necessary to the negotiations, and faulted the Chicago owners of the New York Daily News for refusing to talk with unions working without a contract for the past six months.

''This is a New York newspaper. These are New York unions. It's a triumph of New York,'' said Theodore Kheel, an adviser to the unions.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Child care advocates said Tuesday they are tired of excuses about why a bill to help families meet child care costs can't get passed, including the latest one that its fate is tied to current budget talks.

''I don't buy any excuses,'' said Marian Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund. ''There is no excuse for not completing it now and sending it to the White House. No excuse - not Iran, not Iraq, not the budget.''

The House and Senate have passed child care bills, but a conference committee to work out differences on how to fund the multibillion-dollar measure has not met. Conferees have no plans to meet until they get instructions from the budget negotiators on what to do.

''The latest is that there seems to be bipartisan agreement to kick child care out of the budget deal and have the bill make its own way into the world,'' said Jim Jaffe, press secretary for the House Ways and Means Committee.

Another alternative is to have child care financing included in the budget deal as a ''sweetener'' to offset the pain of other domestic program cuts, Jaffe said. A possibility being discussed is to pay for child care legislation with the approximately $2 billion raised by extending the long-distance telephone tax.

At a demonstration on the steps of the Capitol, advocates of the legislation chanted, ''Child care now.'' If the bill does not become law in this session of Congress, they vowed to hold it against certain members at the polls.

''Most certainly, if it doesn't pass, it will be a major election issue and those who didn't help will be hurt,'' said Gerald McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees union.

The demonstration was highlighted by a paper chain link stretching from the Capitol to the White House. The 200,000 links were made by children in day care centers across the country. Holding the chain link were children attending Washington-area child care centers and advocates of the legislation.

''The bill would only cost one stealth bomber,'' said Sheldon Sargent, 17, a senior at Archbishop Carroll High School in Washington who participated as part of a volunteer school project.

''Instead of having one machine piloted by one person that would kill thousands, it is much better to have one program piloted by many that would save millions of children.''

Another senior at the Catholic school, Mark Adams, 18, said he wanted to come to the Capitol because he knows of many single mothers who have difficulty finding affordable child care.

''As a man, it's our duty also to help children and single mothers. It's good to help,'' Adams said.

Four-year-old Jeremy Catlett was asked why he goes to Capital East Children's Center every day while his mother works.

''I want to be lucky,'' he responded.

BONN, West Germany (SEPT. 18) UPI - West German authorities Tuesday initiated preliminary preceedings against a former leading East German Communist official who allegedly assisted members of the extremist Red Army Faction, the West German attorney general said.

Attorney General Alexander von Stahl said the former head of East Germany's now-disbanded State Security police, Erich Mielke, his assistant Gerhard Neiber and ''persons unknown'' would be charged with support of the RAF after German unification.

Under West German legislation, which will remain in force after Oct. 3 unification, it is illegal to support the left-wing movement, which in the past years has claimed responsibility for a series of killings, kidnappings and bomb attacks.

Von Stahl said a document recently obtained by West German police shows the Stasi supported active RAF members in 1987 and 1988, helping them make contact with officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

He said the document also shows Mielke and Neiber had helped RAF fugitives settle in East Germany.

Von Stahl said the evidence was contained in a 200-volume ''Operations Reports'' of the Stasi, which was turned over to the West German authorities earlier this month.

Mielke, 82, was arrested in East Germany in July after former RAF members told the authorities he had helped them hide in East Germany. Neiber has not been arrested.

Meanwhile, East German Social Democratic Party Chairman Wolfgang Thierse said Tuesday thousands of files concerning former Stasi employees and collaborators ''disappeared'' in recent months.

Several current Cabinet ministers and parliamentarians have been accused of having worked as Stasi agents in the past, leading to bitter disputes.

Werner Fischer, formerly in charge of the dissolution of the Stasi, publicly accused East German Environment Minister Karl-Hermann Steinberg of having worked for the Stasi.

But he rejected reports that he named any other ministers and said accusations that Defense Minister Rainer Eppelmann had been a Stasi informant were ''absurd.''

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - Two teens accused of attacking a woman jogger in Central Park made an unsuccessful bid for separate trials Tuesday, arguing that one acknowledges sexual violence took place while the other defendant says there was no rape.

In his efforts to prove there was no rape, Kharey Wise's lawyer, Colin Moore, said he will question the woman jogger about her sex life.

''I intend to show she was sexually active with at least two lovers,'' Moore said after the pre-trial hearing in the rape and attempted murder case at state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

The move could backfire with a jury sympathetic to the jogger, and co-defendant Kevin Richardson, 15, made a last-ditch effort to distance himself from Wise, 18, by asking for a separate trial.

Just weeks before jury selection is to begin Oct. 11, Richardson's lawyer, Howard Diller, claimed there are ''antagonistic defenses.''

''Colin Moore will argue there was no rape. Kevin Richardson is not taking that tack,'' Diller said. ''It would appear that by virtue of these two positions, these two cases can not co-exist. There either was or wasn't a rape.''

Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer disagreed.

''Simply because one defendant claims a rape did not occur and the other claims he didn't participate in a rape, I don't believe that is antagonistic '' Lederer said.

Justice Thomas Galligan refused to sever the trials.

The trial is to be the second stemming from the ''wilding'' attack in Central Park on April 19, 1989, and would mark the second time the 30- year-old investment banker takes the witness stand.

Moore said he would call the woman as a witness if the prosecution does not.

The first trial ended in August with convictions for rape and assault against Antron McCray, Yusef Salaam and Raymond Santana, all 16. Each has been sentenced to the maximum penalty for a juvenile: five to 10 years behind bars.

A sixth teen, Steven Lopez, 16, is to be tried next year.

Wise faces the most serious penalty because he was the only one over 15 at the time of the attack. If convicted of all the charges against him, he faces a maximum term of 19 to 57 years behind bars.

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (SEPT. 18) UPI - Activists turned out in force Tuesday to protest a new federal policy that would deregulate low-level radioactive material, possibly leading to its use in consumer products or disposal in ordinary landfills.

The ''below regulatory concern'' policy of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission would remove controls from waste and other materials with low levels of radiation.

''I think you are getting a message here ... the American people are telling you forget BRC,'' Michael Mariott of the Nuclear Information and Resource Service told NRC staff members at a hearing.

Members of the environmental group Greenpeace staged a ''die-in'' and other activists carried signs reading ''BRC is murder'' at the second of five hearings nationwide on the policy.

The BRC policy does not itself allow any new dumping or reuse of radioactive materials but allows the federal agency to grant exemptions for some materials from regulatory controls.

The policy applies to the cleanup of contaminated sites, sale of consumer products with small amounts of radioactive materials, disposal of low-level waste and the recycling or reuse of slightly contaminated equipment and materials.

Several proposals in Congress would rescind the policy.

''We are convinced that the public will be better protected overall with this policy because it enables people using and regulating radioactive materials to concentrate on more significant risks,'' said Dr. Malcolm Knapp, regional director of radiation safety for the NRC.

But some opponents see the policy as an attempt by the NRC to cut disposal costs for the nuclear industry. Some observers estimate the policy would allow for the unregulated disposal of up to 30 percent of the low-level radioactive waste now generated.

''BRC is an admission of the failure of nuclear power,'' said Jeff Schmidt, president of the Pennsylvania Sierra Club.

''The BRC policy increases the risk of death and pain,'' said Andrew Altman of Greenpeace. ''How can we risk death in order to help a dinosaur industry reap profits?''

The NRC has estimated that under the new policy, enough radiation could be added to the environment to add 285 cancer deaths in the country each year.

The policy could also generate conflicts between federal policy and states with more stringent rules for disposal of radioactive materials, including New York and Pennsylvania.

''I'm very deeply concerned at the prospect that the legal enforcement agents of Pennsylvania might have a showdown with the NRC,'' said Dr. Judith Jonsrud, a member of the state Advisory Committee on Low-Level Radioactive Waste.

Eugene Gleason, deputy commissioner of the New York State Energy Office, also questioned the permissible exposure levels in the BRC policy.

''We believe that states should have the ability to impose more stringent requirements and set lower limits for public health protection,'' said Gleason.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 18) UPI - The decision by the International Olympic Committee to award the 1996 Summer Olympics to Atlanta will pump billions of dollars into the economy, observers said Tuesday.

Atlanta was chosen Tuesday over five other cities - Athens, Greece; Toronto; Melbourne, Australia; Belgrade, Yugoslavia, and Manchester, England - that had made one-hour presentations at the 96th IOC session in Tokyo hoping to win support.

The 16-day event will produce a combined economic impact of $3.48 billion, the equivalent of 100 Democratic National Conventions or 50 Super Bowls, according to the Atlanta Organizing Committee. Atlanta will also host the 1994 Super Bowl.

More than 84,000 new jobs are expected to result from the Olympics, including about 21,500 construction jobs and 38,800 service jobs in lodging, concessions and transportation.

By comparison, the largest private employer in Georgia is Delta Air Lines with 23,000 full-time employees. BellSouth Corp. is second with 21,500 full-time workers.

Ratajczak warned Atlanta must not be mesmerized by the ''inflated'' economic impact numbers and be coaxed into paying for large cost- overruns on projects needed to host the Olympics.

By winning the Games, Atlanta organizers now have the task of keeping costs in line with revenues.

The 1996 Games are expected to bring to Georgia a total of $1.16 billion in revenues, including $549 million in television rights and $324 million in corporte sponsorships and merchandising.

The AOC estimates that it will cost the community $1.01 billion to host the Olympics, including $587 million in organizing and operating costs and $418.4 million to build facilities such as the $145.2 million Olympic Stadium.

Under current estimates, Atlanta will have a surplus of $157.1 million after the Games, but that surplus will be shared with the international and U.S. Olympic organizing committees.

Atlanta will face an even greater problem finding money to start construction on major projects in the early years.

But if the costs of hosting the Games exceed the revenues or if substantial bridge financing is needed, then the state and local governments probably will have to step in to help finance the Games, at least temporarily.

The direct economic impact of the 1996 Games is estimated to be $1.56 billion. Once these dollars are filtered into the economy - spend and respent - the total impact would reach $3.48 billion in 1989 dollars. With inflation, the 1996 economic impact likely will top $4 billion.

Also, the city would gain $500 million worth of new structures from the Games - technically, at least, at no cost to the city. These include an open-air stadium, the intended new home of the Atlanta Braves; an aquatic center at Georgia Tech and a twin-tower dorm at Tech that also would house students from Georgia State University and the Atlanta University Center.

The decision apparently means the Braves, the city's National League baseball team, will move into the Olympic Stadium, which would be built near the aging Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. The new facility would be designed to seat 85,000 for the Games but could then be converted to a horseshoe-shaped 55,000-seat arena for baseball.

The Braves had been considering a move to the Atlanta suburbs if the city did not win its bid for the 1996 Olympics.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - This fall's crop of new public school teachers is going into their classrooms with a high idealism toward children's ability to learn, but with pessimism about teaching problem kids, a survey reported Tuesday.

The poll of 1,002 recent college graduates conducted by Louis Harris and Associates for Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. showed an increased desire to stick with teaching as a career.

The majority also expressed a wariness toward parents' chip-on-the- shoulder attitudes.

Ninety percent of those questioned said they viewed teaching as a long-term career, with only 8 percent saying they planned to move on to some other line of work.

The replies compared with last year's survey, in which only 74 percent said they planned to stay in teaching.

Ninety-nine percent of the beginning teachers said they believed that all children can learn and good teachers can make a difference in the lives of their students.

The majority questioned agreed with the statement that many children have trouble with the learning process ''because they come to school with so many problems.''

Forty-five percent said they agreed with the pessimistic statement, ''Even the best teachers will find it difficult to really teach more than two-thirds of their students.

Sixty percent said they believe teachers are respected in today's society, but only 7 percent said they believe it strongly.

Seventy percent said they feared too many parents treat schools and teachers as adversaries.

Eighty percent said schools should go beyond teaching and attempt to deal with health and social problems of students.

Another 80 percent said they believed their education had prepared them to teach students from a variety ethnic backgrounds, but 58 percent said they would have liked more more practical training before going to work.

Sixty-six percent said they endorsed the idea of a nationwide, standardized test for all teachers.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - Attempting to prove a kiss isn't just a kiss, Hershey Foods Corp. Tuesday set out to woo the American public with its newest confection - a chocolate drop with an almond inside.

After 83 years of showering chocolate lovers with its silver-covered chocolate kisses, the confectionery giant made a seductive departure from tradition: it put an almond inside the chocolate, wrapped the treat in gold foil, and called it Hershey's Kisses With Almonds.

The break with the past - when the kisses were just chocolate - was marked with a ceremony inspired by a famous symbol of the passing of time: the dropping of the ball at New Year's Eve in New York's Times Square.

That tradition began, Hershey said, the same year the company began making its kisses - 1907.

Instead of the ball, a 500-pound, 6-foot version of Hershey's Kisses With Almonds was lowered from the top of the 60-foot flagpole at One Times Square.

The giant kiss was made by Artkraft Strauss Sign Corp., which also built the ball which drops on New Year's Eve. The replica had an aluminum frame and was covered with gold aluminum and sequins.

And, keeping with the New Year's Eve tradition, the Kiss was lowered to the accompaniment of the watching crowd counting down to zero. MaryBeth Steiner, a spokeswoman for Hershey, said about 200 bystanders watched the 60-second-drop of the giant kiss.

''Both Hershey's Kisses and the Times Square ball have become symbols of popular American culture,'' Richard A. Zimmerman, chairman and chief executive officer of Hershey Foods Corp., said in a statement. ''The association between Hershey Foods and One Times Square is a natural.''

The new product, with a brown and white plume to distinguish it from the blue-and-white of the plain chocolate version, will be available in 6-ounce, 9-ounce, 14-ounce, and 24-ounce bags, as well as in bulk.

It was test marketed in Midland, Texas, and Pittsfield, Mass., for a year before its launch, and will be promoted by a series of English- and Spanish-language TV and print ads scheduled to debut Oct. 1, the company said.

The products are made by Hershey Chocolate USA, the largest division of the parent company, which said it is capable of making 33 million kisses a day.

BY GAYLE YOUNG - UPI

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and the Israeli occupation of the territories are separated by time and place and circumstances, but through them runs a common thread that many diplomats say will unravel U.S. policy in the Middle East.

The argument that the United States and United Nations are imposing a double standard in enforcing U.N. resolutions against Iraq, but not Israel, is gaining steam in the Arab world despite efforts by U.S. officials to keep the two issues separate.

"Why, tell me why, Iraq and not Israel?" Farida El-Naccash, a soft-spoken but intense leader of Egypt's opposition Progressive Unionist Party said Tuesday. ''Why is Iraq punished for violating international law and not Israel?''

She waved her hand toward an office window overlooking the teeming streets of Cairo.

''People are asking themselves this question every day,'' she said. ''Even if all are not asking it out loud, or in a way that openly challenges the United States, they are asking it in their hearts all the same.''

Since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, the United States has led intense international efforts to force Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw his forces from the tiny, oil-rich emirate -- efforts backed by a string of U.N. Security Council resolutions imposing economic sanctions against Iraq and giving warships in the Gulf permission to use force against vessels suspected of breaking the embargo.

U.S. officials, in swings through the Middle East, have argued that Saddam is a special case who deserves special measures and that the invasion is an isolated incident in the ever-shifting politics of the Middle East.

In a recent news conference in Alexandria with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, U.S. Secretary of State James Baker pointedly said there ''is no link'' between the Iraqi invasion and the stalled efforts to resolve the Palestinian problem in the Middle East.

Many Palestinians, bitter over the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip following the 1967 war, are not so sure.

''For Palestinains, for Arabs in general, there are similarities between the invasion of Kuwait and the taking of Arab territory by Israel,'' said one Western diplomat in Cairo who asked not to be identified.

''As much as the West and Israel are trying to keep things neat and separate, there is a growing belief that there is a double standard at work here,'' he said in an interview Tuesday.

While the United States has lobbied for the passage of U.N. resolutions against Iraq, it has used its veto powers as a permanent member of the Security Council to block a number of resolutions condemning Israeli policies in the occupied territories.

A 1947 council resolution on Palestine, however, called for the creation of separate Arab and Jewish states.

Many Arabs would like to see that resolution enforced as well as the resolution calling for the withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait.

At the conclusion Monday of a three-day conference in Amman called to condemn the U.S.-led multinational force in the Gulf, the assembly of 300 Arab intellectuals and political leaders issued a communique saying they ''oppose any selectivity and double standards in applying the United Nation's Security Council resolutions.''

Iran also charged Monday that the Security Council has acted to curb Iraqi aggression against Kuwait while turning a ''blind eye'' to atrocities commited by Saddam against Iranians during the 1980-1988 Gulf War.

Even if the United Nations does not heed the call to enforce its resolutions equally, the ''double standard'' argument will probably promote the Palestinian cause and force the United States to rethink its policy in the Middle East, observers say.

''While nothing is certain, there are good reasons to believe that these changes will further enhance the struggle of the Palestinian people to achieve freedom and independence,'' said Sari Nusseibeh, an Oxford-educated political scientist at Bir Zeit University in the West Bank.

He said the conflict will ''act as a futher catalyst ... toward achieving a settlement for the Palestinian-Israel conflict.''

Diplomats said Naccash's query, ''Why Iraq and not Israel?'' will probably be debated in the Middle East for years to come.

''A friend asked me, why did the whole world stand against the occupation of Kuwait by Iraq, and not against the Israeli occupation of Palestine,'' Egyptian Al-Ahram newspaper columnist Ahmed Bahgat wrote in a column published Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 18) UPI - Charles H. Keating, whose Lincoln Savings and Loan collapsed in the nation's worst thrift scandal, was jailed Tuesday on charges he defrauded investors who bought his now-worthless junk bonds.

A 42-count county grand jury indictment naming Keating and three other executives of Lincoln or its parent company, American Continental Corp., of which Keating was chairman, was unsealed Tuesday. The charges included securities fraud and making false statements to the state Corporations Department.

The indictment is the first criminal case stemming from the collapse of Irvine Calif.-based Lincoln 17 months ago. The failure is expected to cost taxpayers more than $2 billion, making it the costliest bailout yet in the massive nationwide savings and loan scandal.

Keating, a once-properous Arizona developer who now claims to be broke, appeared before Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner for arraignment. The judge delayed taking pleas from Keating and his codefendants until Oct. 5. He then ordered Keating into custody until he can post $5 million bail.

Keating's codefendants, Judy Wischer, American Continental's former president; Ray Fidel and Robin Symes, both former presidents of Lincoln, were ordered held on $1 million bail.

Keating made no comment before entering court.

The grand jury focused on the allegedly fradulent sale of nearly $200 million in American Continental Corp. bonds through Lincoln's 22 Southern California branches.

American Continental in Phoenix was the parent of Lincoln and most of its bonds were sold to Lincoln depositors and elderly investors. The bonds are now nearly worthless.

Keating and other Lincoln and American Continental officers and directors, as well as the lawyers and accountant who advised them, also are under scrutiny in a wide-ranging federal grand jury investigation.

Also pending are a civil racketeering lawsuit filed by federal regulators against Keating and other former American Continental executives, plus a $300 million civil suit filed in June by the California Attorney General's Office against Keating and American Continental's accounting firm. Disgruntled purchasers of American Continental junk bonds, many of them who lost their life's savings, also have filed class actions against Keating.

Keating sued the government to regain control of Lincoln, seized by regulators in April 1989. Last month, a federal judge in Washington upheld the government takeover of Lincoln, saying the actions of Keating and other American Continental executives ''amounted to a looting'' of the failed thrift.

The Lincoln scandal also has tainted five senators who accepted thousands of dollars in campaign contributions from Keating and allegedly contacted federal banking regulators on Keating's behalf before Lincoln was seized.

The Senate Ethics Committee is investigating the actions taken on Keating's behalf by Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; Dennis DeConcini, D- Ariz.; Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich.; John Glenn, D-Ohio; and John McCain, R-Ariz.

Cranston has said he never sought leniency from banking regulators for Lincoln but only asked that the investigation of Lincoln be speedily concluded.

Cranston also said that he did not know at the time he contacted regulators for Keating that Lincoln was selling the junk bonds at its 22 Southern California offices to mostly elderly customers who mistakenly believed their investments were insured by the government, which does insure deposits.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - NCR Corp. Tuesday presented a new line of computer systems based on chips manufactured by Intel Corp. - the first time a leading U.S. computer maker has selected the cheaper but competitive microprocessors for a full line of powerful units.

The new line of computers, the NCR System 3000, is designed for a very broad range of applications, from small operations to large business applications.

NCR said the new line of products will come in ''seven levels,'' with a very broad power range, from 7.5 million instructions per second, or MIPS, to 100,000 MIPS.

Leading computer manufacturers such as International Business Machines Corp. rely on their own chips or a number of suppliers.

NCR, based in Dayton, Ohio, released six models in three classes of computers, and detailed plans for the rest of the line to be introduced at a later stage.

The six models presented today have a power between 7.5 MIPS and 320 MIPS and are priced from $10,000 to $800,000. They will be available between now and the second quarter of 1991.

The six new computers include three desktop units, two microprocessors and one ''mainframe class'' multiprocessor, the NCR 3550.

The announcement gave NCR shares a small lift on the New York Stock Exchange. At midday, NCR stock was trading up 37.50 cents to $58.375.

The new product line is expected to boost revenues at NCR which reported sales of nearly $6 billion in 1989, ranking a distant No. 5 among the main U.S. computer manufacturers behind Unisys Corp., whose sales topped the $10 billion last year.

The already sluggish outlook for the U.S. computer industry has been recently further depressed by the crisis in the Middle East. Higher oil prices have triggered fears of inflation and recession, both factors which could cripple the demand for new computer systems.

Despite the prospect of increased chip orders from NCR, Intel was quoted down 37.50 cents to $32.50 in over-the-counter trading at midday.

The chip manufacturer has not recovered from negative sentiments among industry analysts, mainly a lowering of earnings forecast by analyst John Lazlo with PaineWebber Inc.

The success of NCR's new line is pegged not only to an improved market environment, but also to aggressive distribution channels and the availability of software programs.

While distribution has been a weak point for NCR compared with giants IBM or Digital Equipment Corp., the company said more than 35,000 software products were available for the NCR System 3000, and were designed to run according to the four industry standards, including UNIX and IBM's OS/2.

BANGKOK, THAILAND (SEPT. 18) UPI - Squabbling Cambodian leaders, unable to agree on the leadership of a national council meant to return peace to Cambodia, Tuesday postponed a formal meeting of the group, Thai officials said.

Resistance leader Prince Norodom Ranariddh pulled out of preparations for the second meeting of the so-called ''Supreme National Council'' and left Bangkok for France.

The council, which brings together leaders of all four battling Cambodian factions, is the key to a U.N. peace plan meant to end 11 years of conflict. It met in its first formal session on Monday, but failed to agree on the election of a council chairman.

Sources close to the discussions said the talks were deadlocked over resistance demands that Prince Norodom Sihanouk be elected chairman and 13th member of the council.

The Vietnamese-backed government countered with demands that Prime Minister Hun Sen be named leader of the Cambodian delegation to the U.N. General Assembly due to open later Tuesday, the sources said.

The resistance currently holds Cambodia's U.N. seat and yielding it to the joint Council is seen as a major concession.

At the United Nations Tuesday, the current U.N. delegation said it would leave its U.N. seat vacant until Cambodian leaders appoint new representatives under the peace plan.

''We will not be seen in the General Assembly out of respect of the Supreme National Council and we are waiting for the arrival of the delegation set up by the council,'' said Sihanouk's representative to the United Nations, Ambassador Sisowath Sirirath.

The council is meant to act as the sole national authority in Cambodia during an interim period during which a U.N. transitional authority is supposed to disarm all sides, supervise a ceasefire, end foreign arms supplies, and conduct elections. The estimated $2 billion operation is expected to be the largest, costliest and most difficult carried out by the United Nations.

Despite pressure from their foreign backers to implement the U.N. peace plan, the Cambodian factions appeared enmeshed in the the distrustful maneuvering that has helped make Cambodia a battlefield for much of the past 20 years.

''The negotiations are not yet finished. There are many problems,'' said Pracha Gunakasem a senior Thai foreign ministry official assigned to facilitate the talks.

Pracha said informal talks would continue in hopes of holding the formal council meeting Wednesday.

''There is a mood of compromise,'' said Pansak Winyarat, another Thai official assisting the talks, but he declined to discuss points of agreement or disagreement.

''I think tomorrow this will come to a conclusion,'' he said. ''I hope it will be a positive one.''

Ranariddh, clearly disappointed that his father Prince Norodom Sihanouk, was not immediately named to head the ''Supreme National Council'' that is meant to represent Cambodia's sovereignty under a U.N. peace plan, left for France just before the second meeting was due to open. Associates said he left on family business that could not be further postponed.

Ranariddh denied his group was boycotting the meeting or putting up obstacles to the meeting.

He said his group ''will unconditionally accept all agreements reached by the three other Cambodian parties.''

The 12-member council includes Hun Sen of the Vietnamese-installed government and the two other resistance leaders - Khieu Samphan of the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge and Son Sann of the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - The United States announced plans Tuesday to end American operations at 127 mostly minor military sites overseas that include two air bases in West Germany and one in Spain.

The Pentagon said it also intends to cut troop strength at 23 other minor military sites overseas. It did not provide an estimate of the number of troops that would be affected.

''As we draw down the overall size of the force, it is essential that we correspondingly reduce the installations where the force is based, both in the United States and overseas,'' Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said.

The Pentagon released a list of 150 sites to be shut or reduced in strength at 44 separate locations in 10 countries. Most of them, however, are small military sites, such as training areas, officers clubs and barracks.

The three bases listed for complete U.S. military withdrawal were Hessich Oldendorf Air Base and Lindsey Air Base in West Germany and Torrejon Air Base in Spain.

The United States already had agreed, at Spain's request, to relocate the 401st Tactical Fighter Wing from its NATO base at Torrejon to a new facility being built at Crotone, Italy.

Altogether, the United States will end its military operations at 94 sites in West Germany, 11 in Spain, nine in South Korea, three in Greece, three in Italy, three in Britain, three in Australia and one in Japan.

The Pentagon also will reduce U.S. military forces at 14 sites in West Germany three in South Korea, two in Spain, and at one site each in Italy, Japan, Canada and Bermuda.

''Some of the changes will begin in fiscal 1991, some in fiscal year 1992, and some later,'' Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said. Fiscal year 1991 begins in less than two weeks, on Oct. 1.

He offered no figure on the number of U.S. troops that will be affected, but said the withdrawals and reductions were taken in line with the troop cuts expected to take place following a conventional forces reduction agreement with the Soviet Union.

The proposal under negotiation calls for each side to reduce troop levels in central Europe to 195,000. The United States currently has 320,000 troops in Europe.

Cheney announced plans last January to study the possibility of closing 35 military bases in the United States and to end operations at 12 bases overseas and to reduce forces at two others overseas.

Congress must approve the closure or reduction of U.S. military facilities in the United States, but no such approval is needed for action to be taken on overseas bases.

In addition to the U.S. withdrawal from the three bases listed Tuesday, the Pentagon said it will also end operations completely at two military communities in West Germany, Bad Toelz and Neu Ulm.

DENVER (SEPT. 18) UPI - President Bush, hoping to spread some of his popularity among GOP candidates coast to coast, began a vigorous fall campaign Tuesday to put more Republicans in Congress, governorships and state legislatures.

The president embarked on a two-day western swing that opened in Denver and featured an overnight stop in Los Angeles and a breakfast fund-raiser in San Francisco before heading back to the White House Wednesday.

Bush has been focused heavily on California Sen. Pete Wilson's tough gubernatorial campaign against Democrat Diane Feinstein, but also has taken care to promote GOP candidates down to the local level.

He has set aside two days next week, Wednesday and Thursday, to campaign in the Midwest, mainly for fund-raising events in Minneapolis, Chicago, Cleveland and Akron, Ohio, and Detroit.

The president, who is riding a wave of public approval for his decision to send U.S. troops to the Persian Gulf to confront Saddam Hussein, also has a heavy political schedule for October and the days immediately before the Nov. 6 elections.

For instance, during an Oct. 4-8 visit to his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine, Bush plans to attend campaign events in Stamford, Conn., Manchester, N.H., and Portland, Maine.

At the end of October, Bush is planning another trip to California and then on to Hawaii.

The president apparently holds out no hope of breaking the Democratic control of Congress, but he is trying to whittle into the opposition's majorities, now 55-45 in the Senate and 257-176 in the House.

The Republican National Committee and state GOP committees were expected to be billed for Bush's transportation costs, which are higher than ever now thanks to the new presidential jumbo jet.

Bush's campaign speeches are designed to touch all bases, domestic and international, and his remarks prepared for a fund-raising luncheon in Denver Tuesday were typical.

The president prodded the budget summit negotiators, warning that the ''clock is ticking'' toward punishing automatic spending cuts of about $105 billion, and reneweing his challenge to Congress to reach a deficit reduction accord.

''We all know the danger that high deficits can drag down our economy,'' he said. ''It's time to put ourselves to the test.''

In his speeches in Colorado and California, Bush also continued his rhetorical battle with Saddam, putting the Iraqi president on notice that ''the world will not look the other way,'' and ''Iraq's act of aggression'' in invading and annexing Kuwait last Aug. 2, ''will not stand.

But in Denver, Bush avoided one issue that, although obscured by the Persian Gulf crisis, may become a flashpoint in the campaign - the savings and loan scandal.

Bush's son Neil was one of the directors of the Silverado savings and loan in Denver that failed at a cost to taxpayers of perhaps $1 billion. Neil Bush, who has maintained he did nothing wrong, is still under investigation in the case.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (SEPT. 18) UPI - Grim NASA managers Tuesday agreed to set up an independent team of agency engineers to find and fix the elusive fuel leaks that have grounded the shuttle Columbia until at least late October and probably longer.

''It's easy to be the coach on Monday morning, but we never attacked this problem the way we should have,'' said a NASA official who requested anonymity. ''It's been a bunch of wishes and dreams. It hasn't been a 'go hunt the SOB and tear the thing apart if necessary' kind of thing.''

Columbia and its seven-man crew had been set for a fourth launch attempt at 1:28 a.m. EDT Tuesday to finally kick off a 10-day astronomy mission running a record 111 days behind schedule because of two previous hydrogen fuel leaks and trouble with an on-board telescope.

Instead, a third hydrogen leak in the shuttle's engine compartment Monday night during fuel loading forced NASA engineers to cancel the countdown and to delay the flight until after the launch of the shuttle Discovery around Oct. 5 on a high-priority mission to carry a European solar probe into space.

Given that NASA is at a complete loss to explain Columbia's leaks, agency managers say the $2 billion shuttle could be grounded until December, after Discovery's October flight and after a November mission by the shuttle Atlantis that was delayed in July by yet another hydrogen leak.

Columbia's crew, meanwhile - commander Vance Brand, 59, co-pilot Guy Gardner, 42, John ''Mike'' Lounge, 44, Robert Parker, 53, Jeffrey Hoffman, 45, and civilian astronomers Ronald Parise, 39, and Samuel Durrance, 47 - flew back to Houston Tuesday to await word on when they might get another chance.

Under mounting pressure to explain the space agency's inability to get the grounded shuttle program back on track, NASA managers are setting up a special ''tiger'' team of engineers independent of the normal shuttle program chain of command to get to the bottom of Columbia's problems.

The team, made up of engineers from the Johnson Space Center in Houston, the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., and the Kennedy Space Center will be based at the launch site in Florida to deal with the leak issue on a first-hand basis, said a NASA spokesman.

Because the leaks only show up in the presence of supercold rocket fuel, NASA's best shot at tracking down the source of the leakage is at the launch pad, the only place the shuttle's engines and plumbing can be subjected to the effects of minus 423-degree liquid hydrogen.

Engineers plan to mount special cameras in Columbia's engine room before conducting an exhaustive series of tests, possibly beginning as early as Sunday, to visually track down the source of the leakage. Similar camera systems are used in other rocket programs.

''The next step is to be sure we get the right set of instrumentation in the aft this time and go do an exhaustive tanking test and see if we can't pinpoint it and get on with the program,'' said Leonard Nicholson, shuttle program manager at the Johnson Space Center.

Engineers also are studying whether to conduct a fueling test on Discovery, although no one has any reason to suspect any similar problems. If such a test is ordered, however, Discovery's launch would be delayed beyond Oct. 5.

Columbia's most recent flight in January marked the first use of mobile launch platform No. 3, a massive firing stand that carries the weight of the spaceship and houses a plumber's nightmare of fuel lines, hydraulic systems and electrical cables.

Engineers now believe that some amount of Carborundum, an abrasive polishing agent, was left inside an ''MLP'' system by accident and that it may have been swept into Columbia's fuel line system during propellant loading before its most recent flight in 1989, possibly damaging critical seals or other systems.

''Carborundum is kind of a grit, kind of the metal equivalent of sand paper, to polish metal parts,'' said shuttle program director Robert Crippen. ''When we flew Columbia the last time it was the first flight off mobile launch platform No. 3.

''The best guess that we have today is that somehow we left a small amount of this grit paper in this system and that got sucked into the vehicle in the process of tanking it (with fuel). That's what we found on some filters in Columbia after its last flight.''

While more tests are required to resolve the issue once and for all, another NASA officials said, ''Underneath, I think everybody thinks the MLP is the culprit. I think ultimately you may have to tear that thing apart and go find it.''

MILAN, ITALY (SEPT. 18) UPI - Few concrete signs emerged Tuesday of what West German tire manufacturer Continental AG's response would be to Pirelli SpA's proposal to merge the companies' tire operations.

''It is a friendly proposal,'' a Pirelli spokesman said of the complex deal, under which the Italian tiremaker would merge its tire business into that of Continental - but would simultaneously assume control of the merged venture.

Senior executives from the two companies were reported to be meeting in Germany.

The Pirelli spokesman, who declined to be identified, said the proposal was supported by a controlling block of Continental shareholders.

The spokesman said Pirelli already holds a 5 percent stake in the German company. Pirelli in a statement issued Tuesday denied that it was making a hostile takeover bid for Continental.

But there were signs Continental was less than enthusiastic about the offer, with German reports saying the company wants to remain independent.

Continental issued a statement late Monday saying Pirelli was offering its tire operations for acquisition. Pirelli countered with a statement claiming Continental shareholders support the merger proposal.

At Continental's Hanover, West Germany, headquarters, a spokesman denied the company's administrative council had spurned the offer.

The spokesman, Dieter Von Herz, said the Pirelli proposal ''is being examined.'' He said that Continental could make a counterproposal but that it would take several weeks for the company to scrutinize Pirelli's offer.

German experts said Continental probably would issue a counterproposal. Continental Chairman Horst Urban is believed to want to keep the companyindependent.

Andrea Travelli, Pirelli's financial director, was reported to be in Germany for a series of meetings with Continental executives.

Meanwhile, Pirelli boss Leopoldo Pirelli was expected to meet in Hanover Wednesday with Gerhard Schroeder, head of Lower Saxony's state government, and Gerd Silber-Bonz, president of Pirelli's German subsidiary.

Specifically, Pirelli proposed to convey Pirelli Tyre Holding, based in the Netherlands, to Continental, receiving in turn enough Continental shares to give it a controlling stake in the German company.

The merger of Continental, the world's fourth-largest tiremaker, and Pirelli, ranked fifth, would create a more competitive company that would hold 16 percent of the global tire market, the Pirelli official said.

The world's largest tire company, France's Michelin, has a 24 percent share, followed by Akron, Ohio-based Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., with 19 percent, and Japan's Bridgestone Corp., with 17 percent.

Pirelli has told Continental that a merger would make marketing sense, as Continental is stronger in Northern Europe, whereas Pirelli is well-positioned in the Mediterranean region.

The proposal ''has a very clear industrial reasoning behind it,'' the Pirelli spokesman said. He said the merged entity would be ''very close'' to Bridgestone in terms of market share.

He said, if the transaction were to move forward, the Pirelli brand would continue to exist within the Continental tire unit, which the Pirelli group would control.

Pirelli for some years has been seeking an acquisition to build its share of the global market.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - American Airlines and United Air Lines Tuesday said they were discontinuing their super-coach one way fares, also known as junk fares, in most markets, a move that will largely affect business travelers.

The action comes at a time when airline fares are scheduled to go up by another 4.2 percent effective Oct. 1. The fare hike comes on top of a 5.3 percent increase announced in late August.

The increases have been blamed on the sharply rising cost of jet fuel triggered by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and the subsequent United Nations embargo against oil exports from the two Persian Gulf nations.

The elimination of the junk fares is another attempt by airline companies to increase their yield in an environment of rising costs and sharply declining profits.

The junk fares, in effect for many years, were a marketing and competitive tool to attract the business traveler. They are lower than regular full coach fares but higher than the lowest discount or super- saver fares.

Junk fare tickets have been popular with business travelers because they are less restrictive requiring no more than seven-day advance purchase and can be bought for a one-way journey and also include refund features.

Super-saver tickets, on the other hand, have no refund features and must be bought 14 days in advance. Super-savers are popular among vacation travelers who typically have more time to plan their trips.

''American Airlines, along with other carriers, is discontinuing the one-way discount fares on many markets effective tomorrow,'' said Tim Smith, spokesman for the Fort Worth-based carrier. ''Today is the last day for those fares. There will still be a few of these available and in those markets we will remain competitive.''

Essentially, the junk fares are being eliminated from major markets. This can significantly add to the cost of air travel.

For example, American's junk fare for a one way trip from Dallas to Chicago was $350. From Wednesday, that trip will cost the regular coach fare of $409, Smith said. Comparatively, the deep discount fare on that sector will be $274 round trip, he said.

United said it was discontinuing the super coach fare as part of its effort to improve yields on revenue per passenger mile, said spokesman Joe Hopkins.

''It is certainly related to the sharply escalating cost of jet fuel, '' he said. He said each 1-cent-a-gallon jet fuel increase results in an annual fuel cost increase of $22.5 million at United, which uses about 6 million gallons a day.

''This is being done to raise the yield in this adverse environment,'' said Bob Decker, airline analyst at Duff & Phelps Inc. in Chicago. ''When you figure that roughly 50 percent of all air travel is business travel, this is quite significant.''

Industry figures show that 87 percent of all air travel in the country in July were on discounted coach fares which include junk fares. No breakdown was available for the market share held by junk fare alone but some estimates were as high as 15 percent.

Lee Howard, head of Airline Economics Inc. in Washington, D.C., said eliminating junk fares will help increase revenues for airline companies.

''When you eliminate them, you cause a large percentage of passengers to go on the higher full fares,'' Howard said. ''That will give the airlines a great deal of leverage.''

In New York, Pan American World Airways Inc. said it was ''reviewing'' its policy on the super-coach fares.

DENVER (SEPT. 18) UPI - Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., asked the head of the federal Office of Thrift Supervision Tuesday to reconsider his decision to limit news coverage of a hearing into Neil Bush's role in the failure of the Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan.

An OTS administrative law judge is scheduled to hear allegations Sept. 25 that Bush, the son of the president, was guilty of acting improperly while a member of the failed thrift's board of directors.

Previous hearings in similar cases have been closed, but the OTS changed its policy earlier this summer to allow public access. However, the agency has banned all audio and video recording equipment.

Schroeder and the Colorado Broadcasters Association appealed the ban, but OTS Director Timothy Ryan rejected their arguments.

Schroeder, in a letter to Ryan, asked him to reconsider his decision. She said the restrictions on the media will hamper the public's right to know the details of Silverado's collapse in 1988. The failure is expected to eventually cost the taxpayers $1 billion.

She said television and radio reporters will be severely hampered by not having audio and video transmissions from the hearing, and newspaper and magazine reporters will not be able to use tape recorders to accurately transcribe testimony.

''It would be in the best interests of all parties to have a timely and accurate public record of the hearing,'' Schroeder wrote. She quoted a 1971 Supreme Court decision which said ''a cantankerous press, an obstinate press, a ubiquitous press must be suffered by those in authority in order to preserve the even greater values of freedom of expression and the right of people to know.''

When Ryan earlier announced that the hearing would be public, he said it was necessary to assure the public that regulators were ''doing everything possible'' to protect taxpayers. He didn't explain why he was banning audio and video equipment.

Neil Bush, a Denver oilman, was an outside director of Silverado from 1985 until shortly before it was seized by regulators in 1988. He has been accused of conflicts of interest in his dealings with former Denver developers Ken Good and Bill Walters, two major Silverado borrowers.

Regulators have said Bush failed to disclose to other Silverado board members that Good and Walters were investors in JNB Exploration, Bush's now-defunct oil exploration firm.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Senate ratified tax treaties with six countries Tuesday that are intended to reduce taxation of income earned by corporations or residents of one country from sources within another country.

The treaties, approved as a group without debate on a 99-0 vote, are with West Germany, Tunisia, Spain, Indonesia, India and Finland. The tax treaties with Tunisia, Spain, Indonesia and India are the first ever.

After German unification, the treaty with West Germany could be made to apply to what is now East Germany, upon further action of the German government.

As a result of the treaties, U.S. companies earning income from other countries will pay reduced taxes in those countries and companies from the six nations operating in America will pay less into the U.S. Treasury.

For example, the United States will eliminate the excise tax on premiums paid to West Germany insurance companies for policies covering a risk in the United States - a change intended to help the West Germany firms.

One benefit going to U.S. individuals is that U.S. taxpayers who receive a reduction in their West German taxes will pocket much of the money instead of turning it all over to the U.S. government.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - Three people are dead and at least six others injured in a building collapse in downtown Philadelphia. Fire officials say the three passers- by died when the front wall and roof of two adjoining buildings collapsed without warning onto a major shopping thoroughfare several blocks from city hall. The injured include four police officers who were walking by at the time.

A United Nations report released in Geneva, Switzerland, today says the Persian Gulf crisis may worsen world recession. The U-N report says the crisis exacerbates existing instability and uncertainty on financial and currency markets due to exchange rate upheavals. It says particularly hard-hit will be developing countries dependent on foreign oil, where a sustained oil price of 30 dollars a barrel could spell economic ruin.

Former President Reagan today... in his second day of a private visit to the Soviet Union... met with a small group of students at Moscow University. It was there during the 1988 Moscow summit that he delivered a moving speech about the need for freedom. He told students today that Soviet President Gorbachev is doing just what he should in his cautious moves toward a market economy. But Reagan later told Russian republic President Boris Yeltsin that he also admired Yeltsin's more radical ideas.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - NASA today resolved to appoint a special team of its engineers to hunt down the fuel leaks that are plaguing the shuttle Columbia. One NASA official who requested anonymity said NASA never went after the leak as it could have during more than three months of flight delays. Engineers now suspect that an abrasive polishing agent might have gotten into Columbia's fuel system.

The Environmental Protection Agency today announced that nine chemical companies have pledged to cut toxic emissions by 80 percent from 40 of the nation's worst-polluting plants. The reductions are only a fraction of pollutants nation-wide. But the E-P-A says the agreements show voluntary efforts to reduce health risks... though some of the reductions probably will be required anyway under a pending clean-air bill.

SEATTLE (SEPT. 18) UPI - The state Court of Appeals has reinstated a $2.5 million award to the Tacoma family of a toddler who suffered severe brain damage after inhaling baby oil.

The panel ruled 2-1 Monday that Pierce County Superior Court Judge Bruce Cohoe erred in September 1988 when he overturned a jury verdict against Johnson & Johnson Baby Products Co.

David Ayers, then 15 months, inhaled baby oil from a bottle in April 1985. The appellate court determined the baby oil should have contained a warning label about possible dangers.

The boy's mother, Cheryl Ayers, was relieved by the appeals court decision.

''It's been such a long, long haul,'' she said. ''Finally, I feel we can put our lives back together and get on with it.''

Therapy to correct damage to his lungs caused by inhaling baby oil resulted in the boy suffering cardiac arrest, which led to brain damage, the appellate court decision said.

The boy, now 6, cannot move his arms or legs, is unable to speak, suffers seizures and is mentally retarded, the judges said.

Cheryl Ayers said the ruling means the family may soon be able to pay for necessities and medical treatment not covered by insurance, including daily physical therapy, neck surgery, a new feeder chair, special braces, shoes and exercise equipment.

''We've had our hands tied because we haven't been able to give him the things he should have had,'' she said.

Plaintiff's attorney Elaine Houghton said Johnson & Johnson could appeal ruling to the state Supreme Court, but the state high court could decline to review the case.

Johnson & Johnson declined comment.

Cohoe earlier threw out a jury verdict against Johnson & Johnson, holding there was insufficent evidence to prove a warning label on the baby oil bottle would have prevented the mishap or that the accident was forseeable.

Appeals Judge Stanley Worswick wrote in the majority decision that family members would have been more careful with the baby oil, which was in a purse that had been left on the floor, had the bottle contained a warning label.

Citing expert testimony about the health hazards of inhaling baby oil, Worswick wrote, ''Given this potential for serious harm, the burden on Johnson & Johnson, essentially the cost of printing and affixing a warning label, seems light indeed.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Senate voted to allow states to ban the interstate dumping of garbage Tuesday, despite a warning it would create chaos in every community trying to get rid of its trash.

The Senate attached the ban 68-31 as an amendment to the District of Columbia fiscal 1991 appropriations bill that was then approved by voice vote and sent to conference with the House.

The legislation would allow states that create a 20-year plan to manage solid waste disposal to ban imports from other states. States would also be allowed to charge higher fees for disposal of solid waste that is imported from other states.

At present, the states cannot take such actions because the Supreme Court has held that transportation of solid wastes is protected by the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., who fought the amendment, said, ''The fight isn't over. This is just the first round.''

Bradley said opponents will have a ''much better shot'' at killing the proposal in negotiations with the House.

The D.C. appropriations bill also faces a veto because it permits abortions for victims of rape and incest. President Bush vetoed last year's D.C. money bill because it contained the liberalized abortion language.

Americans produce about 180 million tons of waste each year. The number of landfills has shrunk from 14,000 in 1978 to about 6,000 and those are expected to be closed within 15 years.

Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., said the amendment was needed to ''deal with the growing pile of trash'' because the states need ''some reasonable standards'' for the disposal of trash within their borders.

''There are mountains of out-of-state trash coming in,'' Coats said of his home state of Indiana. ''We are overwhelmed by truckloads and trainloads of trash.''

But Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., said the amendment would allow states to ''impose unlimited punitive fees'' on other states that must export their solid waste garbage.

''What we want is an orderly transition from what was to what should be,'' he said, complaining that the Coats amendment prevented an orderly transition. He also said Congress should concentrate on a national policy on disposal of solid wastes.

''This is simply blackmail,'' Lautenberg said. ''There is no reasonable time for exporting states to adjust.''

(SEPT. 18) UPI - Former Lincoln Savings and Loan official Charles Keating was jailed in Los Angeles today on charges he defrauded investors. A prosecutor said the victims did NOT realize that the junk bonds Lincoln sold were high-risk and NOT insured. Prosecutors say the mostly elderly victims will probably NEVER see their money again. A judge ordered Keating jailed on five-Million-dollar bail... citing the seriousness of the case.

The Defense Department today disclosed it will end its operations at 127 military sites worldwide. Most of the facilities are minor... such as training areas, officers clubs and barracks... but they do include two air bases in West Germany and one in Spain. The changes will start in fiscal 1991... which begins the first of October. NO Congressional approval is needed to close overseas bases.

Officials say a wall of two adjoining buildings in Philadelphia collapsed onto a sidewalk today... killing three people and injuring six. Authorities say the roof of the buildings apparently gave way... causing the front wall to fall. NONE of the people inside were injured in the incident on Market Street. One witness said he helped pull bricks off a trapped victim and felt for his pulse... but said the man ''never had a chance.''

The South African attorney general says the wife of black leader Nelson Mandela will stand trial on counts of assault and kidnapping. Winnie Mandela is charged in connection with the 1988 abduction and murder of a 14-year-old boy by her chief bodyguard. The victim was accused of being a police informant. Officials say Mrs. Mandela would NOT be arrested provided she agrees to cooperate with authorities. The Mandela bodyguard already stood trial. He was found guilty and sentenced to death.

MIAMI (SEPT. 18) UPI - The government's first nationwide auction of thrift properties was sabotaged by bureaucratic foot-dragging and a lack of faith on the part of the Resolution Trust Corp., the auctioneer hired to run the sale said Tuesday.

The RTC formally canceled the commercial real estate auction on Tuesday, citing a breach of contract by the Auction Company of America.

''I don't look at this as an indictment of auction marketing. It is an indictment of bureaucracy,'' said James Gall, chairman of the Miami company.

In Washington, RTC Chairman L. William Seidman told reporters that Gall's company failed to come up with about $2 million to pay for marketing costs, as required by its contract.

''They basically have not performed under the contract. There probably will be lawsuits on both sides,'' Seidman said.

Gall said he was unable to come up with the money after actions by the RTC undermined his efforts to conduct a successful auction, thereby scaring off his investors. He estimated his auction costs to date at about $2 million.

''We had investors who were involved with us,'' Gall said. ''They have literally scared our investors away.''

He said efforts to organize the auction were undercut repeatedly by the RTC.

''The keys to a good auction are to have a motivated seller, to have a reasonable reserve price, or minimum bid, and an assurance that the property that is advertised will actually be there on auction day,'' Gall said.

''As we have gotten into this process, these keys have just fallen away.''

But the only criticism Seidman offered for the RTC's performance in the aborted auction was to say the agency ''didn't do the job'' in properly selecting a company to conduct the auction.

''It's simply something that didn't work out the way we hoped,'' he said.

Seidman said the government agency is considering using sealed bids to sell some of the properties that would have been auctioned.

''We will proceed with other efforts to sell these properties,'' he said.

Gall, 44, won the contract to conduct the satellite auction through competitive bidding, after lobbying Congress to include auction marketing as one method of disposing of properties seized from failed thrifts.

Gall and the RTC had planned to auction off about 70 properties, including the landmark CenTrust Financial Center in downtown Miami, with an estimated combined value in excess of $300 million.

The auction was to be staged in Dallas, with satellite auction sites in nine other American cities, Tokyo and London.

Gall accused the RTC of undercutting the auction in part by removing four properties from the sale.

''We learned last week that our second most important property in the auction, the Madison, an office building in Texas, has been sold. If you add up the sales figures on these properties, it amounts to a potential loss of commission to us, just on those four properties, of $1 million,'' he said.

''Commission aside, what it says to potential bidders is, ''Will my property be there on auction day?' We have been trying to hold this auction together, assuring bidders the properties will be there, and as ''

Gall also said RTC officials were slow to set reserve prices on properties.

''To this day, we never received the minimum bids, or reserve prices. They seemed to always be about a week away,'' Gall said.

''We have been unable to give (bidders) a price. If you have your buyers' hat on, you say I want to know the price before I start checking out the property. We have not been able to give them that information,'' he said.

Finally, Gall said RTC officials publicly expressed doubts about the auction, thereby undermining his company's efforts. In one case, an official said he believed only half the properties offered would sell, Gall said.

''Quotes like this are just very damaging when you're trying to attract buyers to an auction. Our goal was to sell all the properties. You have to be upbeat and positive to bring people to an auction,'' he said.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - The dollar moved mostly higher Tuesday in New York despite a set of very negative U.S. economic data showing an oil-fueled inflation surge and a sharply wider merchandise trade deficit.

Currency dealers said the dollar slipped initially on the morning announcements of the economic indicators, but the slippage was less than many players expected. That forced them to buy back dollars to cover short, or selling, positions.

''The market was unable to continue the selloff,'' said First Interstate Bank currency manager Robert White in Los Angeles. ''There was a lack of interest on the market's part'' in unloading the U.S. unit, he added.

''I think the market has been saturated with selling, that's all,'' said John Lyman, a Bank of Tokyo customer dealer in New York.

In late New York dealings, the dollar was traded at 1.5525 German marks, up from 1.5477 Monday, and 137.75 Japanese yen, up from 136.50.

The government said that inflation at the consumer level surged by 0.8 percent in August on oil prices driven higher by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and that the U.S. trade deficit rose an alarming 75 percent in July.

Economists expected to see inflation rise. But they were surprised to see the trade deficit widen to $9.33 billion despite the weak dollar and said it could mean a deeper recession than anticipated was on its way.

Traders disagree as to whether the dollar has found a floor. Some look for it to set more record lows, while others, including First Interstate's White, say foreign investors see bargains at current exchange rates.

''There is a certain amount of (global investment) money that is happy to move into the United States at these levels,'' White said.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.2890 Swiss francs, up from 1.2760; 5.1865 French francs, up from 5.1855; and 1,162.25 Italian lire, up from 1,159.

Britain's pound was unchanged at $1.9135.

In Europe, the dollar closed mixed in the wake of the poor U.S. trade figures and expectations of a drop in U.S. interest rates.

''There's nothing going on. We are waiting for the (U.S.) interest rates to come down,'' said Larry Arber, a Warburg Securities dealer.

In London, the pound remained buoyed by high British interest rates, closing at $1.9180 compared with Monday's $1.9025.

The dollar fell in Frankfurt, closing at 1.5470 German marks vs. 1.5536, but was higher in Zurich, at 1.2835 Swiss francs vs. 1.2825.

The dollar fell in Paris and Brussels, to 5.2030 French francs vs. 5.2035 and to 31.85 Belgian francs vs. 31.95. But the U.S. currency was slightly higher in Milan, at 1,162.55 Italian lire vs. 1,161.55.

Earlier in Tokyo, a round of yen-selling pushed the dollar up to a close of 137.68 yen vs. 137 Monday.

''Investors wanted to secure profits before it becomes too late,'' said Kaneo Ogino, a vice-president for Goldman Sachs (Japan) Corp.

Gold closed lower in Zurich, at $387.50 an ounce vs. $389, and in London, at $388 an ounce vs. $390.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $388.25 an ounce, off from $390.25 Monday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $387.60 an ounce, down from $389.40.

For a second straight day, silver was unchanged at $4.80 an ounce in both Zurich and London.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.82 an ounce, up from $4.795. Comex silver finished trading at $4.79 an ounce, ahead from $4.766.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Top administration and congressional leaders failed Tuesday to break a budget summit deadlock over whether to lower capital gains taxes as part of a $500 billion five-year deficit reduction plan.

House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri and House Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois told reporters after the hour- long leadership meeting that they had not solved any issues that still divide negotiators, but that both sides reaffirmed a commitment to get a budget deal.

''We didn't talk about specific issues,'' Gephardt, the chairman of the budget summit, said of the meeting, which he called ''productive.'' ''The talks have not collapsed.''

Gephardt said he, Michel, House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, White House chief of staff John Sununu, administration budget director Richard Darman and Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady would meet again Wednesday to discuss their remaining differences.

Michel said there was ''a feeling of good faith on both sides'' during the meeting.

The bipartisan talks, which began May 15, had taken place since Sept. 7 in seclusion at Andrews Air Force Base in Washington's suburbs.

But talks reached an impasse late Monday and were suspended. Democrats said that was primarily due to the capital gains issue, which tied up congressional budget decisions for six months last year and may do the same this year.

An angry assistant House Republican leader Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a budget negotiator, told reporters Tuesday that ''very large, fundamental differences on a whole range of fronts,'' not just capital gains, remained before a budget agreement could be reached.

He said comments from Democratic leaders and negotiators that capital gains was the primary problem amounted to ''deliberate disinformation by the Democratic leadership.''

And he called ''absolute baloney'' and an ''outrageous distortion'' reports that Democrats, in the most recent offer to Republicans Monday night, had agreed to virtually every Republican one-year and five-year tax and spending number, although not to specific policies to produce those cuts and tax revenues.

Republicans, led by President Bush, are pushing a reduction in the capital gains tax on the sale of assets, such as stocks and bonds.

At a GOP fund-raising lunch in Denver, Bush said a capital gains cut ''is not a tax break for the rich'' but is a step ''we must take to spur savings, encourage investment, expand jobs ... and increase competitiveness to give this national economy of ours more of what it needs to keep on growing.''

Democrats argue that the tax cut would cost the Treasury $21.5 billion over five years and would primarily benefit wealthy Americans that one budget negotiator called ''the stretch limo set.''

Democratic negotiators have refused to agree to a capital gains cut unless it is accompanied by higher taxes on the rich who would benefit from the cut.

There was talk on Capitol Hill Tuesday about taking capital gains out of any budget agreement and guaranteeing a separate vote on the measure later. But it was unclear whether that would occur.

''Capital gains is the primary barrier towards getting an agreement,'' said House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., a negotiator. ''With no give on capital gains, we simply can't pull an agreement together.''

Foley sharply criticized Republicans for continuing to press for a capital gains tax cut without agreeing to an offsetting increase in taxes on the rich.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - A series of hurried sales of failing thrifts in 1988 is likely to cost the government more than $69 billion, according to a report released Tuesday by the Resolution Trust Corp.

The sales, made under the government's ''Southwest Plan,'' have come under congressional criticism recently for being too generous to investors. The 96 transactions, largely in Texas and other Southwest states, involved heavy financial assistance from the former Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

''A preliminary examination suggests a conclusion that must surprise no one: many of the 1988 deals were overly generous and costly to taxpayers,'' said Peter Monroe, president of the RTC oversight board.

''We recognize that, in part, the 1988 deals were driven by FSLIC's lack of liquidation funds,'' Monroe said. ''Fortunately, rights to reduce these costs were built into the transactions.''

L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said many of the deals were made under a year-end deadline for tax purposes and that the FSLIC bargained from a weak position.

''This report implies that if you make deals and you dont have cash and have doubts about your credit, you're going to pay more,'' he said.

The RTC said a significant portion of the costs came from interest expense that could have been avoided if the government spent money now to prepay notes and reduce the amount of assets covered

In a 132-page report reviewing the 1988 thrift sales, the agency said the government could recoup as much as $2 billion of the costs by undertaking a series of measures, including the prepayment of about $11.3 billion in promissory notes in 1991 and a payment of $3.8 billion for the write-down to market value of assets covered in the deals next year.

The review, which cost $3.5 million, was conducted by five private groups made up of accounting firms, law firms, investment bankers and other consultants.

Seidman said a second report will be presented in November to examine the possibility of voiding or renegotiating some of the 1988 deals. Seidman said government regulators have so far found no grounds to cancel any of the deals.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Three U.S. Air Force cargo planes will deliver tents, cots and blankets to refugees in Jordan and one will fly home 420 Filipinos, Sri Lankans and Bangladeshis who fled Iraq and Kuwait, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Two C-5 cargo planes and one C-141 will be involved in the airlift operation, spokesman Pete Williams said.

The first C-5 left Andrews Air Force Base, Md., Saturday with humanitarian relief supplies for Afghanistan. On the return leg from Islamabad, the aircraft transported 1,500 tents and 750 blankets to Amman Tuesday for distribution to the refugees from Iraq and Kuwait.

A second C-5 left Dover Air Force Base, Del., Tuesday for Amman with Defense Department excess cots and 5,000 blankets donated by relief agencies. It is scheduled to arrive in Jordan Thursday. From Jordan, it will proceed to Islamabad and pick up 1,500 more tents and blankets and airlift them to Jordan.

The third aircraft, a C-141, will leave McGuire Air Force Base, N.J., Wednesday to carry cots, tents and plastic garbage bags to Jordan. After unloading its cargo in Jordan, it will fly three missions, transporting about 140 refugees on each mission from Jordan to Sri Lanka, Bangladesh and the Philippines.

Southwest Asians are employed in most of the service jobs in Iraq, Kuwait and other Islamic nations in the Middle East.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 18) UPI - Congress unconstitutionally usurped judicial power by exempting from environmental challenge 1990 logging on threatened spotted owl lands in Oregon and Washington, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals declared a 1989 congressional rider attached to an appropriations bill by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., an unconstitutional violation of separation of powers.

A coalition of environmentalists, led by the Seattle Audubon Society and the Oregon Natural Resources Council Inc., filed suits in Oregon and Washington challenging use of the Hatfield rider to allow timber sales of 7.7 billion board feet of timber in fiscal year 1990.

The Hatfield rider went into effect Oct. 23, 1989, and was part of the ''Northwest Timber Compromise'' that allowed 5.8 billion board feet of timber come from Washington and Oregon.

Congress could have written a valid law allowing the timber cutting by amending or repealing portions of the Endangered Species Act or the National Environmental Protection Act, the decision said.

Todd True, attorney for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund in Seattle, said, the decision is a ''major victory'' with effects on several levels.

''The broad implications of the ruling go beyond the environment,'' True said. ''Citizens have the right to enforce the law without Congress slamming the courthouse door. That is what Congress tried to do in these suits.''

True said Congress cannot circumvent the amendment and repeal process when it wants to limit the effects of environmental lawsuits.

The ruling ''also means the spotted owl habitat will have to be managed under the terms of the Endangered Species Act'' and other legislative protections, True said.

Mark Rutzick, attorney for 12 associations representing hundreds of timber companies in the two states, said the ruling would have little effect on the numerous timber sales that have already taken place.

Rutzick said the law affected logging sales in fiscal year 1990, which ends Sept. 30.

He said that in most cases the 15-day period allowed to challenge proposed sales has already passed.

Spotted owls have raised a storm of controversy between loggers and environmentalists hoping to slow logging in the Pacific Northwest.

The owls live in old growth areas and do not reproduce if they are forced out of the area by timber cutting, according to environmental arguments.

The challenged rider, known as section 318, specifically referred to two lawsuits that challenged Forest Service findings that northern spotted owls had been afforted adequate environmental protection.

With the Hatfield rider, Congress directed the sale of timber in 13 national forest areas to hundreds of timber companies.

Section 318 declared, if the states followed the management requirements set out by Congress, the logging in spotted owl areas would not violate the National Environemtal Protection Act, Endangered Species Act, Federal Land Policy and Management Act, and the Migratory Bird Treaty.

Environmentalists maintained that violated the power of the judiciary to rule on legal questions brought to it.

Judge Harry Pregerson wrote, ''The language of section 318 is clear: Congress not only legislated a forest managment plan ... but also directed the courts to find that that plan satisfied the environmental laws underlying the ongoing litigation.

''In so doing, Congress did not amend or repeal laws, as it unquestionably could do, but rather prescribed a rule for the decision of a cause in a partcular way, without changed the underlying laws, as it unquestionably cannot do.''

Some 18 Oregon counties retain half the proceeds from timber taken on Oregon lands, said Phillip Chadsey, attorney for the counties.

He said Oregon counties receive an estimated $180 million annually from timber sales. Although none of the timber harvest funds are directly affected by the ruling, the future amount of the funds could be affected.

Rutzick said he did not know if the ruling would be appealed by the timber companies.

FENTON, N.Y. (SEPT. 18) UPI - A jury Tuesday convicted Detroit tavern owner William Reedy of driving with alcohol in his system when he crashed a pickup truck Christmas Day, killing former Yankee baseball manager Billy Martin.

The jury found Reedy guilty of driving with a blood alcohol level of .1 percent or more, a misdemeanor charge, but found him innocent of driving while his ability was impaired. Prosecutor Kevin Guyette said it is possible to have alcohol in the bloodstream and not be impaired.

Fenton Town Court Judge P. Murray Benjamin sentenced Reedy to pay a $350 fine and revoked his New York state driver's license for six months. He will serve no jail time or parole.

According to a coroner's report, Martin, 61, died from a fractured neck and spinal cord compression in the crash just outside his Fenton horse farm.

Reedy, Martin's friend for more than 20 years, sustained a crushed hip, broken ribs and various cuts and bruises in the accident and was hospitalized for several weeks.

Robert Pearl, an attorney for Billy Martin's widow, said he was pleased with the verdict because it identifies Reedy as the driver of the truck, thereby setting the stage for civil suit against Reedy.

Reedy, in tearful testimony last week, insisted Martin was the driver of the car even though police found Martin's crushed body against the passenger door. Reedy said that was because he pulled himself to the driver's side and took initial responsibility for the crash ''to protect Billy.''

Reedy's attorney Jon Blechman said he will appeal the verdict, claiming his client was not the driver.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - The expected plunge in U.S. imports of crude oil stemming from the Persian Gulf crisis has arrived, resulting in a 4.5 million-barrel drop in the nation's crude stocks, the American Petroleum Institute said Tuesday.

For the week ended Sept. 14, the weekly oil-industry survey showed crude oil imports plummeted to a daily rate of 6.0 million barrels from 6.9 million in the previous week and were less than year-ago imports of 6.4 million barrels a day.

As a result, U.S. crude oil inventories fell 4.5 million barrels to 369.8 million from 374.3 million in the prior week but remained well above the year-ago 329.0 million barrels.

Analysts have been waiting for the import drop since the U.N. embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti exports imposed after four days after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Even though it takes five or six weeks for tankers to arrive from the Persian Gulf, some analysts had expected U.S. imports to decline earlier.

In what may eventually mean some price relief for motorists, gasoline supplies increased 6.9 million barrels last week to 217.0 million from 211.1 million in the prior week and moved close to year-ago levels of 218.6 million barrels.

Stocks of unleaded gasoline, which accounts for 90 percent of the domestic market, also rose to 166.4 million barrels from 163.0 million a week earlier and remained significantly higher than year-ago levels of 157.1 million barrels.

Daily gasoline production edged up to 7.4 million barrels in the latest week from 7.3 million the previous week and was higher than the year-ago daily output of 7.1 million barrels.

Gasoline imports, on a daily basis, increased to 282,000 barrels in the Sept. 14 week from 261,000 a week earlier but were well below year- ago imports of 355,000 barrels.

U.S. refineries operated at 94.0 percent of capacity last week, compared with 93.5 percent a week earlier and 89.8 percent a year ago.

Inventories of distillate - used for home heating oil and diesel fuel - rose to 133.3 million barrels from 131.7 million barrels a week earlier and stayed well above year-ago levels of 121.4 million barrels.

Distillate production remained steady at 3.0 million barrels daily, the same level as in the preceding week and as a year ago.

Daily distillate imports shot up to 394,000 barrels from 242,000 the previous week and were much higher than year-ago imports of 236,000 barrels.

Imports of all refined products edged up to 2.2 million barrels daily from 2.0 million in the preceding week but were less than year-ago imports of 2.3 million barrels.

(SEPT. 18) UPI - British Prime Minister Thatcher told the Czechoslovakian Parliament today that Eastern European countries should be given full status in the European Community... AFTER they become fully democratic with market economies. Thatcher's stance is widely seen as an attempt to slow E-C unification. The prime minister also apologized for her nation's 1938 pact with Hitler, which paved the way for Germany to invade Czechoslovakia.

With the shuttle Columbia grounded indefinitely, NASA today began focusing on the launch of the spacecraft's sister ship Discovery, tentatively set for October 5th. Discovery and its crew of five will carry a European-built solar probe into space. Although hydrogen leaks created three of Columbia's four launch delays, NASA managers are expected to forego a fueling test for Discovery, confident NO debilitating leaks are present.

Activists turned out in force in Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, for today's hearing on a new federal policy aimed at deregulating low-level radioactive material. The policy would remove controls from waste and other materials with low levels of radiation. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission estimates deregulation would add enough radiation to the environment to account for 285 new cancer deaths nationwide each year. Members of the environmental group Greenpeace responded by staging a ''die-in.''

The United Auto Workers' 400-member G-M Council today gave wholehearted approval to a new three-year contract with General Motors. That sets up a ratification vote by 310-thousand workers within about two weeks. U-A-W President Owen Bieber said the pact is ''a win-win situation'' for both the union and G-M. One local president said the contract trades income security for job security.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 18) UPI - Sara Lee Corp. said Tuesday it has signed an exclusive three-year agreement with the National Collegiate Athletic Association worth at least $6 million to serve as the official corporate sponsor for women's sports.

As part of the deal, the Chicago-based international food and consumer products company will become a major advertiser during broadcasts of women's athletics programs.

The agreement, involving 16 NCAA sanctioned sports, marks the first time a corporation has made a major financial commitment to intercollegiate women's sports, according to the company.

''We believe that this relationship will enhance the visibility of women's athletics, and the programs that will be implemented by Sara Lee will have a positive influence at every NCAA member institution,'' said Dick Schultz, executive director of the NCAA, at a news conference.

''In 1980, fewer than 10,000 women competed in college athletics,'' Schultz said. ''Last year, over 91,500 women competed at the college level. With the help of Sara Lee, I am certain those numbers will skyrocket during the next three years.''

Sara Lee markets a wide variety of brand name products, including Hanes, L'eggs, Hillshire Farm, Ball Park, Jimmy Dean and Sara Lee.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - Turning aside the Bush administration's request for $4.7 billion, the House voted Tuesday to cut the ''Star Wars'' missile defense program even deeper than recommended by the House Armed Services Committee.

The action capped a series of votes seeking to set the spending level for the program, launched by President Ronald Reagan in 1983 to find a way to knock out Soviet nuclear ballistic missiles.

The House voted to set spending on the project at $2.3 billion during action on the $283 billion version of the 1991 defense authorization bill written by the Armed Services Committee.

As approved by the committee, the bill contained $2.9 billion for continued research and development of the Strategic Defense Initiative. The Senate has voted to authorize $3.7 billion.

During debate on the House bill, four admendments were offered to raise or lower that figure.

The first amendment by Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., a strong advocate of the program, would have authorized $4.2 billion. It was rejected on a 338-83 vote.

Dornan argued that the proliferation of ballistic missile technology around the world, including such nations as Iraq, dictates additional research into ways to stop missiles.

Critics of the program, led by Reps. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., and Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., proposed cutting the authorization to $1.5 billion. That amendment failed 286-135.

Rep. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., proposed funding at $3.7 billion, matching the Senate figure, but his amendment was defeated 273-141.

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., who has successfully argued for deep SDI cuts for four years running, then proposed a $2.3 billion figure and for the fifth time won the issue, this time on a vote of 225-189.

The eventual figure will be developed when House and Senate defense leaders conduct a conference on the two separate bills.

Final passage of the bill is not expected until Wednesday afternoon.

AMMAN, Jordan (SEPT. 18) UPI - The U.N. envoy overseeing humanitarian aid during the Persian Gulf crisis warned Tuesday that thousands of refugees in Iraq could be in a life-threatening situation unless humanitarian aid reached them.

Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan said a method must by found through relief agencies or foreign embassies to help the estimated hundreds of thousads of refugees standed in and around Baghdad.

''Some way must be found in cooperation with the Iraqi authorities so people don't die,'' Aga Khan told reporters. ''Otherwise when the planes leave, they will be taking back dead bodies.''

Aga Khan, the personal representative of the U.N. secretary-general for humanitarian assistance during the gulf crisis, arrived in Jordan Sunday to assess the situation of refugees fleeing Kuwait and Iraq following the Iraqi invasion.

Aga Khan, who spent Monday and Tuesday touring Jordanian refugee camps, said a total of 500,000 refugees will have passed through the Hashemite kingdom within a few days.

Praising Jordan's efforts to repatriate the refugees, he said about 33,000 remained as of Tuesday morning and would be sent home within two weeks.

Although the situation in Jordan was under control, he warned that events in the gulf could send thousands more pouring into Jordan seeking refuge. He said relief officials were drawing up contingency plans to handle any number of refugees.

''We really do not know at this stage how many people we should expect,'' he said. ''Should there be hostilities, God only knows what it will do to disrupt things. The orderly departures we see taking place will be very chaotic and I'm not sure we could cope.''

He said although information was sketchy it was estimated between 250,000 and 300,000 refuges, mostly Asian workers, were waiting in the Baghdad area to return home.

''Nobody can ignore the suffering of these human beings,'' he said. ''So they must be helped pending departure.''

The U.N. representative said ''it would be much more logical to fly people out of Baghdad'' instead of forcing them to make a long desert journey to Jordan.

He also suggested Iraqi airplanes be chartered to ferry the refugees as was the case with Westerners trapped in Iraq.

The U.N. envoy said he hoped Iraq would reconsider its refusal to allow him to visit Baghdad. He said much more information was needed about the refugee situation in Iraq to hepl them and allow countries like Jordan to prepare for their possible arrival.

He also said allowing free passage of refugees into Turkey and Iran would assist in repatriating them.

He warned that the Gulf crisis which spawned the refugee problem could in turn create serious economic difficulties in the workers' native lands because of the influx of unemployed workers and the cutoff in wages sent from the Gulf.

''For these people it's a broken dream,'' he said. ''All of them tell the same story - they became destitute overnight.''

COLUMBIA, S.C. (SEPT. 18) UPI - The Persian Gulf crisis has no diplomatic solution and war between Iraq and the United States seems unavoidable, a former U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia said Tuesday.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has been backed into a corner and there is no way for him to save face except to fight, said John West, who served as ambassador to Saudi Arabia during the Carter adminstration.

Saddam would rather die fighting, West said in a lecture to a political science class at the University of South Carolina.

The United States must understand that Arab countries play for keeps and Saddam has a lot to lose, West said. If Hussein were to lose the conflict, he would lose big, the former ambassador said.

West recalled previous Arab heads of state who were decapitated or assassinated when they were unsuccessful in coup attempts or in other affairs of state.

President Bush is handling the crisis well by mustering multi- national forces to stand with the United States in defense of Saudi Arabia, West said, but at the same time by drawing a line in the sand and requiring the government of Kuwait restored, he has made it impossible for Saddam to save face.

''I think military action, the stalemate, is bad enough,'' West said. ''But if it gets into military action, Saddam Hussein has said he will level Kuwait City.

''All he would have to do is set a few torches to the (oil) pipeline, and then you'd have the biggest explosion you've ever seen.''

The Iraqi leader has major supplies of nerve gas and has proven he would not hestitate to use them against his enemies or his own people, said West, echoing the view of many experts on the Arab world.

''So if he is desperate, he will cause a lot of damages, a lot of casualities '' West said.

''But I think it is unquestionable that we will defeat him.''

West said that the economic embargo established to sever Iraq from supplies will not work because Iran and Iraq will trade with each other, even when they are at war with each other.

Economic pressure will make things harder for Iraq, West said, but is not an end unto itself.

West also warned that public support of troops in the Middle East will wane and there would be political consquences as well if the conflict were protracted.

''Being in the desert for any length of time is worse than any Vietnam,'' the former South Carolina governor said. ''The longer we are there, we will lose public support.

''Americans will not tolerate a long drawn-out affair. Any president who has dealt with a hostage situation or a long drawn-out affair such as Vietnam, has either been defeated or discredited. And you can draw your own conclusions about what I mean by that.''

Bush does not want to be discredited or defeated during an election year, West said.

West predicted Congress will be forced to rethink its posture on national defense and on closing military bases because of the gulf crisis.

West, a Democrat, was governor of South Carolina from 1970 to 1974 and was appointed by President Jimmy Carter as ambassador to Saudi Arabia in 1977. He is a lawyer in Hilton Head, and a guest lecturer at the university.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 18) UPI - The nation's biotechnology industry is entering a ''new age of realism'' that will result in scaled down expectations and a flurry of mergers and acquisitions in the 1990s, a survey showed Tuesday.

Biotech sales, which increased 25 percent in 1989 to $2.9 billion from a previous year figure of $2.4 billion, were expected to reach $75 billion by the end of the decade - a lofty number but still much lower than earlier optimistic projections.

The 5th annual survey, ''Biotech 91: A Changing Environment,'' by the San Francisco-based Ernst & Young, said therapeutic firms, for example, see sales over the next five years increasing 17 times, compared to a prediction of 34 times only a year ago.

''This sector has scaled back significantly their own expectations for sales '' said G. Steven Burrill, national director of Ernst & Young's Manufacturing/High Technology Industry Services. ''We're in a new age of realism that is apparent in the area of financial expectations where biotech sales have been scaled by half what they were a year ago.''

In contrast to previous years, when biotech companies sought to become vertically-integrated, Burrill said, the newest strategies of small and mid-size companies involves creating products with the goal of forming alliances with larger partners. An example, he said, was Genentech's

''About 61 percent of the industry now says its goal is to build alliances or gain corporate partners,'' Burrill said in a West Coast teleconference interview.

The survey said the industry's future would be marked by:

- increased stratification between top-tier and other companies.

- A greater focus on commercial developments.

- Increased reliance on strategic alliances, especially foreign ones.

- More conservative estimates regarding growth, sales and capital needs.

- Niche rather than vertically-integrated marketing strategies.

''For most biotechnology companies, the expectation of becoming a fully integrated, billion-dollar corporation has been scaled back,'' Burrill said. ''These companies now recognize they cannot go it alone in the 1990s.

''As a result, the competition is heating up to find strong partners who can help biotech companies prepare for continued growth and commercial success.

Nowhere is that reality more evident than in the decision of industry leader, Genentech, to sell a majority stake in the company to pharmaceutical giant Hoffmann-La Roche.''

He said nearly half the chief executive officers who responded to the survey from 422 companies expect to buy out another company in the next five years. Another 39 percent said they would be acquired in that time period and 32 percent said they would merge with another company of equal size.

Kenneth Lee, national director of Ernst and Young's Life Sciences Industry Services, said the survey showed that three-fourths of the CEO's had no preference between selling their companies to foreign or domestic interests.

''Recent foreign acquisitons have had a significant impact on the industry,'' Lee said. ''These acquisitions demonstrate a new method for companies to realize corporate value while meeting the demands for capital and marketing resources.''

While biotech is still an emerging field with significant scientific discoveries expected in the near future, Lee said, there have been some negative developments that has stifled enthusiasm. These include a backlog on patents, slow approval of new products by the EPA and the FDA, the lack of incentive for investors and the absence of a policy for state and federal regulations.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 18) UPI - The City Council urged The Boeing Co. Tuesday to reconsider its $10 million plan to import employees from Seattle to work on the B-2 Stealth bomber program in Palmdale and hire local workers instead.

The council voted 12-0 to ask Boeing to rethink its transfer of 450 workers from Washington to work on temporary assignment at Northrop Corp.'s Palmdale plant.

Last week, Mayor Tom Bradley sent a letter to Boeing Chairman Frank Shrontz, disputing Boeing's assertion that it could not find enough qualified aircraft workers in Southern California.

Councilman Nate Holden, who sponsored the council motion, said hundreds of workers have been laid off recently by aerospace companies and a large pool of qualified employees does exist locally.

Boeing spokesman Tom Koehler said Boeing did make an effort to hire Southern Californians for the B-2 project, holding 11 recruitment sessions in the region and advertising in local newspapers during the past 18 months.

''We agree that the local work force should be utilized to the maximum extent possible,'' Koehler said.

Of 1,800 people from Southern California who applied for the work on the B-2, only 250 ''had the skills we were looking for,'' Koehler said.

Those 250 have already joined the 450 workers from Seattle plus some 150 other Boeing employees who transferred for earlier projects, Koehler said. In all, about 850 workers are assigned to the B-2 project.

Boeing's contract from the federal government to build the B-2 bomber includes $10 million for housing and transportation costs for the necessary workers, including the 450 Seattle-based Boeing employees.

Koehler said once the project is finished, the 450 workers will be re-assigned to projects at Boeing's main plant in Seattle.

''This is not something unusual for the aerospace industry,'' Koehler said. ''You have to determine whether the additional costs of transferring workers offsets the costs of failing to meet productions schedules if you hire workers who don't know the job.''

NEW YORK (SEPT. 18) UPI - Insurance broker Corroon & Black Corp. said Tuesday that its board voted to reject a purchase offer from insurance group Aon Corp. in favor of pursuing a planned merger with Willis Faber PLC.

Aon last week made an unsolicited offer of $40 a share - or $840 million - in a bid to upstage London-based insurance broker Willis Faber, which had already obtained Corroon's approval for a merger at a per-share price of $33.49.

A Corroon statement said its board voted unanimously to spurn Aon's offer and reaffirmed the planned accord with Willis Faber.

''The Willis Corroon merger offers Corroon & Black shareholders a stake in one of the world's four largest insurance brokerage concerns,'' the statement quoted Corroon Chairman Richard Miller as saying.

Miller said Willis Corroon, the product of the merger, ''will have the international presence required to be an effective competitor in today's globalized industrial and financial markets.''

He said the merger ''has become the centerpiece of our longstanding plans to internationalize our operations.''

Under the agreement, Corroon holders will receive 7.8 shares of Willis Faber stock for each share of Corroon.

Patrick Ryan, chairman of Chicago-based Aon, made the acquisition bid in a letter delivered to Corroon & Black Sept. 12, just two weeks before shareholders of Corroon and Willis were to meet to approve the merger.

In that letter, Ryan pledged that Aon would not pursue the acquisition if it were opposed by the Corroon board. Corroon said Tuesday it ''wishes to consider the matter closed and proceed with the merger with Willis Faber.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 18) UPI - A confirmation hearing for Supreme Court nominee David Souter degenerated Tuesday into a name-calling session among Republican senators and several prominent feminists testifying against the nomination.

The unusually rancorous exchange came 8 1/2 hours into a session where supporters and opponents of Souter testified before the 14-member Senate Judiciary Committee, which considers the nomination before the full Senate votes on confirmation.

The six women, including some of the nation's most well-known leaders of women's groups, accused the senators of sexism and seeking to mute their opposition to Souter, who they claimed will become the swing vote toward overturning the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., at one point rebuked the women for ''casting a glance and a shrug (saying), 'Who are these boobs and why didn't they listen to me?'''

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., earlier addressed the witnesses, saying, ''We have a group of lovely ladies here. Thank you for your presence. I have no questions.''

Also, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., engaged in a heated debate with Elizabeth Holtzman, New York City's comptroller and a former representative from the state, about a Souter ruling on a 1988 case in which the New Hampshire jurist reversed a rape conviction, saying evidence about sexually provocative behavior prior to the assault should have been allowed into the trial.

''They were lecturing us like school girls,'' Eleanor Smeal, president of the Fund for the Feminist Majority, told reporters after the incident. ''We were powerless. They would not stop talking so that we could answer the questions. Of course we don't want to be talked down to and to be talked (to) about our looks, that we're lovely young ladies. It's insulting.''

''I can't tell you how strongly we felt that no man would have been treated as we were before the Senate Judiciary Committee,'' Smeal added.

''He was spanking me,'' Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, said of Simpson.

Also sitting on the panel was Norma McCorvey, the woman known as Jane Roe, whose case led to the Roe vs. Wade decision.

''I don't think all men are evil,'' said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, who was not a member of the panel but testified earlier in the hearing. ''But that display in there, I think, is evidence of how little understanding there is at what's at stake here.''

The exchange followed emotional pleas to the committee to reject the nomination of Souter, a New Hampshire federal appeals court judge.

Souter supporters testified that predictions on how he would decide such key issues as abortion are premature because the nominee, as the head of the New Hampshire Bar Association testified, ''simply does not prejudge cases.''

The women's groups and pro-choice groups criticized Souter's refusal to reveal his personal views on abortion and his refusal to state publicly his belief in a woman's ''fundamental right'' to abortion, but did not attack the nominee's judicial competence.

The Supreme Court's landmark Roe vs. Wade ruling guaranteed a woman's right to an abortion. However, the high court has chipped away at the ruling in recent years, particularly in upholding a Missouri law placing severe restrictions on abortion, and is seen as just one vote from overturning Roe vs. Wade.

''I hope you can live with your conscience because the burden's on you,'' Smeal told the senators. ''We will hold you accountable.''

''We are not wrong,'' Yard testified. ''(Souter) will be the fifth vote to overturn Roe vs. Wade.''

DAYTON, OHIO (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Leo W. Ladehoff, chairman and chief executive officer of Amcast Industrial Corp. (NYSE:AIZ), said Wednesday that the company will make a special provision estimated at $16.5 million, or $2.43 per share, in its 1990 fourth quarter.

The results for fiscal 1990 ended Aug. 31, including the provision, will be released in mid-October.

Detailing the provision, Ladehoff said, ''A significant portion is associated with the large iron foundries we closed several years ago. Sharply higher health care and workers compensation costs for retirees and former employees have exceeded estimates and continue to rise. In fact, an August ruling by the Ohio Supreme Court will increase certain future benefit costs of former employees by almost $2 million.

''We must have reserves for these escalating costs, as well as for environmental and legal liabilities, in order to properly reflect the future earnings capability of the company.

''The provision also recognizes a reduction in the value of certain intangible assets and equipment of several acquired companies caused by changing market and competitive conditions. By lowering the investment in these businesses, we will have more flexibility to pursue alternatives for improving returns or, if unsuccessful, disposition of these businesses.'' He said that these actions leave the company in sound financial condition.

Turning to current business conditions, Ladehoff said that, with the country leaning toward recession, three of Amcast's primary markets -- automotive, aerospace/aviation and construction -- are under compression, thus the company has launched an aggressive program to improve short-term profitability.

Consistent with this activity, Ladehoff said that, effective Sept. 20, he had been elected to the additional post of president and will reassume that office in addition to his current responsibility, replacing Raymond J. Birkholz who is leaving Amcast.

Amcast Industrial Corp. is a manufacturer of technology-intensive metal products. Its two primary businesses are proprietary FLOW CONTROL PRODUCTS marketed through national distribution channels, and ENGINEERED COMPONENTS for original equipment manufacturers. The company serves four major sectors of the economy: aerospace/aviation/defense, construction, automotive and general industry.

ANTELOPE VALLEY, CALIF. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Harris' Department Stores continues its expansion with the opening of its second store this year.

Located in the Antelope Valley Mall, this store brings Harris' total to eight and is the company's second store located outside the Inland Empire area.

The Harris Co. opened a store in the East Hills Mall in Bakersfield in April 1990. The Bakersfield store was created as the architectural prototype for future Harris' stores. The Antelope Valley store is designed around this new style with beautiful Italian granite and tile both inside and out and a more intimate ''boutique'' atmosphere in each area of the store.

Harris' brings exciting fashions, style and a new shopping ambience to the Antelope Valley as one of the four anchor stores of this new regional mall. To date, the 115,000-square-foot store is Harris' largest single-level location. With its apparel lines of many leading designers for women, men and children, Harris' offers fashion flair for eveyone's enjoyment.

''We know this new mall will bring customers the shopping convenience they've been waiting for and Harris' strives to offer fashion and home furnishings that are both contemporary and classic,'' said Jorge Pont, president and chief executive officer, Harris'. ''We want our customers in the Antelope Valley to rely on Harris' for the best selection and service -- we feel these are the keys to our success and we are committed to meeting our customers' needs.''

In addition to its cosmetic and fragrance offerings, Harris' has two full-treatment facial salons to pamper and rejuvenate customers: Lancome's Institut de Beaute and Adrien Arpel.

Harris' is staffed by more than 150 sales and management personnel. General Manager Judy Wolyn is an Antelope Valley resident and previously was general manager of Harris' Hemet and Victorville stores.

Founded in 1905 by Herman, Phillip and Arthur Harris in San Bernardino, Calif. The Harris Co. was originally a dry goods store. Harris' parent company, El Corte Ingles, the largest retailer in Spain, acquired Harris' in 1981.

SANTA CRUZ, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - TGV Inc. is shipping MultiNet V2.2.

Already considered the fastest TCP/IP implementation for DEC's VAX/VMS, MultiNet V2.2 increases throughput speed with lower resource consumption. Percentage improvement ranges from 25 percent to 145 percent depending on loads and environment. Memory usage is reduced 30 percent to 50 percent.

New performance improving features include:

-- Enhanced Ethernet Driver copies a network packet into memory once and thereafter references the packet with a pointer. This enhancement reduces the number of data copies which requires fewer CPU cycles and enables more packets per cycle.

-- New device driver scheme loads only those drivers for attached devices into memory instead of the drivers for all devices provided with MultiNet V2.2. This dynamic loading of drivers into the network kernel reduces overall memory requirements and allows for larger network configurations.

-- 'Van Jacobson Header Compression' in SLIP (Serial Line IP) saves each type of packet header information as a template with identifiers. When a network packet is sent over asynchronous serial lines, the header information is compressed to its identifiers, sent, and then decompressed once received.

MultiNet V2.2 is available now directly from TGV Inc. Compatible with VMS 4.5 and later, prices range from $1,200 to $24,000 depending on the hardware configuration.

SANTA CRUZ, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - TGV Inc.'s latest MultiNet release, version 2.2, adds several new features and capabilities that give VAX/VMS users even greater benefits than previous releases.

SMTP (Simple Mail Transfer Protocol) now supports mail aliases and mailing lists as well as simple Email gateway functionality.

Reverse ARP (RARP) protocol provides diskless workstation booting.

RCP (Remote Copy) is an additional utility provided to copy files to and from UNIX systems.

Local Time Zone enables users to specify local time from the over 30 time zones built-in to MultiNet V2.2 or specify another time zone. MultiNet V2.2 automatically converts between Greenwich Mean Time and local time. This is a particularly valuable service for international communication.

Drivers for shared Proteon proNET-10 and proNET-80 interfaces enable users to participate in Proteon's Token-Ring networks.

MultiNet's NFS Client and NFS Server V2.2 products now support 'per host' UID/GID (User Identifier/Group Identifier) mappings. This allows hosts running the MultiNet V2.2 NFS products to support access to and from hosts that have different UID/GID assignments.

MultiNet V2.2 is available now directly from TGV Inc. Compatible with VMS 4.5 and later, prices for MultiNet V2.2 range from $1,200 to $24,000 depending on the hardware configuration.

Prices for MutliNet's NFS Client and NFS Server V2.2 range from $400 to $1,200.

PORTLAND, OR (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Computerized Thermal Imaging Inc. (OTC:CTI; Bulletin Board:3COII)(CTI), a technology leader in medical diagnostic computerized thermal imaging, Tuesday announced an agreement with Chicago-area-based American Sales Associates Inc., a national organization specializing in medical and hospital sales.

American Sales Associates Inc.'s combined individuals' sales to the medical-hospital market in 1989 exceeded $200 million, with a sales presence in all major U.S. hospital systems.

CTI's affiliation with American Sales Associates Inc. encompasses not only sales but market development, account management, product penetration and monitoring equipment usage.

Computerized Thermal Imaging is a non-invasive, harmless technique using the body's own infrared energy like a road map to detect abnormalities in human physiology. By 1992 CTI units are anticipated in substantially all hospitals and clinics, as well as used by two percent of all hospital-related physicians. CTI's technological innovations have been achieved through exclusive agreements with other industry leaders and the State University of New York, Buffalo.

CTI is headquartered near Portland, Ore.

SAN JOSE, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Businessland Inc. (NYSE:BLI) Wednesday announced a comprehensive four-point program to significantly reduce annual operating expenses in all segments of its business.

1. Merge ComputerCraft retail operations into Businessland to reduce management and facilities costs and gain economies in marketing to small businesses.

2. Reduce worldwide staffing by 10 percent.

3. Reduce worldwide inventories by $50 million.

4. Eliminate a layer of management from the field sales organization with the appointment of Michael J. Poehner as senior vice president, sales and marketing.

ComputerCraft, the retail subsidiary of Businessland, which operates primarily in Texas and Northern California, will be merged into mainstream Businessland operations.

The ComputerCraft headquarters in Houston has already moved to the Businessland corporate offices in San Jose to take advantage of Businessland systems and economies of scale. As a result, Businessland will develop additional marketing programs targeted to small- and medium-sized businesses.

Worldwide staffing levels are being reduced by 10 percent. The company has made necessary cuts to reduce expenses while maintaining its levels of distribution, integration, service and support.

The company has a program in place to reduce worldwide inventories by $50 million. A multimillion dollar investment made late last year in inventory management software will help to achieve these goals.

Michael J. Poehner has been promoted to the position of senior vice president, sales and marketing from Eastern region vice president where he consistenly delivered profitability for Businessland. Poehner has an exceptional track record during his career.

With the appointment of Michael Poehner as senior vice president, sales and marketing, Businessland eliminated a layer of field management and brought the corporate organization closer to the customer.

This follows steps taken by the company in July that gave additional decision-making power to the area directors to promote increased flexibility and responsiveness to their customers. The area directors now report to Poehner.

Founded in 1982, Businessland Inc. is an international leader in the distribution, integration and support of microcomputer and workstation systems for business. The company integrates products from selected manufacturers to create systems tailored to specific customer needs and provides the high-level service and support to maximize their productivity.

Businessland operates centers and branch offices in 50 major U.S. metropolitan areas, five metropolitan markets in Great Britain, three in West Germany, five in Canada and one in Japan. Businessland reported sales of $1.35 billion in fiscal 1990.

TORONTO (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Health Care Products Inc. (TSE:HCP.A, NASDAQ:HCPFC) is pleased to announce that the majority of the company's debt has now been eliminated under an agreement with its merchant bankers, Osaka Financial Corp.

In consideration of the sum of $498,000 advanced by Osaka, the company has issued to Osaka, by way of private placement, 873,684 Class A subordinate voting shares (at a price of 57 cents per share) and a non-transferable warrant entitling Osaka to purchase up to an additional 600,000 Class A shares until May 31, 1993 at prices ranging from $1.05 per share to $3.25 per share.

The company's debt position has now been reduced from $1.5 million (at the end of 1989) to approximately $80,000 in current payables. Together with one long term debt to Osaka of approximately $125,000 (representing additional funds advanced to the company by Osaka).

Under its loan arrangements with Osaka, Health Care is obligated to pay interest at the rate of one percent per annum, simple interest, with the loan maturing January 1993.

As a result of such improvements to the company's financial position, it may now more actively pursue the marketing of its infection control products world-wide and use its on-hand inventory, receivables and other assets to achieve these objectives.

MENLO PARK, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Elliott Grossbard, M.D., former Director of Clinical Research at Genentech, has joined Matrix Pharmaceutical in the newly created position of vice president of Regulatory and Clinical Affairs.

Matrix Pharmaceutical is a biomedical company focusing on targeted drug delivery systems for cancer and hyperproliferative diseases.

Dr. Grossbard, age 42, joined Genentech in 1982. His primary role was to oversee clinical development of the company's blood clot dissolving drug, Activase (tissue plasminogen activator or TPA), from the inception of human studies through regulatory approval for the treatment of heart attacks (1987) and pulmonary embolism (1990).

From 1983-84, he also served as an Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine at Stanford University. Prior to joining Genentech, Dr. Grossbard held the position of Senior Research Physician at Hoffmann-La Roche.

Previously, as a practicing physician, he served as a visiting attending physician at Harlem Hospital in New York; Assistant Director of the Marrow Transplant Unit and an attending physician at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, and Assistant Professor of Medicine at Cornell University Medical Center.

Dr. Grossbard has published widely in scientific and medical journals. He also has been a guest speaker at numerous symposiums and medical journals. He received his M.D. from Columbia University and later earned an M.S. in Law from Yale University School of Law.

Current clinical studies involve products based on the company's Therapeutic Implant drug delivery system, which concentrates the impact of potent chemotherapeutic drugs and biologicals at the site of diseased tissues. This patented technology is designed to minimize the effect of therapy on the rest of the body and potentially allow high enough dosage levels to overcome drug resistance.

Among the objectives: to increase the effectiveness of treatment for chronic conditions that do not respond well to current therapies; to treat and spare diseased organs and other critical tissues that might otherwise be removed surgically; to reduce treatment side effects; and to broaden clinical indications for potent drug therapies.

Matrix Pharmaceutical is a privately held company headquartered in Menlo Park.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Tenneco Inc. Wednesday announced the approval of a major capital project to further expand production capacity at its Tenneco Minerals Co. division Green River, Wyo., trona mine and soda ash plant.

The project will add facilities to process an additional one million tons of trona ore per year into calcined trona, with the ability to increase the processing rate to 1.5 million tons per year in the future.

Calcined trona is a feedstock used to make products including soda ash, sodium sulfite, caustic soda and other sodium chemicals. If all the production of the expanded capacity were used to produce caustic soda, the project would provide enough feedstock for 750,000 tons of the product per year, or about six percent of U.S. industry demand. The unusually high quality of this trona ore further enhances this project.

The opportunity for this expansion is the result of the declining use of chlorine in pulp bleaching and other chlorine end uses while caustic soda demand continues to grow. Currently, more than 98 percent of all caustic soda is produced by the electrolysis of salt brine which yields a nearly equal amount of chlorine.

David R. Delling, president of Tenneco Minerals Co., also reported that three other company projects have been completed or are progressing on schedule, including:

-- Completion of the company's second stage debottlenecking of soda ash capacity at the Green River plant last month, bringing current capacity of refined soda ash to 1.25 million tons per year.

-- Engineering planning and development for the Asahi Glass Co. joint venture announced earlier this year, which will expand refined soda ash production by 600,000 tons per year, is ongoing with plant completion set for mid-1992.

-- And, construction on another new project, which will produce 75,000 tons per year of caustic soda and 50,000 tons per year of sodium sulfite at the Green River plant, is now approximately 40 percent complete with facilities expected to come on stream at the end of the first quarter of 1991.

Tenneco Minerals Co., a unit of Houston-based Tenneco Inc., is headquartered in Lakewood, Colo.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - W. Talbot Daley will join Sutro & Co. as senior vice president, director of investment research announced Jack Luikart, the firm's president.

The appointment becomes effective on Oct. 1.

''Tal's background provides a unique combination of analytical, trading, administrative and retail broker expertise. We think the match is ideal and we are delighted he has agreed to come on board,'' stated Luikart.

Daley, 36, comes to Sutro & Co. from Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc. in Baltimore, Md. where he held the post of director of equity marketing. In this capacity, he was a member of the investment policy committee and the marketing committee served as the research department staff manager, and was responsible for providing economic, equity and market information to the firm's retail system.

Daley began his investment career with Legg Mason in 1983 as a broker, was promoted to assistant branch manager one year later, and was appointed director of equity marketing in May 1987.

From 1979 to 1983, Daley was associated with Dun and Bradstreet Financial Services as a district manager. He previously worked as a sales manager with two Johnson & Johnson divisions, baby products and Jansen Pharmaceutical.

Daley received a B.A. form Susquehannan University in history with an economics minor.

A current resident of Maryland, Daley, his wife, Janet and two children will relocate to the Bay Area.

Sutro & Co.'s Research Department concentrates on the industries and mid-sized companies of the West, which are often underfollowed by the rest of Wall Street. Industries covered include, biotechnology, consumer products and services, specialty retailing, financial services, leisure time, technology, and special situations.

This proprietary research is supplemented by Sutro & Co.'s National Research Correspondent, which supplies top-ranked analysis on large, national and international companies. In addition, Tucker Anthony, a Boston-based investment firm and fellow member of the John Hancock Family of companies, provides highly respected regional research on industries and companies located on the eastern seaboard.

''Sutro & Co.'s investment research will continue to reflect our regional focus. Tal will serve on the firm's Investment Policy Committee and will also be working closely with some of our other departments, such as Trading, Syndicate, and Corporate Finance,'' Luikart added.

Sutro & Co. Inc., founded in 1858, is the longest-established investment firm in the West. It is a wholly-owned subsidiary of John Hancock Freedom Securities. The firm is engaged in securities brokerage and investment banking as well as a full range of financial services focused on individuals and institutional investment firms nationwide.

SEATTLE (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - An exclusive crop of what experts consider the world's finest coffee beans will make its North American brewing debut in Seattle.

Starbucks Coffee Co. President and Chief Executive Officer Howard Schultz announced Wednesday the Seattle-based coffee company has purchased the entire crop of Colombia's finest coffee beans.

Previously available only in Western Europe, the Colombia Narino Supremo coffee beans have been shipped to the Northwest after a painstaking 4,000 mile year-long odyssey by Starbucks' officials. The entire 1990 crop was purchased by Starbucks.

''The Colombians wanted this coffee to go to people who could appreciate it,'' Schultz said. ''Starbucks' coffee drinkers are known worldwide as discerning customers. They will appreciate and deserve the high quality of Narino Supremo.''

Schultz said Starbucks Vice President for Commodities Dave Olsen spent the better part of a year negotiating for the crop.

''With Starbucks' unique combination of concern for quality and increasing demand, we were willing and able to do what few -- if any -- roasters could do; we purchased an entire crop of the world's finest coffee in quantity,'' Olsen said. ''We look forward to a long-term relationship with the Narino Supremo growers and expect to purchase future crops.''

Colombia Narino Supremo is an intensely aromatic and full-bodied coffee. It is grown in perfect conditions: at an altitude of 6,200 feet in the Andes Mountains of South America where days are warm, not hot and evenings cool, not cold.

The coffee's name reflects its origin; Narino for the region where the beans are grown, Supremo for the highest grade of bean.

Schultz said the first roasting of the beans is currently under way in Starbucks' exclusive Seattle roasting facility. It will be available in whole bean form in all Starbucks stores and through mail-order.

ANAHEIM, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Carl's Jr. is serving more than charbroiled hamburgers these days.

The company is serving more employees and eligible family members a college education through its recently expanded Carl's Jr. Pre-paid Educational Assistance Program.

Carl's Jr. has added 36 participating restaurants in central California: Arroyo Grande, Atascadero, Bakersfield, Buttonwillow, Clovis, Fresno, Hanford, Kettleman City, Lompoc, Madera, Merced, Paso Robles, San Luis Obispo, Santa Maria, Selma, Turlock and Visalia. They have also added six selected restaurants in Clayton, Cupertino, San Ramon, Santa Clara and Santa Rosa to the pilot program.

As a chain, Carl's Jr. is among the first major corporations in the restaurant industry to endorse and test a pre-paid educational benefit. In August 1989 the program was introduced in nine Orange County Carl's Jr. restaurants, expanding the following January to six additional restaurants near Los Angeles and Fresno. Currently 57 restaurants are participating in the program.

''The management of Carl's Jr. has been enthusiastic about this program since its inception,'' Vice President of Human Resources John Kubas said. ''We are expanding our pilot program to encourage employee participation on a larger scale,'' he said.

The educational assistance program is designed to pre-pay all or part of the fees for an accredited college or a state-approved school. The hours worked weekly determine the amount of benefits provided. Employees working 10-15 hours receive up to $180, those working 16-25 hours receive up to $280 and those working 26 hours or more receive up to $405.

A book allowance of $30 per course and $25 travel allowance is paid per term regardless of the number of hours worked. The benefit is paid as many as three times annually.

Unlike other companies, Carl's Jr. pre-pays fees, so a lack of money doesn't have to be a barrier to higher education. An employee can use his or her benefit personally or can transfer the benefit to an eligible family member.

Brothers can pass the benefit to sisters (or vice versa), mothers and fathers can pass the benefit to children, grandparents can pass to children or grandchildren and husbands can pass to wives (or vice versa).

Before Carl's Jr. decides to introduce the program in all company- owned restaurants, Dr. Sal D. Rinella of California State University, Fullerton, will research and evaluate the results to see if the pre-paid education incentives reduce employee turnover, attract applicants, maintain high employee morale and raise productivity.

A total of 556 Carl's Jr. restaurants are located in California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon and Japan. Carl Karcher Enterprises (NASDAQ:CARL), which owns, operates, franchises or licenses the Carl's Jr. concept, is the parent company of Carl's Jr. restaurants.

SAN FERNANDO, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - SFE Technologies (NASDAQ:SFEM) Wednesday reported that Michael Rosenberg, president, has resigned from the board of directors.

Rosenberg stated in his letter of resignation that he is approaching several investor groups with a proposal to purchase the San Fernando Electric Division of SFE Technologies. Rosenberg did not want his position on the board of directors of SFE Technologies to be perceived as a conflict of interest in any negotiations that may result and therefore felt that his resignation would be prudent.

Rosenberg retains his position as president and chief operating officer of SFE Technologies.

Previously, Donald Rubendall resigned from the SFE board due to health reasons and Donald Butler resigned due to time pressures. The board of directors voted to amend the company's by-laws to provide for a board of four directors.

William Kuehn, chairman, stated that he wished Rosenberg well in his efforts to arrange a purchase of the San Fernando Electric division and advised that the company would continue in its efforts for financial restructuring and sale of certain operations.

PALO ALTO, CALIF. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - For the first time, business teams can use the power of Xerox Corp.'s workgroup computing applications on UNIX, OS/2 and DOS industry-standard desktop computers. This capability is now available with the new Xerox GlobalView network computing environment, the company announced Wednesday.

The Xerox announcement, made at the Xerox Palo Alto Research Center (PARC), includes the introduction of two major hardware products and one workgroup software package: the Xerox 6520 workstation, based on SPAR/UNIX technology from Sun Microsystems Inc.; GlobalView-for-the-PC, a coprocessor board that turn DOS and OS/2 personal computers into multitasking, networked workstations; and a sophisticated new workgroup software product called DocuTeam, which represents one of the first network-based products designed to integrate individual users into productive business teams.

The two new hardware products, part of a strategic move by Xerox to make its workgroup software usable on industry-standard desktop computers, have the potential to link over 30 million installed desktop computers into enterprise-wide environments.

Xerox GlobalView is a networked desktop environment that integrates functions previously available only as isolated features. The purpose of GlobalView is to improve white-collar productivity by making computers easy to use and interconnected so that individuals in the same office or in locations around the world can work together.

GlobalView is specifically designed to help business teams collaborate across computer networks, providing the foundation for a broad range of applications including integrating text, graphics and data into compound documents; managing projects and teamwork; accessing and sharing documents across networks; and supporting enterprise-wide communications.

Applications built upon GlobalView also support more than 100 foreign languages and dialects, rich graphics capabilities and transparent access to corporate data on host or departmental computers.

Through the Xerox icon-based graphical user interface (GUI), GlobalView makes it easy for non-technical professionals to perform complex tasks that would normally require the expertise of a management information systems (MIS) professional. Applications running under GlobalView share the same consistent GUI, and users benefit from the high degree of integration that it provides.

For customer information contact Xerox at 1-800/835-9013.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - MagneTek Inc. (NYSE:MAG), a leading U.S.-based electrical equipment manufacturer, Wednesday announced that it has signed an agreement for the manufacture of fluorescent lighting ballasts with Goldstar Instrument and Electric Co. Ltd., a unit of Lucky Goldstar, Seoul, Korea.

Under terms of the agreement, Goldstar will manufacture in Korea under license MagneTek's Triad brand electronic ballasts to supplement domestic production and for sale in markets in the Far East and Pacific Rim. Ballasts are transformers that regulate the operation of fluorescent lamps.

MagneTek is the largest U.S. manufacturer of electronic lighting ballasts, which reduce electricity consumption up to 40 percent when used with energy-saving fluorescent lamps. The MagneTek-Goldstar agreement also contemplates strategic cooperation on sales of such other MagneTek lighting products as high-intensity-discharge lighting ballasts, sign ballasts and neon transformers.

According to MagneTek President and Chief Executive Officer Frank Perna Jr., the agreement gives MagneTek added production capacity to meet rapidly growing demand for energy-efficient ballasts, both in the United States and abroad. U.S. law calls for adoption of energy-saving ballasts in 80 percent of all fluorescent lighting applications.

Approximately 1.6 billion conventional ballasts currently in use in the United States are expected to be replaced with energy-efficient types over the next decade, a process which is beingaccelerated by utility rebate programs, Perna noted.

''Our strategic alliance with Goldstar also gives MagneTek access to well-established, worldwide marketing channels for both our standard and energy-saving lighting products,'' Perna added.

With headquarters in Los Angeles, MagneTek provides a wide range of Energy Engineered electrical equipment and services to utilities and industrial customers. The company operates 50 manufacturing and service facilities throughout North America and overseas, and employs some 15,000 associates. MagneTek reported sales of $1.1 billion for its fiscal year ended June 30, 1990.

LA JOLLA, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Precision Aerotech Inc. (ASE:PAR) Wednesday announced a 1 percent increase in sales to $16,967,000 for the three months ended July 31, compared with sales of $16,759,000 for the like period a year ago.

The company reported a loss from continuing operations of $731,000, or 23 cents per share, for the three months ended July 31, 1990, compared with income of $144,000, or 2 cents per share, for the like period a year ago.

Sales increased at the Speedring Inc., Speedring Systems Inc. and Coast Aerotech Inc. (''Coast'') subsidiaries. The planned restructuring and downsizing at Aero Technologies Inc. (''Aero'') resulted in lower sales compared with the like period a year ago. Sales at the L&S Aerotech Inc. subsidiary were also below the like period a year ago, consistent with current year plans.

Manufacturing margins for the three months ended July 31, 1990, exceeded plan and those reported for the like period a year ago at all subsidiaries except Aero and Coast. However, Aero's margins surpassed current year plans and actual results reported for the full 12 months of the prior year. The consolidated loss for the three months ended July 31, 1990, is attributable to Coast.

Concerns regarding backlog profitability at Coast continue to receive intense subsidiary and corporate management involvement and action.

Backlog of unfilled orders at July 31, 1990, was $68.1 million, which is comparable with that at April 30, 1990.

IRVINE, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Adding to its line of memory-expansion products for Compaq personal computers, AMKLY Systems Inc. Wednesday announced the first 4-megabyte board for the popular LTE/286 laptop PC.

The AMpac-40LTE286, with a $1495 suggested list price, is now shipping and available through computer dealers serving the Compaq market.

AMKLY earlier introduced 1MB ($595) and 2MB ($995) memory-expansion configurations for Compaq LTE/286 users looking for additional memory at a lower cost than comparable products, including Compaqs.

All three products are sold with a standard five-year warranty and include complete installation and user documentation.

AMKLY also provides memory-expansion boards and modules and Single In-line Memory Modules (SIMMs) for Compaq's Deskpro, Systempro and N-series products.

''The laptop PC market is growing at a 40 percent rate annually. Shipments are expected to leap from 755,000 units this year to 1.04 million units by 1993 and, according to one independent study, Compaq holds a major share of the U.S. market,'' explained Albert C. Wong, AMKLY president and former founding partner of AST Research Inc.

FREMONT, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Vitalink Communications Corp., a leading LAN internetworking company Wednesday announced it has completed a restructuring of its organization to reduce expenditures and increase focus on product development.

To achieve these objectives, the company has consolidated some field sales offices and downsized its work force by approximately 10 percent, representing 32 employees.

''In spite of the fact that Vitalink has achieved continued profitability, we are seeing a slowness in orders worldwide which we attribute to general economic uncertainties and current business conditions,'' said Donald J. Herman, Vitalink's chairman and chief executive officer.

''We recognize the impact these uncertainties may have on the future revenue and earnings of our company and believe this restructuring to be a prudent decision in anticipation of these conditions.''

Commenting on Vitalink's need to bring new products to market, Herman said: ''These changes will result in a significant increase in our product development investment in fiscal 1991 -- in terms of absolute dollars and as percentage of revenue. This should enable us to increase our focus on existing and potential LAN internetworking opportunities.''

During fiscal year 1990, Vitalink announced several programs with a goal to position the comapny as a primary supplier of router-based LAN interconnect processors. These programs include the support of additional network protocols on its TransPATH family of bridge/router systems.

By October 1990, TransPATH will support TCP/IP, XNS, IPX, EGP and IBM source routing with DECnet Phase IV, OSI/GOSIP and X.25 to follow. With these enhancements Vitalink will address new markets beyond those served with its industy-leading bridge systems.

Founded in 1980, Vitalink Communications Corp. manufactures and markets a family of LAN interconnect processors including Ethernet and Token-Ring bridges and bridge/routers, and a comprehensive network management system. Over 13,000 systems are installed worldwide, reflecting the company's position as a leading supplier of advanced internetworking systems used to build large, multivendor computer networks.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Ronald G. Domer, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. manager of hydro engineering and construction since 1989, Wednesday was elected vice president engineering by the PG&E board of directors.

His election is effective Oct. 1.

He will replace William H. Wallace, who is taking early retirement.

Domer joined PG&E as chief civil engineer in 1987 after 27 years with the Tennessee Valley Authority. His assignments at TVA included chief civil engineer and manager of project engineering.

Raised in Oak Ridge, Tenn., Domer earned a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Tennessee in 1959 and master's and Ph.D. degrees in engineering mechanics from the same university in 1965 and 1973.

Domer is a registered professional engineer (civil) in California and Tennessee. He is a fellow of the American Society of Civil Engineers, chaired the society's structural division and has served as a member of several other ASCE committees. He is currently a member of the board of directors of the U.S. Committee on Large Dams.

He has visited Europe, Africa and Asia as a member of various engineering working groups, including a hydropower delegation to China in 1984. He has authored numerous articles for technical and professional journals.

Domer and his wife, Beverly, reside in Danville. They are parents of three grown children.

Wallace joined PG&E in 1958 following graduation from the University of California, Berkeley. After a series of engineering and engineering computer applications assignments, he was elected vice president computer systems and services in 1981 and vice president engineering in 1987.

His many contributions to PG&E include advances in power plant automation and business and technical computing systems.

ENGLEWOOD, CO. (SEPT. 19) BIZWIRE - U S WEST has been named one of America's 75 best companies for working mothers by Working Mother Magazine.

In the October issue, U S WEST was named one of the companies that is ''light years ahead of the competition'' in making pro-family changes and enabling its employees to balance work and family.

Working Mother made its selection based on wages compared to industry competition, opportunities for women to advance, support for childcare, and benefits such as maternity leave, flextime, job sharing and telecommuting.

The magazine said U S WEST has more high-ranking women than any other telephone company. Working Mother also recognized the company as the first to launch an accelerated development program for women of color.

''We're pleased that we're being recognized as one of the best companies for working mothers,'' U S WEST President Dick McCormick said. ''Our motivation in creating a superior environment for our employees is not just to be nice. We can't afford to lose our experienced women employees. The payoff is a talented and dedicated workforce that contributes significantly to our business objectives.''

U S WEST owns U S WEST Communications and other companies involved in communications, data solutions, marketing services and financial services.

PALO ALTO, CA. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Silicon Valley Bank (NASDAQ:SIVB) announced the opening of a regional branch office in Southern California in Orange County, across from the Orange County Airport, stated Roger V. Smith, president and chief executive officer.

The branch office is located at 4600 Campus Drive, 105, in Newport Beach; the phone number is 714/252-1300.

Smith said: ''Our research and feedback from the venture capital community indicates a lack of any one clear provider of financial services to the Southern California technology marketplace.

''We have already established a solid base of Southern California technology company relationships and referral sources from both the venture capital community and existing Technology Division clients.''

Senior Vice President James F. Forrester, a four year veteran of the bank's technology division, has moved to Southern California and will manage the office. Forrester's 18 year banking career includes experience in commercial lending and managing multi-million dollar client portfolios, along with a specialty in cash management services and trade finance.

The Southern California Regional Branch Office will enhance the banking services provided to our existing Southern California clients who have been serviced from the bank's Technology Center in Santa Clara, Calif. The office will also benefit our many Northern California clients conducting business in Southern California.

In May, Silicon Valley Bank opened a loan production office in Wellesley, Mass., along Route 128. This area is the center of the highest concentration of technology companies on the East Coast. The bank also has five offices in Silicon Valley: San Jose, Santa Clara, downtown San Jose, Palo Alto and 3000 Sand Hill Road, in Menlo Park.

Silicon Valley Bancshares, parent company of Silicon Valley Bank, reported net income increased 50 percent to $2,475,000, or 43 cents per share, for the quarter ended June 30. Total assets were $573 million at June 30, up 78 percent over last year.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Litton Industries Inc. announced Wednesday that it has begun the underwritten offering of $1 billion face value Liquid Yield Option Notes (LYONs) due Sept. 26, 2010.

The offering is expected to result in approximately $258 million net proceeds to Litton, which will be used by the company to reduce existing debt.

LYONs are convertible zero coupon subordinated notes that have no periodic interest payments.

The LYONs, which have investment-grade rating, are priced at $265.08 per $1,000 principal amount at maturity. This represents an annual yield to maturity of 6.75 percent. The conversion rate per LYON is 3.063 shares of Litton common stock, representing an initial conversion price of $86.54.

''In light of current market conditions, we are pleased with the interest generated by this issue,'' said Orion L. Hoch, Litton chairman and chief executive officer. ''It shows the confidence of investors in our businesses and our strong financial position.''

Merrill Lynch Capital Markets is acting as sole underwriter for the offering.

Litton is a technology-based company providing advanced electronic and defense systems, resource exploration services and industrial automation systems to U.S. and world markets.

OREM, UT (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Wicat Systems Inc. Wednesday announced that it has signed an agreement with Pratt & Whitney to provide computer-based training (CBT) for the PW4400 aircraft engine, applicable to the McDonnell Douglas MD-11 aircraft.

Under terms of the agreement, Wicat will produce ''Line and Base Maintenance'' training courseware that Pratt & Whitney will use in its Wethersfield, Conn., training center. The courseware will also be available to Pratt & Whitney customers for use at their maintenance training facilities.

The course will include about 35 hours of CBT instruction and will incorporate the use of interactive video to cover procedures and exercises presently taught in the Pratt & Whitney shop.

''This agreement is particularly significant because Pratt & Whitney will be the first domestic engine manufacturer to offer CBT maintenance training to its customers, and they chose Wicat,'' commented Ric Ferrentino, vice president of sales and marketing for Wicat's training division.

The courseware will run on Wicat WITS 2000 or 4000 terminals, as well as most 286- or 386-based MS-DOS computers, including the IBM PS/2 Model 80. The software can be used in a network environment or on stand-alone computers.

Wicat Systems Inc. is a world leader in technology-based training and education solutions, providing products and services to help clients achieve 30 percent to 50 percent learning improvement in schools, industry and government. Wicat's stock is traded in the NASDAQ market under the symbol WCAT.

SCOTTS VALLEY, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Borland International Inc. (NASDAQ:BORL) announced Wednesday a major upgrade to Quattro Pro, its award-winning PC spreadsheet software program that has sold more than one-half million copies since its introduction in October 1989.

The company said it will begin shipping Quattro Pro 2.0 in volume within 60 days and that it plans an aggressive upgrade promotion to registered owners of Quattro Pro 1.0 and to owners of other high-end spreadsheets, including Lotus 1-2-3 from Lotus Development Corp.

As was the case with the original Quattro Pro, version 2.0 incorporates features and presentation graphics capabilities not found in any other DOS spreadsheet program.

Borland has again based the program on its proprietary VROOMM (Virtual Runtime Object-Oriented Memory Manager) technology, which lets PC users access the next-generation capabilities of Quattro Pro without upgrading their computer hardware.

According to Dataquest, Borland's spreadsheet market share in units increased to approximately 25 percent in the first quarter of 1990, up from about 5 percent last year. A study conducted by Vista Marketing Research indicates that over 80 percent of Quattro Pro users were previously Lotus 1-2-3 users.

New features of Quattro Pro 2.0 include ''Solve For,'' a powerful goal-seeking technology that solves ''what-if'' scenarios simply; Database Connectivity, which lets users easily access and manipulate data in Borland's Paradox database program and in large mainframe computers; Enhanced Presentation Graphics, including the ability to create ''branching'' slide shows, 3-dimensional graphs, color 35-mm slide support and additional clip art images and import formats.

Quattro Pro 2.0 will have a suggested retail price of $495. The Quattro Pro LAN pack for network use will retail for $295. Registered owners of Quattro Pro 1.0 will be able to upgrade directly from Borland for $79.95. Those who purchased Quattro Pro 1.0 after July 18, 1990, will be eligible for a free upgrade.

Borland will continue to offer its $99.95 competitive upgrade to owners of other high-end spreadsheets.

ANAHEIM, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - The Clothestime Inc's (NASDAQ:CTME) board of directors Wednesday announced senior management changes and forecasted year end earnings.

Due to recent sales shortfalls resulting from a competitive retail environment and a slow down in consumer spending, management believes earnings for the year ending Jan. 26, 1991 will be in the range of 1 cent to 5 cents per share vs. 3 cents last year.

Michael De Angelo has retired as chairman and chief executive officer, and will remain a director of the company and part-time employee. Raymond De Angelo, vice chairman, has been given the added responsibilities of chief executive officer. John Ortega, formerly vice chairman, has been named chairman of the board.

In another executive change, John Shanklin has resigned as chief financial officer to pursue other interests. David Sejpal will assume the role of acting chief financial officer, reporting to Norman Abramson, president and chief operating officer. Sejpal, formerly corporate controller, has been with the company since 1986.

The Clothestime Inc. operates 370 women's apparel stores in fifteen states, offering primarily in-season, moderately priced sportswear, dresses and accessories, emphasizing brand names at a substantial discount from the more upscale department and specialty stores.

PARIS (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Farallon Computing Inc. unveiled a multipart European strategy at two important events: the opening of its European offices and a European launch tour.

Bob McNinch, director of European Sales will open the office in London on Oct. 7. The London office will be the first of three European offices that Farallon will open over the next year, and will serve as the regional hub for Northern Europe, as well as the base for pan-European personnel.

Unlike many computer application software program developers from the USA, Farallon Computing Inc. is opening its European office with its software and hardware products already localized in the major European languages. The Farallon product line will be available in French, German, English, Spanish, Swedish and Italian versions.

In addition to McNinch, key personnel from Farallon North America on the European launch tour include Reese Jones, founder and president and Thomas P. Rielly, Farallon's director of Marketing.

The rollout tour includes stops in the United Kingdom, France and Germany.

Farallon's unusual strategy -- uncommon for firms which expand into the European market from North America -- hinges on three approaches. The first is a set of three regional offices instead of the more traditional single European headquarters, in order to be closer to the markets. The second is an investment in European telecommunications research and development. The third is a massive investment in localization of existing and new Farallon products.

Farallon's existing Timbuktu/Remote application is already being tested with burgeoning ISDN services being offered by many of Europe's national telephone system operators such as British Telecom in the United Kingdom, France Telecom in France and the Deutsche Bundespost Telekom in Germany.

Farallon is the leading provider of twisted-pair networks, with more than 1 million PhoneNET System nodes in businesses, universities, and government agencies around the world. The company produces personal communications products and technologies, primarily for use on Macintosh computers.

Farallon's corporate mission is to integrate computing and telephony to enable users to communicate more effectively. Its basis for this belief is that everyone knows how to use a telephone, and by providing the tools to link computers and telephone systems, it allows users to be more effective, while maintaining the unique advantages of both technologies.

Farallon products embrace a variety of communications media, including ISDN, analog and digital voice and data. The company has 225 employees and has headquarters in Emeryville, Calif., with research facilities there, in Lawrence, Kan., and in Portland, Ore.

SAN JOSE, CALIF. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - The chairman and chief executive officer of Pacific Western Bancshares Inc. (ASE:PWB) said Wednesday that the company and its principal subsidiary, the $1.3 billion Pacific Western Bank, substantially exceed federal regulatory guidelines on capital.

''Although the GAO report last week states that many banks and bank holding companies are inadequately capitalized,'' stated Phillip R. Boyce, ''Pacific Western surpasses all new standards set by the regulators which will go into effect at year end.

''On June 30, 1990, our tier 1 risk-based capital stood at 8.01 percent, almost 2 1/2 times the standard (3.25 percent) which will be going into effect Dec. 31. Our total risk-based capital was 9.15 percent, over 1 1/4 times the requirement of 7.25 percent which will be in effect at the end of the year.

''And our leveraged capital ratio was 6.6 percent, which is 2.2 times the new regulatory guidelines of 3.0 percent.''

Total shareholders' common equity was $86.4 million on June 30, while the bank's tier 1 capital was $82.0 million. Its total leveraged capital was $93.7 million.

Boyce added that: ''The recent announcement to repurchase up to 400,000 shares of our common stock was made after concluding that our ratios will remain in excess of these new capital guidelines by similar margins.

''The continuing strength of our earnings, in spite of a somewhat less buoyant economy, is permitting Pacific Western to add to its capital base and sustain our strong reserves.''

He continued: ''Pacific Western's management team has closely monitored the banking industry environment and shares the concerns raised by FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan.

EMERYVILLE, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Chiron Corp. (NASDAQ:CHIR) Wednesday announced that it has entered into an agreement with Novo Nordisk A/S for Novo Nordisk to license certain Chiron technology for manufacture of recombinant human insulin.

This new agreement supercedes an earlier technology license between Chiron and Nordisk, which merged with Novo in 1989.

Chiron will receive an undisclosed royalty from Novo Nordisk on sales of recombinant human insulin. The agreement covers licensing of part of the technology for the production of recombinant human insulin through yeast fermentation, a technology for which Chiron has been granted patents in the United States and expects to receive patents in Europe.

''We're extremely pleased to be able to continue our collaboration with Novo Nordisk, which is the second-longest strategic relationship in Chiron's history,'' said Edward E. Penhoet, Ph.D., vice chairman and chief executive officer.

''We believe that our technology for the production of recombinant human insulin in yeast is one of the leading developments in the evolution of the biotechnology industry. This agreement with one of the world's leading suppliers of insulin affirms its commercial importance.''

Chiron and Novo Nordisk also have a collaboration for the development of recombinant Factor VIII, a clotting substance found in human blood but lacking in hemophiliacs.

Novo Nordisk A/S is a major force in insulin manufacture and diabetes treatment and is the world's largest producer of industrial enzymes. The company also manufactures a variety of other pharmaceutical and bioindustrial products. Headquartered in Denmark, Novo Nordisk employs more than 8,000 people in 30 countries and markets its products in 120 countries.

Chiron Corp., headquartered in Emeryville, applies genetic engineering and other techniques of modern biology to diagnose, treat and prevent human disease. The company is building a healthcare business by focusing on needs in four markets: diagnostics, vaccines, biopharmaceuticals and ophthalmics,

STAMFORD, CONN. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Pitney Bowes Chairman and President George B. Harvey announced Wednesday that, ''The company will no longer remanufacture used copier equipment and has determined to concentrate on new, higher-margin copiers consistent with our marketing strategy directed at serving large corporations and multi-unit installations.''

The company also said that as a result of this change in strategy it will adjust the estimated useful lives of copiers from five years to three years, establish a reserve for the disposal of copiers which previously would have been remanufactured following the old strategy and establish a reserve for costs of closing certain facilities.

The aggregate estimated one-time charge against 1990 third-quarter pre-tax earnings will be approximately $86 million, or 68 cents per share, after tax. The company expects to report full-year 1990 net income that is lower than that reported in 1989.

Harvey said: ''We believe the copier business is a significant part of our office equipment strategy. Accordingly, we undertook a comprehensive study of ways to enhance that business and concluded that concentration on new, not remanufactured, equipment is the most meaningful future course for us to achieve profitable growth in this division.

''Concentrating our energies and resources in the copier business in this way is a vital element in Pitney Bowes' corporate strategy to further strengthen our competitive position in the office equipment marketplace.

''Margins on remanufactured copiers are low and, by focusing our sales and service efforts on new and higher-value products, we believe we can improve our gross margins and enhance our after-market supplies and service revenue.

''In addition, of course, the copier business contributes to coverage of shared expenses incurred in other operations, as well as generates profits in our financial services business.

AMHERST, NY (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Mark IV Industries Inc. (NYSE:IV) Wednesday announced income from continuing operations, before investment gains and extraordinary items, for its second quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990, of $6.8 million, an 8 percent increase from $6.3 million in the same period last year.

Per share income from continuing operations, before investment gains and extraordinary items, increased 23 percent to 49 cents from 40 cents (41 cents and 35 cents fully diluted, respectively) due to both higher income and fewer shares outstanding in the current period. All per share calculations have been adjusted for the company's 5 percent stock dividend distributed on July 2 1990.

Net income for the second fiscal quarter was $6.8 million, or 49 cents per share, compared with $10.2 million, or 65 cents per share, in last year's second quarter (41 cents and 54 cents fully diluted, respectively).

Last year's second quarter results included investment gains of $2.9 million, a $.2 million loss from discontinued operations and an extraordinary gain of $1.2 million related to open market purchases of certain of the company's subordinated debentures.

Sales for the second quarter increased to $221.2 million, which includes one month's results of Ferranti-Packard Electronics, from $212.5 million in the second quarter of fiscal 1990.

For the first six months of fiscal 1991, Mark IV's income from continuing operations, excluding investment gains and extraordinary items, was $13.5 million, up 5 percent from $12.8 million in the same period last year. Comparable per share results were up 20 percent, to 95 cents from 79 cents (80 cents and 69 cents fully diluted). CUPERTINO, CALIF. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Apple Computer, Inc. Wednesday announced it has reached a major milestone in the development of its System 7.0.

Apple will begin initial shipments of beta-quality versions of System 7.0, the next version of Macintosh computer system software, to Macintosh third-party developers in October.

Apple will hold the beta cycle open to solicit thorough developer feedback and to allow them to begin developing applications to assure a wide array of System 7.0 applications for customers when the new version of system software ships. To meet Apple's exacting quality standards, they have revised estimates for customer shipments of System 7.0 from the end of 1990, to the first half of calendar 1991.

''Our commitment is to produce the highest quality system software for our developers and customers,'' said Roger Heinen, vice president of software engineering. ''Apple's internal standards for software testing are extremely rigorous, and with the additional feedback from our developers we are confident System 7.0 will shatter traditional notions of what personal computers can do.''

System software controls the way the computer works and provides a foundation for applications software such as word processing and spreadsheets. Macintosh system software is best known for producing the distinctive graphical user interface that set standards for all computing environments. System 7.0 represents the most significant enrichment to the Macintosh since its inception in 1984.

MT. LAUREL, NJ (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Tyco Toys Inc. (NASDAQ:TTOY) and Nasta International Inc. (AMEX:NAS) Wednesday jointly announced that Tyco has agreed to increase its tender offer for any and all shares of Nasta common stock to $1.25 per share in cash, including shares already tendered, and extended the offer until Oct. 3.

Tyco and Nasta said they have entered into a definitive Merger Agreement which was approved unanimously by the boards of both companies. The Merger Agreement assures that, subject to the terms and conditions of the Merger Agreement Nasta common shares not purchased in the tender offer will be converted in a merger following the tender offer into the right to receive the same $1.25 per share in cash, subject to dissenters' rights to appraisal.

Tyco and Nasta also announced that they had reached an agreement in principle to settle three purported class actions based on the increase in price, the Merger Agreement, and an agreement to pay certain attorneys' fees and expenses. The agreement in principle is subject to certain conditions, including court approval.

As of Sept. 17, 607,965 shares had been tendered pursuant to the original tender offer, and if that number of shares were purchased in the tender offer, Tyco's stake in Nasta would increase to 86 percent. Tyco presently owns 74 percent of Nasta.

The offer is not conditioned upon any minimum number of shares being tendered.

Tyco and Nasta also stated that additional tender offer material containing information in connection with the increased offer and the Merger Agreement will be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and sent to Nasta stockholders shortly.

Tyco, headquartered in Mt. Laurel, markets a broad range of toys. Nasta, headquartered in New York, markets popularly priced toys.

AGOURA HILLS, CA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Fortune Petroleum Corp. (NASDAQ:FPEX/FPEXW) and Fairbanks & Haas Inc. (FHI) of Ventura Wednesday announced that they have signed a letter of intent by which Fortune Petroleum proposes to acquire the producing and non-producing oil and gas properties and other assets of Fairbanks & Haas, the direct working interest owners and royalty owners it represents, the limited partnerships of which FHI is the managing general partner and the joint ventures of which it is managing joint venturer.

Fortune will exchange certain of its treasury common shares for the assets to be acquired. This exchange is proposed to be based on the comparative value of the FHI assets relative to the value of the Fortune assets. The value of the oil and gas assets will be determined by an independent petroleum engineer mutually agreed upon by Fortune and FHI.

Dan Pasquini, president of Fortune, stated: ''The addition of the revenues generated by FHI assets should put us in a comfortable positive cash flow position. It would allow us available capital to improve production on our oil and gas properties.''

FHI and its investors have significant interest in approximately 24 wells located in Ventura and Kern counties of California and in Oklahoma with net production equalling approximately 130 barrels per day of oil and 65 mcf per day of gas.

The acquisition of the FHI assets is contingent upon a vote of its investors, the execution of a definitive agreement and approval of certain regulatory agencies.

Fortune Petroleum is an independent oil and gas exploration and production company with its principal properties located in California. Fortune shares and warrants are traded on NASDAQ.

HESTER, NY (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Paychex Inc. (NASDAQ: PAYX) Wednesday reported net income of $2,871,000 or 22 cents per share for the first quarter ended Aug. 31, up 7 percent over net income of $2,697,000 or 21 cents per share in the previous year's first quarter.

Revenue for the period rose 16 percent to a record $33,067,000 from $28,529,000 a year earlier.

Tom Golisano, chairman and chief executive, noted that revenue growth, operational economies, and the elimination of nonrecurring expenses associated with product development were the major factors in the 59 percent increase in net income over the past fiscal year's fourth quarter.

''Our new Taxpay product is meeting our expectations as approximately 9,000 clients have decided to utilize this service,'' Golisano said. He added that Taxpay, an automatic tax payment and filing option, will be available in offices representing over 75 percent of the company's client base by the end of October.

Golisano further reported that the company's 72 operating centers now are processing payrolls for over 123,000 businesses.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Lotus Development Corp. Wednesday announced further expansion into Eastern Europe with the release of a special version of 1-2-3 Release 2.2 with character set support for Eastern Europe.

Lotus also announced the appointment of Vupek of Prague as a Lotus Authorized Distributor and the successful completion of Lotus' first Eastern European end user conference.

''Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Yugoslavia have an installed base of more than 280,000 PCs. That number is expected to grow to 450,000 over the next six months,'' said Steve Crummey, Lotus senior vice president, International Business Group. ''Lotus is aggressively entering this growing market early on and is poised to expand its worldwide leadership position in the spreadsheet market with a product designed specifically for Eastern European users.''

Lotus has enabled 1-2-3 2.2 to provide IBM PC code page 852 support, allowing Eastern Europe users to implement all the characters that their languages demand. A code page specifies the 256 characters a computer generates on a screen or printer, such as the upper and lower case letters of the English alphabet, punctuation marks, digits, graphic characters, etc. Central European languages use an additional 80 characters that are not part of the English character set.

These include the diacritical marks in Czech and Slovak, the umlauts and double s in German, etc. Lotus' software development team in Dublin attended the Technical Standards meeting in Budapest, Hungary in July where major software companies, including IBM, Microsoft, Ashton-Tate, and several Eastern European computer companies, agreed to standardize on code page 852 support.

Vupek Named Distributor in Czechoslovakia

Vupek, a Prague-based distributor, has an established network of 13 service and support outlets throughout Czechoslovakia. In addition to Vupek, Lotus has authorized distributors in Hungary and Yugoslavia. Novotrade, based in Budapest, is the leading distributor of computer-based products in Hungary. Yusaco, based in Novi Sad, distributes products throughout Yugoslavia.

Jan Strnad, Vupek's general manager, said, ''We are delighted to have been chosen by Lotus. At a time of rapid change in our country, Lotus' service and support programs will help establish dealers, consultants and training centers who are entrepreneurial and independent. A strong software industry with well developed service and support programs will benefit everyone.''

Eastern European End User Conference

In addition, Lotus recently sponsored its first Eastern European end user conference. More than 330 end users from Hungary with additional attendees from Romania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia were present to hear about Lotus, its products and see demonstrations of 1-2-3 3.1 and the soon to be released special version of 1-2-3 2.2 for Eastern Europe. The conference was jointly organized with Lotus' Authorized Distributor for Hungary, Novotrade Inc.

VIENNA, VA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - LEGENT Corp. (NASDAQ: LGNT) Wednesday announced the elections of John F. Burton as president, chief operating officer and a member of the board of directors, and of William J. Drummey as senior vice president, North American sales and support.

Both appointments are effective immediately.

Burton, formerly LEGENT's vice president of corporate marketing and general manager of its Software Management division, assumes the position vacated by the resignation of Peter J. Barris in July. Drummey, whose position is a new one for the company, had been vice president, North American sales for Lotus Development Corp., Cambridge, Mass.

According to LEGENT's Chief Executive Joe M. Henson: ''These appointments reflect the building of a management team that is now not only largely complete but that is also ideally suited to our future direction and business priorities.''

Burton, 39, was a founder in 1984 of Business Software Technology Inc., Westborough, Mass., which merged into LEGENT in November 1989. He subsequently was appointed vice president corporate marketing while remaining as general manager of what is now the company's Software Management division.

Drummey, 51, joins LEGENT after having responsibility for all Lotus sales activities in the United States and Canada, including the approximately 400 people and 29 locations, which comprise the microcomputer industry's largest North American sales operation. He joined Lotus in November 1988 after serving for three years as vice president North American sales at Cullinet, later acquired by Computer Associates Inc.

From 1966 to 1985, Drummey, who holds a civil engineering degree from Northeastern University, worked at IBM in various capacities, the last being director of dealer sales for the company's National Distribution division. He managed the sales organization for such varied channels as value-added resellers, dealers, distributors and OEM customers. Earlier responsibilities at IBM included working as a regional manager and director of marketing planning.

LEGENT Corp. is a leading independent supplier of systems software and services for the management and operation of information services, or IS organizations.

BLUE BELL, PA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Unisys Corp. Wednesday confirmed rumors that it has developed a new line of midrange computers that extends the performance of IBM's System 34/36 RPGII applications environment.

The new Unisys RAMP (RPG Application Migration Package) product line is based on the Unisys entry-level A Series mainframe systems, and it will offer users a significant price/performance advantage compared to IBM's AS 400 line of mid-range systems.

RAMP has an automated migration facility that is used to port System 34/36 RPGII programs, related library members and data files. The RAMP RPGII compiler turns the source code into native A Series mainframe code--there is no emulation overhead in the RAMP processing environment.

Programs will compile and run as they do on the System 34 or 36--except they run up to three times faster. Most twinax terminals are supported, and the RAMP operating environment is so similar to the Operation Control Language 1/8OCL3/8 work environment that no operator retraining is needed.

Unisys will market RAMP through a network of third-party providers in the IBM System 34/36 marketplace. Unisys RAMP is released and available for the qualification of software solutions on the new platform.

Before testing the Unisys RAMP system, MarData bv, an application developer for the Netherlands shipping industry, had been looking for an alternative to the IBM System 36 for their RPGII application for the past three years.

Other Systems Distributers Review Unisys RAMP Performance

Patricia Pierre, Systems Analyst for Dato Centro in the Dominican Republic, was particularly impressed with the simple portation procedure and the OCL-like operating environment. ''Porting my complex 1/8IBM System 36 3/8 OCL application to Unisys RAMP was really easy--almost boring,'' said Pierre.

The RAMP product family uses the Micro A, A1, A4 and A6 Series of Unisys mainframe processors, which compare favorably in price/performance to IBM AS 400 Models C20 through B70.

To these CPUs, Unisys has added an A Series RPGII compiler, Workstation Data Link Processors (DLPs) to support IBM 5250/5250-compatible terminals and 522X printers, custom portation facilities, and run-time software that presents a System 34/36-like, menu- driven user interface. MS-DOS PC workstations with twinax emulation are also supported.

In addition to delivering all the features and functionality of the System 34/36 environment, Unisys RAMP offers users access to the latest release of the Unisys Master Control Program/A Series (MCP/AS) operating environment.

MCP/AS supports LINC and MAPPER, Unisys Corp.'s industry-leading CASE and 4GL application development tools, as well as TCP/IP, X.25, and SNA communications networking capabilies.

Twinax terminals connected to a RAMP environment can function in Unisys Ergonomic Terminal (ET) emulation mode by selecting the option from a menu.

This provides simultaneous multi-windowed access to standard A Series functionality and features from twinax terminals. Pricing and Availability

Qualified System 34/36 VARs can obtain Unisys RAMP systems immediately. Pricing is based on processor size and system quantity. Suggested base list for an entry-level RAMP system is US $19,900.00 (includes Unisys Micro A CPU with 12MB memory, 280MB disk, and 150MB tape drive).

DALLAS (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - EDS and Australian-based Mincom Wednesday announced the formation of a strategic relationship allowing the companies to jointly pursue information technology business in the mining, utility and petroleum industries.

The agreement provides for joint marketing activities where appropriate and cooperation in development, implementations and customer training.

EDS, one of the largest providers of information technology services to the energy industry, brings its systems integration and global communications infrastructure to the relationship while Mincom will contribute its range of software products designed to address the specific needs of businesses in the mining, utility and petroleum industries.

The two companies will combine their respective areas of expertise, where appropriate, for the benefit of companies in these industries worldwide.

Mincom Chief Operating Officer Gordon Jardine said that the teaming arrangement will be beneficial for the energy industry.

''Through this relationship energy companies, which often have remote operations, will have easy access to information technology applications designed specifically for their industry,'' said Jardine.

''We see this as a good opportunity to add to our existing expertise in the mining, utility and petroleum industries and broaden the services we can provide to our existing and future energy customers,'' said EDS Energy

Division President Ken Scott.

Mincom specializes in integrated business applications for the mining, utility and petroleum community and other industries which are capital intensive. It is one of the leading providers of systems to these industries in Australia and has been operating successfully in the international marketplace, specifically North America, for several years.

The company's MIMS (Mincom Information Management System) successfully integrates maintenance and materials management systems with financial, budgetary control and plant performance systems. MIMS enables energy companies with large- scale, geographically dispersed operations to efficiently maintain their plant and equipment, optimize inventory holdings, maximize plant utilization and improve company profitability.

Mincom operates in the United States through its wholly owned subsidiary, Mincom U.S.A., Inc., which has offices in Denver, Atlanta and Houston. In addition to MIMS, Mincom also offers mine planning and well log analysis systems.

Dallas-based EDS has operations in 27 countries and is the leader in providing information technology solutions to customers in a variety of industries. Stock reflecting EDS' performance is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol GME. EDS reported revenues of $5.5 billion in 1989.

TORONTO (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Stake Technology Ltd., (NASDAQ:STKLF) Wednesday announced that they have received a letter of intent from Palmaven S.A., in Caracas, Venezuela, for the formation of a joint venture company to produce cattle feed from sugarcane bagasse using the StakeTech steam processing technology and equipment.

The announcement was made by Jeremy N. Kendall, chairman and chief executive officer of Stake Technology.

Palmaven, S.A. is a subsidiary of Petroleos de Venezuela S.A. (PDVSA), an international energy company operating in the areas of oil, bitumen, natural gas, petrochemicals and coal. For 1989, PDVSA reported a net income of $2.3 billion.

According to Kendall, ''Palmaven has been given a mandate to develop agricultural projects in Venezuela that will improve the efficiency of agriculture production throughout the country.

''The first Stake cattle feed plant would be an appropriate complement to an agroservices project that Palmaven is developing in the northeastern region of Venezuela.''

Kendall noted that subject to confirmation of the economic viability of the project by a site specific feasibility study, Palmaven is prepared to take a 49 percent equity position in the cattle feed plant while Stake Technology would have 10 percent equity. Local investors, most likely a sugar mill, would have the remaining 41 percent.

Based on a capital cost estimate of $4.8 million (U.S.) for construction of the first plant, Palmaven has indicated that they are prepared to invest an initial $1.1 million (U.S.) in the development.

The joint venture is applying to the Canadian Export Development Corp. for to finance 85 percent of the foreign equipment and engineering services required for the plant. ''In addition, Stake Technology will also apply to the Canadian International Development Agency for financial assistance for the feasibility study,'' Kendall said. It is anticipated that the plant will be in operation sometime in 1991. According to Kendall, prefeasibility studies have indicated at least five StakeTech cattlefeed plants could be built in Venezuela.

Stake Technology Ltd. owns and licenses the Stake Tech process, which through continuous steam explosion, converts wasted biomass, such as wood chips, sugarcane bagasse, corn stalks and straw, into usable end products, by chemically and physically separating the principal components found in biomass.

MARKHAM (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Geac Computer Corp. Ltd. Wednesday posted its first quarter results for the period ending July 31.

Income from operations for the first quarter of this fiscal year was $522,000, an increase of 13 percent over last year's quarter. Sales were $16.5 million this quarter compared to last year's first quarter sales of $17.0 million. The sales shortfall compared to the prior year is attributable to the sale of the Canadian Financial software products, effective June 30, 1989.

The increase in income from operations resulted from operating economies and interest income from a healthy cash balance of $18.3 million compared to $4.1 million on July 31, 1989.

Geac President and CEO, Stephen J. Sadler, said ''Geac continues to seek opportunities to develop our services to current and new vertical markets, utilizing our available global network of offices and resources.''

Founded in 1971, Geac Computer Corp. Ltd. is a world leader in the design, integration and manufacture of computer software and hardware, serving the Library Automation, Financial Services, and Manufacturing Systems markets worldwide with revenues of over $72,000,000. SYRACUSE, N.Y. (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. Wednesday announced plans to streamline its nuclear and fossil-fuel operations with the goal of initiating reductions in annual expenditures in these two areas by as much as $64 million by the end of 1992.

It is expected that much of the projected annual reduction will be achieved through the restructuring and elimination of work activities and, in some cases, individual positions.

These plans are the result of the first cycle of an ongoing self-assessment aimed at improving the company's operating efficiency and effectiveness, as well as goals for additional reductions based on further studies.

Similar efforts are under way in the company's regional operations and corporate departments, with resulting implementation plans expected early next year.

In the nuclear division, which operates and supports Nine Mile Point Units One and Two, a reduction of approximately $55 million in annual expenditures is projected by late 1992.

The reduction in nuclear includes some 650 positions now filled by contractors about 130 positions that are now vacant, and a gradual elimination of approximately 450 Niagara Mohawk positions over two years, if goals are successfully achieved.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer William J. Donlon said that while intensive position control and normal attrition are expected to achieve most of the Niagara Mohawk reduction, 17 nuclear management employees will be displaced from permanent positions in 1990.

In the fossil generation area, annual cost reductions of about $9 million will be sought, mostly through streamlining of operations and reductions in overtime. Niagara Mohawk employment will be reduced by 17 positions. Fossil generation includes operation and support for the company's coal, oil and natural gas generating stations in Dunkirk, Tonawanda, Oswego and Albany.

Niagara Mohawk is an investor-owned utility serving some 1.6 million electric customers and 466,000 natural gas customers throughout most of upstate New York.

BAYSIDE, NY (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - The Home Savings Bank (NASDAQ:HMSB) announced that its shareholders, at a special meeting held earlier today, approved the proposed merger of The Home Savings Bank with a subsidiary of H.F. Ahmanson & Company (NYSE:AHM).

The proposed transaction is subject to regulatory approvals, and applications have been filed with the Office of Thrift Supervision, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the New York State Banking Department. The merger agreement was announced on Apr. 2, 1990 and is expected to close by year-end.

Richard A. Kraemer, Chairman, President, and Chief Executive Officer of Home, said, ''The strong support for the proposed merger shown by the Bank's shareholders is very gratifying.'' Of the total votes cast at the meeting 98 percent were in favor of the merger, representing 80 percent of the outstanding common stock. Kraemer added, ''This transaction when completed will increase value to our shareholders and align Home with one of the premier financial service companies in the United States.''

The Home Savings Bank, with assets of $1.5 billion, operates 13 full-service banking offices in the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, as well as Nassau and Westchester Counties.

H.F. Ahmanson & Company, with more than $47.6 billion in assets, is the parent company of Home Savings of America, F.A. and The Bowery Savings Bank. Home Savings of America's $35.5 billion deposit base is the largest of any U.S. savings institution.

SAN MARCOS, Calif.(SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Natural Alternatives International Inc. (NASDAQ:NATA), manufacturer of specially formulated vitamins and minerals, increased its net income by 72 percent in its fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 and by 159 percent in its 1990 fiscal year, Mark A. Le Doux, president, announced Wednesday.

Sales rose 48 percent for the fourth quarter and 62 percent for the full year. Profits and sales for both periods were at new record highs, Le Doux said.

For the quarter ended June 30, 1990, Natural Alternatives' net income was $218,951, or 6 cents per share, on sales of $3,480,353, compared with income $127,561, or 3 cents per share, on sales of $2,353,087 one year earlier.

For the 1990 fiscal year, net income totaled $1,135,006, or 30 cents per share on sales of $11,876,422, compared with $439,009, or 11 cents per share, on sales of $7,310,580 the previous year.

''Our sales gains,'' said Le Doux, ''reflect expanding demand from our existing client base, enhanced by the addition of new client organizations. The programs we have been pursuing in automation of manufacturing and inventory control have made it possible for NAI to attract more business and increase production efficiency. In fiscal 1990, our productivity, as measured by dollar sales per employee, advanced by 59 percent.''

Founded in 1980, Natural Alternatives is a marketing-oriented company that formulates and encapsulates vitamins, micro nutrients and related nutritional supplements. The company provides innovative private-label vitamin products for specialty corporate or commercial customer accounts.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Citing the brisk sales of its two home DAT deck introductions as confirmation of consumer acceptance of the DAT format, Sony Wednesday announced that it will forge ahead with plans to market both car and portable DAT units in the U.S.

Slated for late 1990 availability, Sony's DTX-10 car DAT player and TCD-D3 DAT Walkman personal stereo recorder/player underscore both the company's commitment to the DAT format and its leadership role in the industry.

''These introductions are a logical extension of our DAT home decks that parallel the success of other audio formats in meeting the needs of consumers' active lifestyles,'' asserts Martin Homlish, Sony Audio Component Systems Co. president. ''Both new configurations of DAT products will enable consumers to realize the full potential of this truly advanced digital audio technology for a broad range of listening environments outside the home.''

The timing of this second phase of consumer DAT introductions was calculated by Sony to follow the development of two important factors: the penetration of home DAT player/recorders and the availability of pre-recorded software.

Sony led the industry in launching DAT in June of this year with the market availability of two home DAT decks, blank and pre-recorded DAT cassettes and a comprehensive marketing support program. Sony ''DAT Day'' was marked by promotional events at select Sony ES dealers nationwide, which included the distributuion of special dealer merchandising display kits and introductory ads; plus balloons, T-shirts, and other DAT promotional materials for consumers.

''We created the momentum with products possessing superior technology and support programs to launch the DAT enthusiast market. Now we're ready to expand that market to a broader audience,'' comments Marnix van Gemert, Sony Personal Audio Products Co. president.

Sony will continue to support the DAT format through an aggressive promotional and merchandising effort. Digital technology seminars, co-sponsored with AUDIO magazine, will be taking place during the months of September and October in major cities around the country. Fall radio promotions, national advertising and new pre-recorded software releases are also planned. In addition, the company will continue its dedicated 201-Sony-DAT ''hotline'' to answer consumers' questions on the DAT format.

The Sony car DAT player, model DTX-10, incorporates an FM/AM tuner and Discjockey CD changer control in a one-piece DIN-chassis design. It provides all the advantages that digital audio has to offer with the ease-of-use inherent in a cassette format. Sony's first car DAT offered to the autosound aftermarket, the DTX-10 employs proprietary second-generation car DAT mechanisms and Large Scale Integration (LSI) that enable it to achieve the ''price/performance value necessary to insure market acceptance here in the U.S.,'' adds Homlish.

According to van Gemert, the new DAT Walkman unit represents the culmination of Sony's expertise in digital audio technology and component miniaturization, to usher in an entirely new era in portable audio entertainment. Weighing less than one pound without battery, the TCD-D3 DAT Walkman personal stero is a heavyweight in terms of performance.

It is capable of recording and playing back at either 48 kHz, 44.1 kHz or 32 kHz sampling frequencies and also offers a long-play mode that provides for up to four hours of continuous recording/playback use on a 120-minute tape. Truly portable in operation, the TCD-D3 offers three methods of supplying power (rechargeable battery, car battery and AC power).

The Sony car and portable DAT products are scheduled to be available by the end of this year at the suggested retail prices of $1,100 and $849.95,

INDIANAPOLIS (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - INB Financial Corp. (NASDAQ:INBF) Chairman Thomas M. Miller and Jerry D. Gummere, chairman of Peoples Mid-Illinois Corp., Wednesday jointly announced that the pending merger agreement between the two bank holding companies has been terminated by mutual consent.

INB and Peoples entered into the original merger agreement on Jan. 4. On Aug. 21, an amendment was proposed, subject to INB board approval, which extended the termination date from Oct. 3, 1990, to Feb. 3, 1991 and increased the aggregate purchase price by $1.4 million.

As a result of proposed significant increases in FDIC assessments and increasingly unsettled conditions in the market for financial institution stocks, INB management did not feel it could recommend that the INB Board approve the amendment.

Under terms of the amended agreement, the number of INB Financial shares to be exchanged for each share of Peoples would have varied between 1.3857 and 1.3626, depending on INB Financial's average stock price.

Based on total assets, INB Financial Corp. is Indiana's largest bank holding company. It is headquartered in Indianapolis and is the parent of INB National Bank (Indianapolis), INB Banking Co. (Jeffersonville), INB Banking Co., North (Chesterton) and INB National Bank, Northwest (Lafayette). The four banks operate 105 banking centers in 16 Indiana counties and as of June 30, had total assets of $5.99 billion and shareholders' equity of $415.5 million.

This termination does not affect the three other pending INBF acquisitions: Homestate Bancorp, parent of The State Bank of Salem; FL&T Financial Corp., parent of The Farmers Loan and Trust Co., Columbia City, and Peoples Savings Bank of Evansville.

ENGLEWOOD, NJ (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Medical Nutrition Inc. (NASDAQ:MENU) Wednesday announced revenues and net income for the second quarter ended July 31, 1990.

Revenues were $315,500 and net income was $5,591 as compared to revenues of $1,073,343 and net income of $430,063 for the comparable period in 1989 and for the six months ended July 31, 1990 revenues were $926,285 and net income was $103,686 compared to revenues of $1,550,048 and net income of $533,249 for the comparable period.

The small decline in revenues from sale of weight loss foods was due principally to the adverse publicity surrounding the weight loss industry and in particular those programs emphasizing low calories and quick weight loss.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Checkout Channel, the first live news and information television broadcast viewed at supermarket checkout lanes, Wednesday made its initial telecast to supermarkets in seven U.S. cities.

Checkout Channel is a joint effort of Turner Broadcasting System and ActMedia, the leading in-store marketing company.

Shoppers in New York; Los Angeles; Detroit; Atlanta; Columbus, Ohio; Charlotte North Carolina; and San Jose, Calif. can now get the latest breaking news and information from CNN and Headline News as they stand in checkout lines.

''World events over the past month have demonstrated just how important it is to provide the public with as much news as often as possible. This has always been the philosophy behind CNN and Headline News,'' said Jon Petrovich, executive vice president of Headline News. ''The Checkout Channel presents an ideal opportunity to further realize this goal.''

ActMedia conceived Checkout Channel as a way of improving the shopping experience. Retailers are expecting Checkout Channel to make the time spent in line more useful and productive.

Waiting in line is the number one complaint among shoppers, according to Dr. Richard Larson, an MIT professor of electrical engineering and computer science, and a leading authority on line dynamics. ''When people are just standing around, boredom and frustration make the time seem interminable. Providing them with something useful and constructive, such as news, makes the time more productive,'' Dr. Larson said.

Programming will run in 8 minute intervals, roughly corresponding to the average time spent in line. Fully 70 percent of each interval will be editorial programming supplied by CNN and Headline News. The remaining 30 percent of the time will be sold to advertisers. Phase I is fully subscribed by eight advertisers: Beatrice, Kimberly Clark, Ford, Walt Disney World, Planter's LifeSavers, Clorox, Campbell's and Kraft General Foods.

''Checkout Channel will deliver a significant new audience,'' said Wayne W. LoCurto, president and CEO of ActMedia. ''In a time when a mass audience is getting harder to reach, the supermarket is uniquely capable of delivering that audience.''

Supermarket chains participating in Checkout Channel's initial telecast are Kroger (Detroit and Columbus, Ohio), A & P (Atlanta), Food Lion (Charlotte), Waldbaum's (New York), Von's (Los Angeles) and Safeway (San Jose).

''These stores represent six of the top 10 national chains,'' LoCurto said. ''Retailers have tuned in the Checkout Channel as a way to turn shopper's down time into productive time.''

Checkout Channel programming will be divided into four dayparts: daytime, evening, night and weekend. The daytime cycle will feature news programming targeted to women, evening and night will target working singles and couples and weekend will feature reports on family-oriented issues as well as news.

ActMedia has had Checkout Channel in development for two years. It is the first television network to offer in-store live, network quality, full-motion video with sound. Telecast will emanate from CNN Center in Atlanta and be transmitted via satellite to each store, updated every 8 minutes.

Checkout Channel expects to be televised to 5,000 supermarkets nationwide by the end of 1992.

ActMedia is based in Darien, Conn., and is a wholly owned subsidiary of Dallas-based Heritage Media Corp., a publicly held company that trades on the American Stock Exchange.

Turner Broadcasting System Inc. is the leading supplier of programming to the basic cable television industry. TBS is headquartered in Atlanta.

NEW ORLEANS (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - H. Leighton Steward, chairman, president and chief executive officer of The Louisiana Land and Exploration Co. (NYSE:LLX) Wednesday announced the election of Admiral Carlisle A. H. Trost as a director of the company.

Admiral Trost is the former Chief of Naval Operations. He retired from active naval service on July 1st of this year.

Admiral Trost has had a distinguished and varied naval career. After graduating first in his class from the United States Naval Academy in 1953, he underwent extensive training in submarine and naval nuclear propulsion plant operations.

Following a series of increasingly responsible naval assignments, he assumed command of Submarine Flotilla One in San Diego, in June 1973 with additional duties as Commander Submarine Force Pacific Representative, West Coast. He subsequently served as Deputy Commander U.S. Pacific Fleet, Commander U.S. Seventh Fleet and Director, Navy Program Planning.

On Oct. 4, 1985, Trost was promoted to the rank of Admiral and became Commander in Chief, U.S. Atlantic Fleet and Deputy Commander in Chief, U.S. Atlantic Command. He became a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as the U.S. Navy's 23rd Chief of Naval Operations on June 30, 1986.

Admiral Trost is the recipient of a number of awards from foreign countries. Among his personal awards, the Admiral has received the Department of Defense, Navy, Army and Air Force Distinguished Service Medals, three Legion of Merit awards, the Navy Achievement Medal and the Humanitarian Service Medal.

In his comments, Steward stated that LL&E will benefit from the wealth of knowledge and international experience Admiral Trost will bring to the board.

Admiral Trost and his wife, the former Pauline Haley, reside in Potomac, Md. They are the parents of four children.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Houston-based Begemann USA Inc. has announced the purchase of 50 percent of the stock of Windmaster USA Inc. in Northern California.

Windmaster will operate as part of Begemann Power Resources Inc., a subsidiary just formed by Begemann. Headquarters for Begemann Power Resources Inc. is in Houston.

Windmaster wind turbines, or windmills, supply power to Pacific Gas and Electric Co., the major electric utility in Northern California servicing San Francisco and Oakland. Windmaster operates some 150 wind turbines in Altamont Pass, located about 35 miles east of Oakland.

Carl Green, president of both Begemann USA Inc. and the new subsidiary, said that rising energy prices made the purchase of Windmaster an especially favorable proposition, since it is a proven alternate energy source.

Purchase price of the stock was not disclosed, but Green said it was a multi-million dollar transaction. Green said that his company is looking closely at the acquisition of the other 50 percent of Windmaster stock in the future.

The purchase is part of a larger transaction involving the Royal Begemann Group, the parent company in Holland. The Royal Begemann Group has just purchased HMZ, a European manufacturer of wind driven turbines. The Royal Begemann Group is headed by Joep van den Nieuwenhuyzen.

Green said that for the short term, Begemann will be monitoring and improving the efficiency of the current wind turbines. He plans to carefully pursue opportunities for expanding the concept as an alternate source of energy. Green said that some locations on the Texas Gulf Coast have potential for the use of wind power.

Through the purchase of HMZ, the Royal Begemann Group has further strengthened its position in the production of wind driven turbines. After years of research and development, Begemann officials say that wind energy has reached the stage of commercial use.

The Royal Begemann Group is currently ranked as the 50th largest company in Holland. Begemann USA Inc. has previously acquired Chronister Valve Corp. and Baylor Technology Inc. in the Houston area. Begemann Heat Exchangers Inc. has just gone into operation in the United States as a subsidiary of Begemann USA Inc.

WYOMISSING, PA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Sovereign Bancorp Inc. (NASDAQ:SVRN) Wednesday announced that its board of directors has authorized the repurchase of up to 135,000 shares, or approximately 5 percent, of the company's outstanding common stock.

Sovereign Bancorp has over 2.7 million shares of common stock outstanding.

The repurchases are authorized to be made from time to time in open market or privately negotiated transactions as, in the opinion of management, market conditions may warrant. Repurchased shares will be held as treasury stock, available for general corporate purposes.

The current price of Sovereign's stock is about 50 percent of the company's tangible book value.

According to Jay S. Sidhu, president and chief executive officer, ''Sovereign's board does not believe that the current market price adequately reflects our value, which can create an excellent opportunity for a possible buyback.''

Chairman Frederick J. Jaindl noted that the repurchase plan will not affect Sovereign's capital position materially, and its subsidiaries, Penn Savings Bank and Yardley Bank for Savings, will continue to exceed all fully phased-in capital requirements.

''For the third quarter, we expect earnings growth to continue to show the same trend as in previous quarters this year,'' said Sidhu. For the first six months of 1990, earnings were up 8 percent over the first six months of 1989.

Sovereign's assets exceed $1.2 billion, and its subsidiaries operate 19 retail banking offices and four limited service offices in southeastern Pennsylvania.

Sovereign's stock is listed on the NASDAQ-OTC National Market System and closed at $10 on Tuesday, Sept. 18.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - American General Corp. (NYSE:AGC) Wednesday announced that the board of directors has authorized management to add a restructuring plan as an alternative to the current efforts to sell the company as a whole.

This revises the sale process originally announced at the May 2 annual shareholders' meeting.

The restructuring plan would provide for the sale of the Home Service insurance companies--which account for over half of American General's current operating earnings--and the continuation of a publicly-owned holding company composed of the remaining operations.

''There are four primary reasons for taking this action now,'' said Harold S. Hook, chairman and chief executive officer. ''First, although we will continue in our efforts to sell the company as a whole, the interest shown thus far in the process has been primarily in the parts--particularly Home Service--and not in acquiring the entire company. Second, we believe that the new restructuring plan is the 'next-best' alternative to the sale of the company as a whole.

''Third, in order to implement this restructuring plan on a basis that is attractive both to potential buyers and American General shareholders, a number of steps involving the realignment of American General's businesses may be required. And finally, we believe that the current international and economic uncertainty has reduced the probability of completing a transaction of the size and complexity represented by the sale of the company as a whole.''

The restructuring plan would require a favorable ruling from the Internal Revenue Service, as well as other federal and state regulatory approvals, which would take several months.

Currently, American General has three business segments: Insurance-Home Service, Insurance-Special Markets, and Finance/Real Estate.

American General's Home Service subsidiaries, which would be sold under the restructuring alternative, include those companies that concentrate on the selling and servicing of traditional insurance products directly through employee agents. These Home Service companies have assets of $8.9 billion, equity of $3.0 billion, and in 1989 generated earnings of $305 million.

The new American General would include the two remaining business segments, and on a pro forma basis would have assets of $24.9 billion, equity of $3.5 billion, and earned $235 million in 1989.

The principal businesses of the new American General would include tax-qualified annuities sold through The Variable Annuity Life Insurance Co. (VALIC), consumer finance operations conducted by American General Finance, ordinary life insurance sold in niche markets through American General's ordinary life insurance subsidiaries, and real estate operations.

While the company is pursuing these alternatives vigorously, there can be no assurance at this time that this or any other alternative transaction can be consummated.

American General is an insurance and financial services organization with assets of $34 billion and total equity of $4.5 billion. Headquartered in Houston, the company has subsidiaries that operate in 50 states and Canada. American General common stock is listed on the New York, Pacific, London, and

BURLINGTON, MA (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Cognos Inc. (TSE:CSN; NASDAQ:COGNF) Wednesday announced results for its second quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990.

All financial results are reported in Canadian dollars.

Revenues were $32.8 million compared with $29.1 million for the same period last year, representing a 13 percent year over year increase.
Pre-tax income was $1.7 million, net after tax income was $1.1 million and earnings per share were 10 cents for the quarter. This compares with a net loss of $6.2 million and a per share loss of 59 cents for the corresponding period last year.

Revenues for the six months ended Aug. 31, 1990 were $63.4 million, compared with $49.9 million for the same period last year, representing a 27 percent year over year increase. Net after tax income was $1.5 million and earnings per share were 14 cents. This compares with a net after tax loss of $10.2 million and a loss per share of 98 cents for the same period last year.

Michael Potter, Cognos chairman and chief executive officer said, ''This continuing improvement in financial performance is attributed to the quality of our recently released and enhanced products, and ongoing emphasis on productivity and cost controls. We continue to meet the growth and earnings targets set since the reorganization and realignment of the company some nine months ago. Cognos has reported profits in each of its last three fiscal quarters. We have accomplished this despite a general economic slowdown and some specific weaknesses in the industry.''

Potter continued, ''The recently enhanced user interface for Cognos' PowerHouse 4GL contributed significantly to revenue in the quarter. Additionally, the complementary end-user products introduced earlier this year have achieved rapid market acceptance and accounted for 10 percent of the company's total license sales during the second quarter.

''The improved competitiveness of our products, combined with strengthened marketing and sales programs, led to a sales productivity increase of some 30percent this quarter compared to our second quarter last year. This was accomplished while holding quarterly operating expenses in line with the prior year and generating a positive cash flow for the quarter. We are pleased with our progress to date and believe Cognos is well positioned for further improved performance during the second half of the current fiscal year,'' Potter concluded.

Cognos markets application development software used on mid-range computers. The publicly-held company is headquartered in Ottawa, Canada, with worldwide sales, service and marketing operations based in Burlington, Mass. Its PowerHouse product is used at over 15,000 installations in 68 countries.

MIAMI (SEPT. 19) BUSINESS WIRE - General Development Corp. (NYSE:GDV) Wednesday announced it has entered into a plea agreement with the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida in the pending criminal proceeding against GDC.

Terms of the agreement include the company pleading guilty to one count of the original 16-count indictment and providing for a restitution program as part of its Chapter 11 reorganization.

If the agreement is approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge A. Jay Cristol and by U.S. District Judge Lenore Nesbitt, the scheduled Jan. 7, 1991 trial of the company would be canceled.

The company agreed to plead guilty to one count of having conspired through certain of its officers to violate the Federal mail fraud statute in connection with the sale of its homes.

The company also agreed to allow total restitution claims of up to $160 million for persons who purchased General Development homes between Jan. 1, 1983, and Jan. 1, 1990.

The claims would be for the amount that the sales price of the home, net of certain credits, exceeded its appraised value. There are approximately 10,230 purchasers who could be eligible to make claims under the program.

Under the agreement, a special master will be appointed to receive and approve restitution claims. In order to be eligible for restitution, a home purchaser will file a claim with the special master.

The special master will obtain independent appraisals for the house as of the time of purchase and determine the amount of the restitution claim. Persons who bought homes during the seven-year period and had independent appraisals done, or who received third-party financing, will not be eligible for restitution.

Restitution claims will be allowed in the Bankruptcy Court as undisputed general unsecured claims and will be payable pursuant to a reorganization plan for the company.

The Bankruptcy Court will determine the total amount to be paid on these claims and the terms and timing of the payments as part of the confirmation of the plan of reorganization of the company.

A hearing on the plea agreement has been scheduled by Bankruptcy Judge Cristol for Sept. 26.

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) COMTEX - The General Accounting Office today urged Congress to take a series of steps to reform the government's deposit insurance system, including measures to bolster the bank insurance fund, tighter regulation, and the appointment of a presidential panel of experts to properly train regulators to supervise the nation's banks.

The GAO, the investigative branch of Congress, noted the House of Representatives already approved its first recommendation by voting Monday to give the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. the authority to raise the premium it charges member banks at its discretion. Under present law, the FDIC is allowed to raise the premium it assesses banks by 7.5 cents per $100 in deposits annually, capping at a rate of 32.5 cents per $100 in deposits.

In addition to the above measures, the GAO is calling for annual on-site examinations of all large and troubled banks, changing certain accounting rules to better measure the value of banking institutions, and greater accountability for bank managers and directors for their internal control structures and compliance with laws and regulations related to safety and soundness.

Many lawmakers, fearing another savings and loan debacle, have given the issue an increasing sense of urgency following recent warnings by the GAO and the Congressional Budget Office that a recession or a single bank failure could be enough to wipe out the FDIC fund and force a taxpayer bailout.

"We are very concerned about the position of the bank insurance fund but we don't think we are in a 'crisis' over the situation," Richard Fogel, the GAO's assistant comptroller general, told the House Banking Committee this morning.

Committee Chairman Henry Gonzalez (D-Texas) said later, "I don't care whether you call it a crisis or not. The point is we've got a problem. We've got to try to lead the country out of this mess."

Critics of the current deposit insurance system maintain it has made it easy for poorly capitalized or high-risk institutions to successfully attract additional funds by simply offering customers higher interest rates. In order to halt this practice, the GAO suggests increasing premiums for banks that demonstrate higher risks.

"Highest priority should go to holding the owners and managers of banks responsible for the risks generated by the activities of their banks," Fogel said. "It is essential that capital be increased to put more of a financial cushion between the decisions of bank managers and the exposure of taxpayers."

While not ruling out a reduction in the government's insurance ceiling of $100,000 per account, Fogel said the GAO questions, on "the grounds of stability, whether reducing deposit insurance coverage or imposing greater losses on individual depositors should be the centerpiece of reform."

Only when these reforms are in place and the insurance fund is on a solid financial footing would the GAO seek greater power for banks.

"Expanded powers (are) important over the long-run," said Fogel. "They should be granted on a case-by-case basis to those institutions that have demonstrated they are well capitalized and well managed."

ROME (SEPT. 19) - European Economic Community (EEC) trade ministers appealed on Tuesday to their trade partners, particularly Japan and the United States, to help provide a positive outcome for current multilateral trade talks by December, at the latest.

They were speaking of the "Uruguay" round of trade negotiations being held under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

At a news conference here following the ministers' meeting at Castelporziano, near Rome, Italian Foreign Trade Minister Renato Ruggiero and EEC Commission vice-president Frans Andriessen said the next negotiation session, to be held in Brussels on December 3-7, "cannot and must not fail".

"Imagine", he said, "the repercussions that might result at this time from failure of the GATT negotiations, with Europe separated from the United States and the northern part of the world separated from the southern".

The EEC ministers agreed that the Gulf crisis must not lead to protectionist reactions, but rather should lead to greater liberalization of world trade.

Mr. Ruggiero and Mr. Andriessen also said that the Community plans to show its solidarity in meeting requests from oil-importing developing countries, and trusts its trading partners will do the same.

Mr. Andriessen noted that "To date, Europe has not reached any agreement with Japan in the automobile sector".

Agriculture will be discussed in Brussels on Wednesday, when the EEC is to decide on a joint program with respect to aid and subsidies in farming.

MANILA (SEPT. 19) - A bomb exploded outside a department store in the Philippine capital Wednesday, causing slight damage but no casualties, police said.

The blast caused some damage at the Shoemart department store chain in the suburban Cubao district, according to police.

More than 20 explosions, most of them occurring during the night, have rocked Manila and surrounding towns and cities in the past five weeks, with government buildings, commercial centers, banks and factories being the most common targets.

President Corazon Aquino has blamed the bombings on military rebels who she said were resorting to terrorist activities after failing to topple her in six coup attempts in the past four years.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 19) - At least 22 people were killed and 30 injured when a bus plunged into a river in the northern Indian state of Uttar Pradesh, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said Wednesday.

The agency quoted police as saying the accident occured late Tuesday in Chamoli district and that civil and police officials had rushed to the banks of the Alaknanda River to supervise rescue operations.

WELLINGTON (SEPT. 19) - Around 2,200 catfish, ordered to be killed by anesthetic Thursday are at the center of an environmental row involving the New Zealand government a catfish farm partly-owned by native Maoris.

The fish, imported as eggs from the United States last year, were to be used in a commercial catfish farming project -- initially approved by the government -- in the far north of New Zealand.

But in the wake of pressure from opponents who claim catfish destroy trout, Fisheries Minister Ken Shirley said Wednesday that the fish, in quarantine near here, would be destroyed.

Backers of the fish farm project include a former Labor Government cabinet minister and Matiu Rata, the leader of a Maori political movement who is standing in next month's general elections against a Labor incumbent.

Mr. Shirley said an independent report had concluded that catfish posed a unacceptable risk, with a high chance of escaping from the farm into lakes and rivers where they would eat trout and crayfish, and compete for food with other species.

Mr. Shirley said New Zealand did not want a repeat of earlier, mistaken imports of rabbits and opossums, which are now devastating large areas of New Zealand.

Trout too, when they were first imported here in 1867, wiped out many native fish species.

The government is likely to find itself in a nasty political row as the catfish farm was a partnership between a church group and a confederation of Maori tribes.

Mr. Shirley denied allegations that the government's decision was racially based. "That is outrageous," he said. "The decision is not anti-Maori, it's simply an environmental issue."

Among those calling for a ban were the Ngati Tuwharetoa Maori tribe, who earn millions of dollars annually from selling trout fishing licenses in the central part of New Zealand's North Island.

Gary Poole of catfish farm co-promoter Presbyterian Support Services said they would seek an injunction to stop the destruction.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) - Poland, Bulgaria and Romania have asked Japan for financial assistance to compensate for losses they claim to have suffered following U.N. sanctions against Iraq, the Yomiuri Shimbun newspaper reported Wednesday.

The paper, quoting government sources, said the three countries claimed to have each suffered a loss of one billion dollars following Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The three countries have participated in the embargo on oil imports from Iraq declared by the United Nations Security Council resolution.

The economic difficulties resulting from the embargo have severely affected their planned internal economic reforms, the paper said .

The report said the Japanese government plans to start working out relief measures for Eastern Europe after implementation of its planned contributions for Middle East nations badly hurt by the Gulf crisis, it said.

The planned relief measures will cover not only Poland, Bulgaria and Romania but also Hungary, Czchosovakia and Yugoslavia, the newspaper said.

COLOMBO (SEPT. 19) - Sri Lankan security forces have shot dead 17 suspected rebels of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) in the country's eastern province, military officials said Wednesday.

The persons killed were allegedly laying anti-personnel mines when they were confronted by troops Tuesday evening in the Chavalakadai area of the Ampara district, 350 kilometers from here, they said. Troops recovered 25 mines at the scene.

Nine employees of the Lanka survey department sustained serious injuries when suspected Tamil rebels ambushed their jeep on the border of North Central province on Tuesday, military officials said.

The Tamil rebels, who are fighting for an independent homeland in the northeast, were reported to have fired mortars during the day at Jaffna Fort army camp, where a three-month siege by the rebels was brought to an end last Thursday. A soldier was injured.

ISLAMABAD (SEPT. 19) - Iraq has agreed to allow the evacuation of family members of at least 14,000 Pakistanis working in Iraq, foreign ministry sources said Tuesday.

The sources said the government in Baghdad had hinted that it would provide Iraqi aircraft for the evacuation.

An estimated 40,000 Pakistanis were working in Iraq and 90,000 in Kuwait before the Iraqi invasion of its neighbor August 2.

Some 42,000 Pakistanis have returned home since the invasion and another 1,100 are waiting to leave at refugee camps in Jordan.

LONDON (SEPT. 19) - Three U.S. military installations to be closed in Britain as part of American defense cuts abroad announced Tuesday are of secondary importance, according to press comment here.

The installations are: an airforce communications center at Martlesham Heath near Ipswich, Suffolk; aircraft repair workshops at Kemble, Gloucestershire; and a standby airbase at Sculthorpe, Norfolk.

The Kemble workshops employing 300 people, most of them British civilians, are within a British airbase which is to be handed back to the British military authorities in two years' time.

The closures come on top of those of three other U.S. bases in Britain, announced in January, involving the departure of 5,000 American military personnel and the loss of 600 jobs for local people.

Those bases are RAF Greenham Common in Berkshire, RAF Fairford in Gloucestershire and RAF Wethersfield in Essex, according to the Daily Telegraph.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) - Honda Motor Co. Ltd. Wednesday announced its entry for the second World Challenge for solar-powered cars to be held November in Australia.

Honda's solar car, currently under test, is a single seater with a maximum speed of 120 kilometers (75 miles) per hour.

The race begins in Darwin on the northern coast of Australia and follows a 3,000-kilometer (1,800-mile) course along roads to Adelaide on the southern coast.

Forty-three solar cars from around the world will be competing in the race, Honda said.

LONDON (SEPT. 19) - The British government has created a post titled British Forces Commander Middle East following its decision to send the 7th Armored Brigade to the region, the Ministry of Defence announced.

The post will be filled until further notice by Air Vice Marshal Sandy Wilson, 49 who was named as commander of British air units in the Gulf in August when Britain sent two squadrons of Jaguar and Tornado fighters to the region along with a destroyer and two frigates.

He will command all British naval, air and ground forces deployed in the region.

Meanwhile, three deputies from the extreme left-wing of the Labor Party announced that they intended to travel on Wednesday to Jordan and then to Baghdad in a bid to meet Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and to attempt to obtain the liberation of some of the foreign hostages held in the country.

The deputies, Dennis Canavan, Ronnie Campbell and Bob Parry, plan to join a delegation of left-wing European deputies.

MANILA (SEPT. 19) - Washington has raised the Philippine quota on U.S. sugar imports to 15.8 percent of the total, the U.S. Embassy announced here Wednesday as the two countries negotiated on the future of American military bases in this former colony.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter has announced that Manila will be allowed to export 262,147 tonnes of sugar, an 11 percent increase on a monthly basis, out of the total U.S. sugar imports from 39 countries in a one-year period from October 1.

Only the Dominican Republic, with a 292,010-tonne share of the U.S. market, would have a larger quota, an embassy statement said.

Philippine shipments would be duty free, it added.

Manila and Washington began negotiations here Tuesday on the future of Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, the two largest American military facilities whose lease runs out on September 16, 1991.

On the eve of the talks the U.S. Embassy here announced 9.8 million dollars in U.S. Agency for International Development grants for Philippine projects.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) - Japan and the United States are to hold talks on military technology cooperation in Washington next week, the Japanese Defense Agency said Wednesday.

The two countries are expected to reach an agreement on joint research into ducted engines for missiles, eliminating magnetism on submarines and new missile guidance systems, agency sources said.

The annual meeting, inaugurated in 1980, was suspended in 1988 amid controversy over Japan's plans for a new generation jet fighter. The issue was resolved after Tokyo agreed to build the plane in cooperation with a U.S. manufacturer.

MAPUTO (SEPT. 19) - An outbreak of cholera in three Mozambican cities has killed a total of 59 people, the Maputo daily newspaper "Noticias" has reported.

The paper quoted a source in the government health department as saying 1,113 people had been treated for the disease in the cities of Beira, Tete and Quelimane, capitals of the country's three central provinces.

International agencies including the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the British relief organization Oxfam are helping the city authorities fight the spread of the disease, which is usually transmitted by untreated water.

SUVA (SEPT. 19) - The European Economic Community Wednesday handed over 17 million Fiji dollars (12 million U.S.) for economic projects here and Finance Minister Josevata Kamikamica said he would go to Paris and Brussels to seek more cash.

The EEC's delegate here, Nikolas Alexandrakis, said the aid would help Fiji to "enhance its export base, encourage foreign investment, diversify exports" and reduce reliance on sugar and tourism, Fiji's chief export earners.

Mr. Kamikamica said the government would spend 13 million Fijian dollars (9.1 million U.S.) to create a tax-free zone in Suva providing 2,000 and ultimately 8,000 jobs.

The government will buy land and establish factories for foreign firms while giving them a 13-year tax holiday, he said.

Mr. Alexandrakis, a Greek, said the success of the tax-free zone scheme would make Fiji "a model for the Pacific".

The funding was under the Lome III Convention between 68 African, Caribbean and Pacific countries and the 12 European nations.

Fiji is to receive around 40 million Fijian dollars (28 million U.S.) under the new five-year Lome IV Convention, finalised in Suva in March.

Mr. Alexandrakis said the EEC shared the objectives of the interim administration, installed by Fiji's army commander after his 1987 military coups, to restore the shattered economy and find a new constitution for this multiracial nation.

AVIGNON, FRANCE (SEPT. 19) - Prince Charles is convalescing in the south of France at the chateau of Baroness Louise de Waldner, a reliable source said Wednesday.

The Prince of Wales, who is recovering from an operation on a broken arm following a polo accident, arrived discreetly by plane in Avignon late Sunday accompanied by a medical team.

He has several times in the past stayed at the chateau in the village of Barroux, near the town of Carpentras. He is expected to stay until Friday at the home of Baroness de Waldner, who is a friend of the British royal family.

SEOUL (SEPT. 19) - South Korea will take over the operation of a pipeline and four radio sites that the United States plans to close here, U.S. military authorities said here Wednesday.

"We are negotiating to turn over to the (South) Koreans the trans-Korean pipeline, plus five stations on the pipeline," a U.S. military spokesman said.

"We also will close or turn over to the (South) Koreans four microwave communication posts," he said.

U.S. Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney announced Tuesday that the U.S. military was halting or reducing operations at 151 military installations in 10 foreign countries.

The 284-mile-long Trans-Korean Pipeline will be turned over to South Korea in October 1991, a press release by the U.S. forces stationed here said.

There was no immediate comment by South Korean officials on the U.S.

announcement but a South Korean official privately said the move was far from significant.

U.S. forces currently employed at sites and facilities slated to be turned over to South Korea are included in the scheduled withdrawal of U.S. forces, the press release said.

A total of 7,000 U.S. troops including 5,000 non-combatant U.S. ground force and 2,000 airmen will be withdrawn from South Korea by 1993, reducing the number of U.S. troops stationed here to 3,600.

The four communications sites to be turned over were used as signal sites supporting an old microwave radio system. Since the radio system is no longer deemed essential the sites will be relinquished, the release said.

Nairobi (SEPT. 19) - The Eritrean Democratic Movement (Edm) has decided to merge with the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (Eplf), Ethio reported Wednesday.

The Voice of the Broad Masses of Eritrea monitored in Nairobi said the decision was reached during talks between an Edm delegation led and the Eplf leadership in Massawa on September 12.

''The political decision adopted by the (Edm) movement noted that the current call of our broad masses and heroic army was for all national forces to join hands to eradicate once and for all the enemy forces and colonial institutions in our country'', the radio said.

''We accordingly wish to declare to the Eritrean people that in response to that call we have decided to join the Eplf and struggle alongside it,'' the radio said.

JAKARTA (SEPT. 19) - British Secretary of State for Energy John Wakeham Wednesday blamed "worry factors" related to the Gulf situation and not supply shortages for current high oil prices.

"The most important step to take is how to bring back calm to the situation," he said.

Mr. Wakeham was speaking shortly after meeting with President Suharto.

But Indonesian Mines and Energy Minister Ginanjar Kartasasmita, who accompanied Mr. Wakeham, said world oil prices had now reached a critical mark, and called for a commitment from industrial nations to release their stocks.

"There is a range which we see as safe, that is prices between 21 and 26 dollars (a barrel). Above that it is the yellow light, 31-32 dollars is already a red light," Mr. Ginanjar said.

Oil prices this week reached above 33 dollars a barrel, the highest level since 1982, in the wake of Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Mr. Ginanjara also said that "it appears that prices would not go down again even though every kind of statements have been issued."

He called on industrialized countries to help pressure prices down by issuing a statement saying that they intended to soon release their crude stock.

"If there is even only a statement from industrial countries that they were preparing to release their stocks, prices will go down," Mr. Ginanjar said.

Mr. Wakeham said that his three-day visit to Indonesia which started Tuesday was aimed primarily at exploring ways to promote cooperation between British and Indonesian companies in the energy sector.

SINGAPORE (SEPT. 19) - The Singapore International Monetary Exchange (Simex) has announced the launching of its Euromark interest futures contract from Thursday.

Along with the launching of the new contract Simex also offered several incentives to encourage market participation, which included the waiving of clearing fee charged on market-making trades done by designated market makers.

The designated market-makers are: Bankers Trust Company, Dresdner Bank Aktiengesellschaft, Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York and Swiss Bank Corporation.

Simex also offered a 50 percent rebate of the clearing fees for volume up to 3,000 contracts a month and a full rebate if the traded volume exceeds 3,000 contracts per month.

For all other market participants a 50 percent rebate of the clearing fees chargeable on their trades will be granted.

The five-day trading on the Euromark will be conducted from Monday to Friday, with March, June, September and December as contract months. The two-year cycle will begin with December this year as the first contract month.

Delivery will be by cash settlement.

The West German Ambassador to Singapore, Karl Spallcke, will officiate at the launching.

The new launching will make Simex the only exchange in the world to offer three major Euro interest rate instruments in one market place -- Eurodollar, the Euroyen and Euromark.

HANOI (SEPT. 19) - Vietnam has introduced strict regulations on gold and foreign exchange dealings, the Nhan Dan daily said here Wednesday.

The new rules -- affecting individuals and companies both domestic and foreign -- call for the setting up of an official market with all transactions outside of banks banned, the newspaper said.

"The setting up of a foreign exchange market with state participation will allow the authorities to play a regulatory role," a Vietnamese banking official said.

The U.S. dollar is currently worth 5,250 dong at the official rate of exchange and fetches 6,300 on the black market.

Vietnamese companies will have to deposit foreign exchange in the country's banks and opening accounts or depositing currency overseas is banned except in special cases, the newspaper said.

It said gold dealing, now also banned in "any cross-border transactions," can only be done through the state bank which will authorise imports.

Gold prices are currently rising regularly in Vietnam, where it fetches 321,000 dong (50 U.S. dollars) per chi (3.7 grams).

The Vietnamese have always seen gold and U.S. dollars as safe havens.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) - A senior International Monetary Fund (IMF) official has urged sticking to strict monetary policies despite the oil shock caused by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

The official, who requested anonymity, said Tuesday the Fund calculates that the surge in oil prices will knock half a point off growth rates of the industrialized economies and cause inflation to accelerate by half to three-quarters of a point in the last quarter of 1990 and in 1991.

Higher oil prices should be passed as quickly as possible to the consumer and the struggle against inflation should be maintained, he insisted, warning against the growth policies adopted in the '70s.

Statistics show developing countries benefitting slightly from the oil crisis, but there are sharp differences between oil producing and exporting countries and oil importing nations, he said.

For some countries, the consequences will be severe, the official said, citing the Philippines, India, Brazil, Jamaica, the Dominican Republic, Morocco, and the Ivory Coast.

Multilateral support should be extended to the countries hardest hit, the official said. The IMF, he added, would "provide the membership the appropriate support."

"The IMF and the World Bank will try to play their role of catalyzer," he said. But the IMF will not establish a special mechanism, as it did in the past, to aid countries hurt by rising oil prices. Instead, the IMF will use the instruments and resources already at its disposal, he said.

On the other hand, IMF directors will propose that member countries to increase their contribution to the Fund's Compensatory and Contingency Financing Facility to help the hardest hit countries.

The senior official raised the possibility that access to the Fund's resources might be expanded beyond the current limit of 110 per cent of a member's quota. But he added that such a move did not appear to be necessary at the moment.

PARIS (SEPT. 19) - Iraqis deported two more French nationals residing in Kuwait to an unknown destination earlier this week, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry announced here Wednesday.

"Two Frenchmen have been carried off to unknown places at the start of the week", spokesman Daniel Bernard said.

"The situation in Kuwait is far from getting better, on the contrary", Mr. Bernard said, adding, "There is an incrasing threat of raids in western circles. Westerners, and notably the French, must therefore take a lot of precautions."

Mr. Bernard did not say under what circumstances the arrests of the Frenchmen were made.

About 360 French nationals are currently being held hostage in Iraq and Kuwait including 100 in hiding in Kuwait, according to foreign ministry figures.

About 60 Frenchmen are being held as human shields in what Iraq considers to be strategic targets.

An informed source said earlier this week that some people holding double nationalities had managed to leave Iraq in recent days by concealing their French nationality. Many of these were reportedly nationals of developing countries.

LOURDES, FRANCE (SEPT. 19) - People visiting Lourdes for the reputedly miraculous beneficial effects of the waters will have to make do with just one drop each in future, as demand is outstripping supply.

In a statement Wednesday, the rectorat of the Lourdes shrine said that the spring was not drying up, but that it was unable to meet the strong demand placed upon it.

The authorities in charge had therefore decided to give priority to using the water in pools for the immersion of the sick.

According to the rectorat, the scarcity of Lourdes water is not so much due to the drought which France has known over the last two years as an increase in the number of visitors to the shrine and the use of larger water taps.

About five million people a year from around the world visit Lourdes, where the Virgin Mary is reputed to have appeared to Bernadette Soubirous in the middle of the 19th century.

An average of about 12 wonder cures a year are recorded among people who visit the shrine, but since the year 1858 the Roman Catholic Church has only recognised 64 as being genuine miracles.

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (SEPT. 19) - The number of Kuwaitis fleeing into Saudi Arabia slowed to a trickle on Wednesday with just 20 people, mostly women and children, entering the kingdom through the sole crossing point at Khafji, Saudi officials said.

Saudi immigration officials at Khafji, some 350 (220 miles) north of here, said the Iraqi occupation authorities in Kuwait had reopened the frontier at 7 a.m. Wednesday after closing it for the night.

Since the Khafji crossing was opened on Saturday, for the first time since the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, about 8,000 to 9,000 Kuwaitis have fled into Saudi Arabia, one Saudi official said by telephone.

But he said that only "about 20" Kuwaitis had crossed into Saudi Arabia as of Wednesday afternoon compared with an average of several hundred by the same time on previous days.

The spokesman said that "only women and children and men over 30" had entered Saudi Arabia on Wednesday through Khafji.

Iraqi troops have been preventing young Kuwait men from crossing the border since Monday, according to Kuwaiti refugees interviewed at the frontier.

WINDHOEK (SEPT. 19) - Angola's first consignment of diesel oil to Namibia -- some 1.5 million litres (390,000 gallons) -- has arrived at the southern coastal port of Luderitz, the Namibian newspaper reported Wednesday.

Valued at 780,000 rands (303,420 dollars), the diesel oil was offloaded on Tuesday, the report said.

Deputy Mines and Energy Minister Helmut Angula described the shipment, the first since Namibia attained its independence from South Africa on March 21, as a "very important and historic moment".

"At the moment we are 100 per cent dependent on South Africa (for fuel) and that is not the kind of dependency we can afford," Mr. Angula said, adding that within five years all Namibia's fuel needs could be met from other sources.

South Africa has also expressed interest in importing oil from Angola, a market which has been closed to it because of its apartheid policies.

But thanks to recent reforms initiated by President Frederik de Klerk, the possibility of a change in policy in the near future was hinted at during bilateral talks between South Africa and Angola here last week, sources said.

ATHENS (SEPT. 19) - Economic activity in Greece was paralysed on Wednesday by a 24-hour strike supported by about two million workers in the public and private sectors.

International and domestic air traffic by Greek Olympic Airways was badly hit. The strike also disrupted urban transport, public services and hospitals in Athens, while banks remained closed for the 13th successive day.

There was an increase in the number of power cuts which have affected four million inhabitants of the capital since last week. Blank traffic lights and a big union demonstration caused massive traffic jams.

It was the fifth strike against austere economic policies since conservatives were elected to government on April 8. The last strike was on Thursday.

Unions have protested for 10 days against draft reforms to the social security system and retirement benefits which the government tabled late on Tuesday and which put in question existing advantages.

The government has modified the text to take account of objections, but unions are demanding that the project be withdrawn.

MANAMA (SEPT. 19) - Iran Wednesday assured Bahrain of its determination to see Iraq withdraw from Kuwait and reiterated its pledge to respect the U.N. embargo against Baghdad, official sources said here.

The assurances were contained in a message from Iranian President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani to the emir of Bahrain, Sheikh Isa bin Salman al-Khalifa, delivered by the Iranian charge d'affaires here, the sources said.

Mr. Rafsanjani told Sheikh Isa his country's position "was in harmony with all the resolutions passed by the United Nations on the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and the embargo imposed against Iraq."

Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati gave similar assurances in talks in Teheran late Tuesday with Omani Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Youssef bin Alawi bin Abdallah, Teheran Radio reported.

But Mr. Velayati also described the burgeoning presence of foreign military forces in the Gulf following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait as "a serious danger for the security and independence of the countries of the region."

Jersualem (SEPT. 19) - Israeli Premier Itzhak Shmair warned Wednesday that Gulf states ''will fall like a house of cards'' unless Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is overthrown as part of a settlement of the nearly seven-week-old Gulf crisis.

If Saddam, who ordered the August 2 invasion of Kuwait, survived the crisis ''it is very doubtful that all the Gulf states will be able to hang on,'' Shamir told the Jerusalem Post newspaper. ''They will fall like a house of cards ...,'' he added.

Shamir did not rule out an Iraqi attack on Israel if war breaks out in the region, saying, ''We have to treat the statements of Saddam Hussein seriously.''

''Striking at Israel is not only a realization of his ideology, but a step in undermining the whole coalition arrayed against him,'' Shamir added.

''Israel knows how to defend itself and Israel is capable of responding and striking at anyone who tries to harm her,'' he added.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 19) - Two Indian passenger ships, the Tipu Sultan and the Akbar, are on their way to the Iraqi port of Umm Qasr to pick up Indian nationals who have fled Kuwait, a government spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman said the two ships, usually used by the government to take pilgrims to Mecca, had obtained all necessary clearances and sailed from Bombay port Monday night.

"The sailing time is expected to be five or six days," the spokesman said, adding that it was as yet unsure whether the ships would take the passengers to Dubai, or bring them straight home.

Tuesday the government had said almost 50,000 of the 172,000 Indians trapped in Kuwait when it was invaded by Iraq August 2, had been brought home.

A spokesman also said New Delhi was seeking clearance to add airforce transport planes to its fleet of civilian planes picking up refugees from Amman, Jordan.

At the time of the invasion another 10,000 Indians were in Iraq, where chartered buses are arriving almost daily from Kuwait bringing those stranded there for transhipment.

Sunday an Indian cargo ship left Cochin port loaded with some 10,000 tonnes of food destined for its nationals trapped in the Gulf, the first such shipment since the U.N. -sanctionned blockade was imposed against Iraq.

Modalities of the food distribution have yet to be announced, with the U.N. saying its agencies should be responsible for distribution and Iraq saying they will not be allowed to.

BEIJING (SEPT. 19) - The highest-ranking Vietnamese official to visit China since their 1979 border war arrived Wednesday in Beijing and said the time was ripe for normalization of relations.

Vietnamese Deputy Prime Minister Vo Nguyen Giap's visit came at the invitation of the Chinese Olympic Committee, but observers said the mission was highly political and marked an important step in the rapprochment between the two countries.

Nonetheless, China was maintaining official silence on Mr. Giap's trip several hours after he arrived.

"The Chinese Communist Party and the government have created the necessary conditions for my visit today," Mr. Giap said at the airport, adding that he was "very happy" to be back in China after nearly 13 years.

"I think that the friendly and traditional relationships between the two countries will further develop," he said. "The time is ripe for normalization."

China and Vietnam fought a brief but bloody border war in 1979 after Vietnam invaded Cambodia to oust the Chinese-backed Khmer Rough regime. Since then, relations between the communist neighbors have been strained.

Mr. Giap, a war hero who rose to the rank of general, was to remain "about four days" in Beijing, an informed source said.

VALENCE, Spain (SEPT. 19) - The Gulf crisis could be partly responsible for halving Spain's expected growth rate to 2.5 percent in 1991 from five per cent in 1990, the economic adviser to the Spanish banking association Luis Martinez Arevalo said here on Wednesday.

He said that 1991 would mark the end of an economic cycle since the fall of oil prices in 1986 when growth had been above five percent per year.

Describing the Spanish economy as "currently the most dynamic", he said it might be particularly hard hit as it was an economy in which the Kuwait

Investment Office had invested particularly heavily.

Uncertainty surrounding the management of these investments, which had been frozen, could reduce the growth rate by one percentage point, he said.

MANILA (SEPT. 19) - The Philippines suggested Wednesday that Washington reduce Manila's debts as part of a wide-ranging treaty governing future ties and including a reduced U.S. military presence in the country, officials said.

On the second day of talks on the future of U.S. military bases in the Philippines, spokesmen for both sides told a news conference the negotiations bore the name Philippine-American Cooperation Talks (PACT), signifying a mutual desire to further develop bilateral ties.

The talks are focusing on the future of Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, the largest U.S. overseas military facilities whose lease expires on September 16, 1991.

U.S. President George Bush's special negotiator, Richard Armitage, called for a "phasedown and transition period, the rate and length of which have to be determined" with "minimum discomfort and maximum benefit to other countries," U.S. spokesman Stanley Schrager said.

Mr. Armitage called Tuesday for a reduced U.S. military presence in the Philippines, as Washington announced the closure of more than 100 military facilities around the world from next year.

One Philippine official requested American help in managing a 27 billion dollar external debt, "including debt condonation" or reduction, Philippine spokesman Rafael Alunan told journalists.

Manila's proposal was similar to the debt-reduction scheme the United States is to grant Egypt, following Cairo's agreement to join a U.S.-led military deployment in Saudi Arabia, Mr. Alunan said without elaborating.

The proposed U.S. military phasedown was similar to agreements under which the United States maintains "access to military facilities and some form of small military presence" in other countries, Mr. Schrager said but did not specify a timetable for the military cutbacks.

The talks will turn to security issues Thursday, he said.

ISLAMABAD (SEPT. 19) - Pakistan is ready to send 10,000 troops to Saudi Arabia - double its current contingent - if Riyadh requests it, a senior government source said here Wednesday.

Pakistan "will consider any Saudi request" to bring the Pakistani contingent to 10,000 men or possibly more, said the source, who asked not to be named.

The idea of assembling an "Islamic force" in the Gulf was being discussed in Islamabad, he added.

"We need them against India, they need us to face Saddam," he said, referring to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, whose troops invaded Kuwait on August 2.

An armed forces spokesman, Brigadier General Riaz Ullah, meanwhile said that Pakistan had sent 2,000 troops to Saudi Arabia since September 1 while 3,000 others were waiting to depart amid "administrative problems" in Riyadh.

"We are not short of manpower. We have a large army and a large reserve," Brig. Gen. Ullah said.

Pakistan has close military ties with Saudi Arabia, which requested additional troops following Iraq's invasion of neighboring Kuwait.

CAIRO (SEPT. 19) - The Egyptian Trade Union Federation (Etuf) Wednesday said it will present a complaint against Iraq to the International Labour Organisation (Ilo) concerning treatment of Egyptian workers.

Etuf secretary-General Mohammad Hashem said Egyptian workers returning from Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait had said they were badly treated there, were pressured psychologically and in some cases had lived under inhuman conditions.

Many of the estimated 1.5 millions Egyptian workers in Iraq and Kuwait were forbidden to leave those countries, especially the ones working in vital installations, Hashem said.

He charged that Iraqi authorities have forced Egyptians to join the armed forces.

Hashem said the complaint filed with the Geneva-based Ilo would be based on testimonies of many of the 300,000 Egyptians who fled from the Gulf since Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2.

The state-controlled Etuf says it represents about four million Egyptians organised in 23 unions. It recently called on all Egyptians in Iraq and Kuwait to return home.

ATHENS (SEPT. 19) - A delegation headed by a senior Greek diplomat arrived in Ankara Wednesday for talks aimed at improving frosty relations between the two countries, foreign ministry sources said here.

"No agenda has been prepared" for the contacts between Emmanuel Ghikas, director of the Turkey and Cyprus department in the foreign ministry with senior Turkish officials, sources added.

Foreign Minister Antonis Samaras meanwhile urged the United States in a letter to U.S. Secretary of State James Baker to maintain a seven-to-ten ratio in its military aid to Greece and Turkey, government spokesman Byron Polydoras said.

Ankara and Athens have been at loggerheads for years over the Turkish occupation of northern Cyprus and the delimitation of the continental shelf in the Aegean Sea.

Prime Minister Constantin Mitsotakis and his Turkish counterpart Yildirim Akbulut agreed on a new round of talks on the sidelines of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) summit in London last July.

Earlier attempts to settle the Turkish-Greek dispute all failed.

Greece has accused Turkey of hypocrisy over its stand on the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, drawing a parallel with Ankara's 1974 invasion of Cyprus.

But the Turkish daily Milliyet said Athens was "jealous" of the international approval of Turkey's firm position in the Gulf crisis.

JERUSALEM (SEPT. 19) - Two rival Palestinian factions in the Israeli-occupied territories have announced their reconciliation and an agreement coordinating their activities in the Palestinian uprising.

The move by Fatah, the main group in the Palestine Liberation Organization, and the Moslem fundamentalist faction Hamas followed fierce battles between the two over their differing views on Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

In an unprecedented statement issued late Tuesday, the two groups said they would put an end to their differences and define their relations on new terms "aimed at the common struggle against the Zionist enemy."

They said "acts of resistance" would from now on be coordinated between Hamas and the PLO-backed Unified Leadership of the uprising, or intifada in Arabic, which has gripped the West Bank and Gaza Strip since December 1987.

The statement made no mention of the Gulf crisis or the vicious fighting in refugee camps between PLO and Hamas militants -- including attacks with steel bars, axes and knives -- that wounded dozens of people earlier this month.

Hamas, which received funds from the former Kuwaiti leadership, fiercely contested PLO support for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, arguing that Iraq's invasion of Kuwait was similar to Israel's occupation of Palestinian land.

The Sunni Moslem fundamentalist group, formed several months after the uprising began, has been a constant rival of the secular nationalist PLO.

It has accused Yasser Arafat's organisation of corruption and firmly opposed its willingness to claim only the West Bank and Gaza Strip for a Palestinian state rather than the whole of the former British mandate of Palestine.

MANAMA (SEPT. 19) - Kuwaitis are now adjusting to life under an iron-fisted Iraqi governor who was responsible for a chemical weapons attack on a Kurdish village in northeast Iraq that killed thousands.

Ali Hassan al-Majid, a first cousin of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, was also responsible for a "scorched earth" policy in Iraqi Kurdistan.

His appointment Sunday, seen in the Gulf as a clear indication that Iraqi intends to rule with an iron fist in Kuwait, coincided with the exodus of thousands of Kuwaitis into Saudi Arabia.

But Iraqi troops that same day began stopping Kuwaiti men aged 15 to 40 from leaving the emirate, according to Kuwaiti officials and witnesses, in what one said was an attempt to conscript them into the Iraqi army.

Mr. al-Majid, 47, and among the closest allies of President Hussein, in March 1987 was named the Baath party official responsible for Kurdistan, a post that also gave him control over the army, police and militia in the area.

Two months later the Iraqi army began a vast operation to depopulate several Kurdish areas. People and cattle were forcibly moved to regions near the Jordanian and Saudi borders, away from their traditional lands.

Western press reports said between 80 and 300 villages were flattened in a matter of days.

Jalal Telebani, head of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan resistance group, announced in May of that year that a broad-based Kurdish insurrection had erupted in response to the population transfers.

The scorched earth policy gained momentum in June 1987 after Iran, then at war with Iraq, launched an offensive that was backed by Iraqi Kurdish rebels, known as peshmergas.

The Kurdish resistance charged that Iraqi forces had used chemical weapons against them, a charge Baghdad denied.

But the doubts vanished the following year, when on March 17 and 18 Iraqi troops gassed Halabja, a 70,000-strong Kurdish community. Western estimates put the number of dead at 4,000 with an equal number wounded.

The Kurdish resistance was finally crushed in September 1988. At the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France, deputies adopted a resolution describing the "extermination" of Iraqi Kurdish civilians "as close to reaching the dimensions of genocide."

Even within Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council there was opposition to Mr. al-Majid's tactics. The government's second-in-command, Izzat Ibrahim, reportedly objected to the brutality and repression carried out in Kurdistan.

Mr. al-Majid apparently was stripped of his responsibilities in the region and in June 1989 was named Minister for Local Government, charged with re-building Iraq after the Gulf war.

His predecessor in the post, Adnan Daoud Salman, and his 12 associates had been sacked by presidential decree for not having rebuilt the southern Iraqi port city of Basra fast enough.

President Hussein wanted Basra, which had been heavily damaged in the eight-year Gulf war, to be re-constructed within three months -- an impossible task.

He next turned his attention to Faw, another devastated Iraqi city that had served as Iraq's principal oil terminal on the Gulf.

It was a challenge accepted by Mr. al-Majid and the rebuilding campaign got underway on June 25, 1989 under the approving eye of Mr. Hussein. Iraqi authorities said some two to three million volunteers came forward to do the job, which proved a success.

Iraq, whose forces seized and occupied Kuwait early last month, has given every indication that it intends to stand by its annexation of the oil-rich emirate.

The Iraqi and Kuwait currencies have been aligned, the Iraqi educational curriculum has been introduced and Kuwait City is to be linked to the Iraqi rail network.

It is still unclear what sort of policy Mr. al-Majid, who both destroyed Iraqi Kurdistan and rebuilt Faw, will pursue in occupied Kuwait, now Iraq's 19th province.

U.S. officials have expressed concern that among the thousands of Kuwaitis fleeing into Saudi Arabia could be concealed teams of Iraqi agents.

Intelligence gathering is also one of Mr. al-Majid's specialties, as he headed an Iraqi spy agency prior to his appointment in Kurdistan.

ABU DHABI (SEPT. 19) - The United Arab Emirates (UAE), which suffered panic bank withdrawals and a trade slump after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, could now be heading for a mini-boom owing to the Gulf crisis, officials here said.

The financial and trade officials are convinced the UAE economy has overcome the initial impact of the August 2 invasion, when nearly two billion dollars were reported transferred abroad and business activity came to a virtual halt.

"The Gulf crisis will have in the short term - one or two months - some negative effects on the UAE economy and especially the banking sector," UAE Central Bank Governor Abdul Malik al-Hamar said in an interview this week.

"After that the positive effects will be so large that a possible mini-boom may occur," he said.

Mr. al-Hamar said the major benefit to the Emirates' oil-based economy would come from the effect of the crisis on world oil prices, which have soared to more than 30 dollars a barrel from around 14 dollars before August.

The UAE has also been able to raise its output from a little over one million barrels per day (bpd) to two million bpd owing to OPEC measures to offset the loss of some four million bpd of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil.

"The additional, unexpected oil revenues will help the UAE government to meet all the requirements of economic expansion," Mr. al-Hamar said.

The Central Bank expects the UAE to earn 13 billion dollars from oil exports this year compared to 10 billion dollars in 1989. The 1990 trade surplus is forecast to widen by 14 per cent to 6.26 billion dollars from 5.47 billion.

Mr. al-Hamar said the extra oil revenue will be mainly used by the government to help meet the cost of hosting foreign military forces called to the region to defend the Gulf states against a possible Iraqi attack.

"That leaves the flow of non-military government expenditure as it was before the crisis," the central bank governor added. "This expenditure may also go up. All this will help boost private sector activity."

He did not indicate how the extra spending would affect the UAE budget, which hovered around 3.6 billion dollars in each of the past four years.

HARARE (SEPT. 19) - Iran's Minister of Commerce, visiting here Wednesday, said his country was willing to meet Zimbabwe's entire oil import needs, formerly supplied from Kuwait.

After signing an order for 30,000 tonnes of maize from Zimbabwe's 1.2 million tonne stockpile, Abdolhossein Vahhaji said he hoped a preliminary Memorandum of Understanding would lead to a formal agreement to expand trade between the two countries.

Zimbabwe last year imported approximately 25 million U.S. dollars-worth of petroleum products from the Gulf, most of it coming in via the heavily defended 270 km (170 miles) pipeline from the Mozambican port of Beira to the border town of Mutare. Iran has been giving Zimbabwe technical assistance in modernising the refinery at Feruka, outside Mutare.

Mr. Vahhaji and his delegation are holding discussions with the state-owned National Oil Company of Zimbabwe, the Grain Marketing Board, and the Zimbabwe National Chambers of Commerce.

The new Iranian diplomatic offensive in Zimbabwe follows a disastrous state visit here by former president Ayatollah Ali Khamenei in 1985 when relations were soured by the guests' boycott of President Robert Mugabe's banquet in their honour, allegedly because of the presence of women in cocktail dresses and the serving of alcohol.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 19) - Australia's Foreign Minister Gareth Evans told a conference on Vietnamese reconstruction Wednesday that Hanoi's economic reform program known as "doi moi" must include political liberalization if it is to succeed.

Mr. Evans, who played the key role in initiating the Cambodian peace plan, also warned that many of the gains Vietnam has achieved through diplomacy would disappear if it engaged in Chinese-style political repression.

The Australian government had long believed Vietnam's isolation was undesirable and that resolving problems preventing normalisation was in the interest of regional stability, he said.

"It is now not only possible, but likely, that Vietnam is on the verge of a new era in its dealings with the region and with Australia," he added.

Mr. Evans is credited with playing the major role in formulating the United Nations-sanctioned peace plan for Cambodia, which was under Vietnamese military occupation for more than 10 years. Vietnam's withdrawal last year laid the groundwork for normalisation with the West.

Among invited guest speakers at the "doi moi" conference is a group of Vietnamese economists and academics including some prominent liberals.

One is Hoang Ngoc Nguyen, a former Oxford student who spent time in a re-education camp after the fall of Saigon in 1975 and the author of a recent manual of advice for foreigners doing business in Vietnam.

But conference organisers admitted to being disappointed that one academic known for his liberal views, Pham Nhu Cuong, was refused permission to attend despite last-minute representations by Australian Embassy officials.

Representatives from several Australian companies eager to expand business links in the "new" Vietnam are also attending the conference, which was organized and funded by the Australian National University's Research School of Pacific Studies in Canberra.

Mineral and mining companies such as BHP and CRA are currently evaluating the prospects for relatively large-scale developments in Vietnam's coal and oil deposits.

The Australian telecommunications company OTC Ltd. recently won a 250 million dollar (207 million U.S.) contract to upgrade Vietnam's internal and overseas communications links.

Mr. Evans referred in his address to Vietnam's potential for economic development and to its "significant natural resources: coal, seafood, coffee, oil."

There was no doubt, he said, that Vietnam also had the potential to rapidly develop as a major tourist destination -- with its rich traditional culture, striking landscape and a modern history which had touched the lives of people in many countries.

Hanoi embarked on a gradual process of economic reform following recognition in 1979 that fundamental changes to the socialist economic system were inevitable, he said.

Since the 6th Party Congress in 1986, it had gone much further through its adoption of the doi moi program, Mr. Evans said, adding that it had also brought a measure of political reform.

But so far, Vietnam had "resisted or effectively diverted" the kind of pressure for political reform that previously existed in China.

"However, the process of doi moi can only succeed if economic reform is accompanied by some liberalisation of political activity," he said.

"Inevitably, increased contact and interaction with non-socialist nations through developing trade and investment relationships cannot help but change the political perceptions and expectations of many Vietnamese."

Even in Vietnam, he said, there must be doubt about whether devolution of economic decision-making could work effectively without similar political and social changes.

He warned that it would be "a matter for extreme regret" if at any time it was seeking to improve its regional links Vietnam were to engage in the sort of political repression that occurred in China.

"This is not an immediate prospect, but were it to take place, many of the gains made by Vietnamese diplomacy in recent years would disappear."

PARIS (SEPT. 19) - The French government on Wednesday approved a bill regulating telecommunications, providing for the retention of the state's monopoly over the telephone infrastructure but allowing competition on services.

The bill, presented by Telecommunications Minister Paul Quiles, sets out a new legal framework regulating telecommunications along the lines of recommendations from Brussels, and modernises a sector which until now had been partly governed by a law dating from 1837.

The monopoly of the state-run company France Telecom is retained concerning telephone networks available to the public and the approval of appliances such as telephones, fax machines and electronic screens.

But the bill provides for France Telecom to be in competition with private companies on telephone-related services.

The Transpac (packet switching) data transmission system is no longer to be reserved for the state sector.

The bill gives the state the responsibility of attributing "CB" private radio frequencies, which had previously been the domain of the independent regulatory body, the Conseil Superieur Audiovisuel (CSA).

But the CSA retains responsibility over all questions connected with radio and television.

Quiles has said that he aims to push France into the position of world telecommunications leader with his reform package.

France is at the forefront of telecommunications innovations through its five million Minitel electronic screens, used to access information and services via the telephone line, and the "smart card" telephone card.

The telecommunications bill is to go before parliament next month.

WARSAW (SEPT. 19) - The number of people unemployed in Poland rose by 100,000 in the month to mid September to total 887,000, the governmental newspaper Rzeczpospolita reported on Wednesday.

The biggest pockets of unemployment were recorded in Cracow in the south of the country where 49,000 people were unemployed and in Lodz in the centre of the country where 45,000 people were without work.

Experts have warned the the number of people without work could total nearly 1.3 million by the end of the year.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) - Japan plans to include Syria and Morocco in its two billion dollar program to help countries hurt by the Gulf crisis, Japanese government sources said Wednesday.

In its announcement Friday, Japan mentioned only Egypt, Turkey and Jordan as countries directly affected by the crisis and needing economic assistance.

A government source said Syria and Morocco will not, however, benefit from 600 million dollars in emergency aid within the two billion dollar package.

The remaining 1.4 billion dollars will be granted in the form of medium-term loans as part of cooperation with other countries under the large international financial organizations.

Funds for Syria and Morocco will come from the 1.4 billion dollars, said the government source, adding that eastern European countries, non-oil-producing Asian countries and low-income nations would be excluded from the aid program announced Friday.

NAIROBI (SEPT. 19) - Two Ethiopian rebel groups have merged to fight for the independence of the war-torn north-eastern province of Eritrea, rebel radio announced Wednesday.

The Voice of the Broad Masses of Eritrea, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corporation, said the Eritrean Democratic Movement, a small rebel group, had decided to join forces with the stronger Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF). The EPLF controls much of northern Eritrea including the strategic Red Sea port of Massawa.

"We have decided to join the EPLF and struggle alongside it," the radio quoted EDM leaders as saying. The merger was decided during talks between an EDM delegation led by Hiruy Tedla Bayru and the EPLF leadership in Massawa last week. EPLF leaders welcomed the move.

Eritrean rebels have been fighting Ethiopian rule for three decades.

Islamabad (SEPT. 19) - Soviet planes have continued bombarding the civilian population in Qala-i-Nau, the provincial capital of Badghis province bordering the Soviet Union, even after the ostensible Ussr pullout last year, the Media Information Department of the Interim Government of Afghanistan (Midia) reported here Wednesday quoting sources from the area.

Mir Sayed Sahibzada, in charge of the cultural office of the south-west zone of Afghanistan, told Midia that Soviet planes usually bombed the outskirts of the capital. But their particular targets were southern parts of the city, areas used by the Afghan resistance fighters for their operations into the town, Sahibzada said.

Another source claimed that the Soviet planes took off from airfields in the Central Asian republics of Tajikistan and Uzbekistan since land routes were being controlled by the Mujahideen.

The siege of city by the Afghan Mujahideen had also resulted in shortages of food and medicines, Moalem Zabiullah, who also hails from Badghis, said.

SINGAPORE (SEPT. 19) - Asia's booming economies are facing a potential shortfall in refining capacity that could slow down their ambitious plans for growth, a leading Japanese oil executive said here Wednesday.

Participants at the three-day Asia-Pacific Petroleum Conference that wound up here Wednesday agreed that Asia's growing hunger for oil made it vulnerable to tight supplies of refined products highlighted during the Gulf crisis.

Japanese oil executive Kiyoshi Takahashi told the gathering Wednesday that despite plans to expand Asian refining facilities, "substantial gaps between supply and demand will still be observed" in the coming years.

Mr. Takahashi, president of Showa Shell Sekiyu Kaihatsu K.K., said that long-term growth did not look in jeopardy in the region, but added, "of course there might be some delay or slowdown of economic growth caused by the current crisis."

He said that total oil demand in the region was likely to hit 15.8 million barrels a day by 1995, 3.6 million barrels up on the 1988 figure. Most of it would be for middle distillates - kerosene, gasoil, jet fuel - and motor gasoline.

But additional refining capacity planned over the period is estimated at only 1.8 million barrels a day, he said.

Major capacity expansions are planned in Southeast Asia, China and parts of the Far East, but environmental concerns have hampered plans in Japan, Australia, New Zealand, the western U.S. coast and Canada.

"Topper" capacity for the basic process of oil distillation was in generally sufficient supply except in South Asia, Australia, New Zealand and to some extent in Japan, Mr. Takahashi said.

But he said shortages would be felt throughout Asia in "secondary unit" capacity for upgrading heavy oil to make the lighter products that are in so much demand.

The result, he said, would be efforts to boost the trade in oil products among Asian countries and expand imports from outside the region to cover the general imbalance.

Dennis O'Brien, chief economist for Caltex Petroleum Corp., forecast that demand for oil by countries east of Suez would grow twice as fast as in the rest of the world and "create a serious refining bottleneck in the region."

CAIRO (SEPT. 19) - Annual revenues of the Suez Canal may drop by 400 million dollars if war erupts in the Middle East, Canal company president Adel Ezzat said in a report published here Wednesday.

Mr. Ezzat told the weekly magazine Akher Sa'a that if a United Nations-backed embargo against Iraq and Kuwait were maintained, canal earnings could take an annual slide of 200 million dollars.

Canal income totalled 1.4 billion dollars in fiscal year 1989-90.

Mr. Ezzat said the interruption of oil production and exports from Iraq and Kuwait after August 2, as well as the anti-Iraqi sanctions approved four days later, had resulted in the loss of seven million tons of oil that transited annually through the canal for markets in Europe.

Iraqi troops invaded Kuwait August 2 and annexed its southern neighbor on August 8, triggering a massive multi-nation military buildup in the Gulf.

Mr. Ezzat added that if Saudi Arabia's oil output were interrupted, the results could be catastrophic, since Egypt benefits from the passage of some 16 million tons a year of Saudi oil through the canal.

He gave no details on the financial loss from such an interruption but said increased insurance premiums on vessels heading for the Gulf had caused many shipowners to abandon this route.

The canal's chief said foreign warships passing through the waterway were charged a rate 25 percent higher than that for tankers.

HARARE (SEPT. 19) - Zimbabwean game rangers, fighting for the survival of the endangered black rhinoceros, have shot dead four rhino poachers and captured two other poachers, official sources said Wednesday.

Chief warden Rodwell Ngwarai said the shoot-out took place last week in the Chizarira national park in the north of the country. The rangers found 18 rhino horns, the booty from nine dead rhino.

In Zimbabwe, poaching has reduced the number of black rhinos to about 1,000 at present from 100,000 animals 15 years ago. But the country still has Africa's largest reservoir of black rhinos.

The latest killings brought to 28 the number of poachers shot dead this year. An equal number of poachers were arrested.

Wildlife authorities here believe that their aggressive tactics -which include an officially authorised shoot-to-kill policy against the heavily-armed gangs - have turned the tide against the illegal slaughter.

Official figures show that poachers killed only 27 black rhinos this year compared to 97 last year.

BUDAPEST (SEPT. 19) - Britain supported unconditionally Hungary's bid for full membership in the European Economic Community (EEC), Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said here Wednesday.

The British premier told Hungarian government officials that associated EEC membership should be the first step before full-member status, according to radio reports here.

Hungary is pressing for associated membership by the end of next year and wants negotiations for full membership to start in early 1993.

Prime Minister Jozsef Antall told Mrs. Thatcher that switching from a centrally-controlled economy to a free-market system and attracting foreign investors were his government's main targets.

"We will need Britain's experience in the transitional period", the radio report quoted him as saying.

Mrs. Thatcher, who arrived here Tuesday from Czechoslovakia, visited the fledgling Budapest Stock Exchange and laid flowers at the national monument and the Raul Wallenberg statue Wednesday.

Raul Wallenberg, a Swedish diplomat, who helped many Jews escape Nazi persecution in Hungary at the end of World War II, mysteriously disappeared when the Soviet army chased the Nazis out of the country in 1945.

Mrs. Thatcher was to meet with President Arpad Goncz and leaders of the opposition Alliance of Free Democrats later Wednesday.

LAGOS (SEPT. 19) - One hundred and nine Nigerian children are known to have died nationwide in the last three months after taking doses of poisonous paracetamol syrup said to have been prepared by two government-owned pharmacies, it was announced here Wednesday.

Sixteen other children, who were also given doses of the poisonous analgesic, were under intensive care in various hospitals.

The health minister, Professor Olikoye Ransome-Kuti, told newsmen that the drugs were prepared by the two pharmacies with a dangerous raw material, ethylene glycol, allegedly manufactured by a Dutch company - Drugpharm Trading B.V. Industriele and Handelmaatschappy.

The minister said the poisonous compound was marketed under the trade mark of a harmless element called propylene glycol.

He said the dead children were all under six years of age, adding that while investigations were still being conducted into the unfortunate incident with a view to penalising the culprits, the federal government had placed a temporary ban on the sale of all brands of paracetamol syrups in the country and had warned parents to desist from giving the dose to their children.

LONDON (SEPT. 19) - The price of North Sea Brent oil eased to 32.25 dollars per barrel on profit taking from 32.95 dollars at the close on Tuesday when prices were at their highest for eight years.

Kleinwort Benson analyst Mehdi Varzi said that the fall was due mainly to profit taking in a volatile market.

Noting that U.S. oil industry figures on Tuesday that U.S. oil stocks had risen by five million barrels had contributed to the weakness, he said that the report "may put a lid on product prices in the short term".

Singapore (SEPT. 19) - Oil industry experts at the end of a three-day Asia-Pacific petroleum conference here Wednesday criticised the Soviet Union for failing to attend the meeting for the second consecutive year.

Moscow's absence was unhealthy for the conference and a loss to participating nations, they told the German Press Agency (dpa).

Moscow has said that its representative, Soviet Oil Refining Industry Minister N.V. Lemaev, had to cancel his trip because of debates at home on plans to reform the Soviet economy.

A leading Japanese oil economist said he was ''shocked'' to note that the Soviet Union had once again dropped out of the conference.

COLOMBO (SEPT. 19) - The U.S. military will operate three special flights to evacuate 420 refugees including Sri Lankans from the Gulf, the U.S. embassy in Colombo announced Wednesday.

The first of the flights, carrying 140 Sri Lankans, is expected to arrive in the country this week, while a similar number of Bangladeshis and Filipinos will be evacuated on September 24 and 27, a statement from the embassy, quoting Defence Department spokesman Pete Williams said.

The three military planes are also due to carry relief assistance from the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (Unicef) in Denmark to the displaced persons, it said.

The Canadian government has also offered to charter civilian aircraft to airlift displaced persons to their home countries including Sri Lanka, a statement from the Canadian High Commission in Colombo said.

In a related development, a Pakistani shipping company has hired five ships to the Sri Lankan government to evacuate its workers affected by the Gulf crisis.

Labour Minister Gamlath Mohottige Premachandra said the lives of over 60,000 Sri Lankans trapped in the Gulf were in danger if they were not evacuated before the winter commences.

The national carrer, Air Lanka, announced it was planning to evacuate 2,000 persons daily from the Gulf shortly. Over 1,000 persons were being repatriated daily from the Middle East daily.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) - Legislation that would limit the growth of U.S. textile imports was Wednesday on the desk of President George Bush, who had threatened to veto the bill as contrary to U.S. interests.

The bill would limit the yearly growth of textile imports to one percent and freeze shoe imports at 1989 levels, in a bid to lower the U.S. trade deficit in the textile sector from last year's 26.5 billion dollars.

The bill was passed 271-149 by the House of Representatives late Tuesday. The yes votes fell five short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto.

In July, the Senate gave it more than a two-third majority (68-32).

Mr. Bush -- like his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, a staunch defender of free-market principles -- threatened last Monday to veto the bill.

"It represents the worst form of economic policy for America, one based upon the mistaken belief that less trade throughout the world will somehow save American jobs and enhance our prosperity," he said in a letter to leaders of Congress.

Supporters of the measure contend more than half a million jobs in the textile industry have been lost to imports over the past 17 years.

Critics inside and outside the government argue that the bill would torpedo ongoing efforts in the 100-member General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) to lower trade barriers to U.S. products around the world.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 19) - Soldiers and armoured vehicles Wednesday took up positions around statues of Lenin and communist officials in Vilnius, the capital of Lithuania, in defiance of a vote by the city council to have them removed, eyewitnesses reported.

Vilnius' authorities had ordered the dismantling of the statues of Lenin, Kreve Mickevicius, the Baltic republic's first communist head of government, and of a Soviet general as well as several commemorative plaques.

Eyewitnesses contacted by Agence France-Presse said soldiers and war veterans moved into position around the monuments when city authorities were about to remove a plaque from the party central committee building commemorating Lithuania's first communist party secretary Antanas Snieckus.

Mr. Snieckus headed the republic's communist party from 1940 when Moscow annexed Lithuania until 1974.

Three armoured cars were also guarding each monument, eyewitnesses added.

PARIS (SEPT 19) - Air France reported a loss of about 170 million French francs (about 32.7 million dollars) in the first half compared with a net profit of 685 million francs for the whole of 1989, it emerged on Wednesday after a board meeting.

Air France said in a statement that it would tighten its plan for coping with current circumstances implying current cost cutting of 175 million francs mainly through suspension of recruitment, except for technical air crew

Investment on the ground which had not already been committed would be delayed in response to the new economic climate.

For the whole of 1990 "results will be affected by the currently very unfavourable situation for air transport", the company said.

But "rigorous" measures being taken should enable the company to limit the effects.

Consolidated results, including for the first time the businesses of Air Inter and UTA, were expected to be available in several weeks.

LAGOS (SEPT 19) - West African troops deployed in war-torn Liberia will mount an "all-out offensive against the rebel factions" and take "enforcement action" to win a ceasefire, their Ghanaian leader said here Wednesday.

Lieutenant-General Arnold Quainoo made the announcement after an hour-long meeting with Nigerian Vice-President Augustus Aikhomu and Defence Minister Sani Abacha.

Earlier Wednesday, in Ghana, Gen. Quainoo met head of state Jerry Rawlings, and announced a "limited" offensive by his force to protect its positions against rebel attacks.

Gen. Quainoo, who had been touring countries which have contributed to the five-nation peacekeeping force set up by the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), added that he had a "new mandate".

JAKARTA (SEPT 19) - PT INCO Indonesia has reduced its nickel matte production forecast for calendar 1990 to 62 million pounds, down eight million pounds from the original target, the company announced here Wednesday.

The forecast was lowered because of an explosion last month at one of its three furnaces in the Soroako plant in south Sulawesi, it said in a statement.

PT INCO is 58.2 percent owned by Toronto-based International Nickel Limited, the world's largest nickel producer.

LILLE, France (SEPT 19) - French and British channel tunnel-diggers are only 2.5 kilometers (1.6 miles) apart and will meet in six to eight weeks, the French-British consortium digging the first tunnel under the Channel said Wednesday.

"The first direct contact between British and French teams should take place in early December," and the complete linkage should be finished by the end of January 1991, a communique from the Eurotunnel consortium said.

"The junction of the two rail tunnels could take place in the summer of 1991, which would leave two years to equip the system and start operating it," the communique said.

BONN (SEPT 19) - An amnesty for East German spies planned for unification day on October 3 failed to gain the approval of the West German government Wednesday.

During a meeting of Bonn's ruling coalition - led by Chancellor Helmut Kohl - it was agreed to debate the matter in the all-German parliament following unification. The treaty unifying the Germanys is expected to be signed Thursday.

Passage of the amnesty bill was blocked when the Bundestag's (lower house) Judicial Committee refused to put it on Wednesday's agenda. The Bundesrat (upper house) had already rejected it, saying it was incomplete.

Without a law in time for unification, it will be up to the German federal prosecutor to decide whether to arrest East German agents living on East German territory. According to the West German Justice Ministry, about 8,000 people are affected.

Disapproval of the amnesty was expressed in particular by members of the Christian Social Union, who argued it would be ''politically inopportune'' and ''unexplainable to the public''. Opposition Social Democrats and some Free Democrats had demanded the amnesty be extended to members of West Germany's peace movement, convicted in the past of ''coercion'' for blocking roads leading to military bases.

During a legal convention in Munich, West German Justice Minister Hans Engelhard reiterated his support for the amnesty, which he said was not intended to include East German agents guilty of serious crimes or who ''spied on, coerced and threatened'' their countrymen.

LONDON (SEPT 19) - Britain needs an interest rate cut this year, the Confederation of British Industry (CBI) concluded at its monthly meeting here Wednesday.

In calling for the rate cut, the Confederation's president Sir Brian Corby said that there had been "a marked weakening" in the economy since the summer. "The economy is moving into recession," he warned.

Sir Brian said his members "understood the need for caution" in reducing interest rates, but that if the government takes a number of steps "We hope it will be possible to cut interest rates later this year, reducing the threat of recession while still bearing down on inflation."

The steps recommended included tighter controls on public expenditure, a smaller than planned increase in the Uniform Business Rate (local government tax on business) and entry for the pound into the European Economic Community's Exchange Rate Mechanism.

British bank base rates have stood at 15 percent since October last year, and Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major has so far resisted cutting them for fear of fuelling inflation, running at 10.6 percent annually in August.

WELLINGTON (SEPT 19) - Niue's eighty-two-year-old Premier Sir Robert Rex, the Pacific's longest serving head of government, fired two of his four cabinet members Wednesday after they tried to force him to resign, Niue Broadcasting Corporation (NBC) reported.

In an odd twist he has replaced one of the two with an earlier rival, opposition leader Young Vivian, who in April was within one vote of becoming premier.

Finance Minister Sonny Lakatani and Works Minister Frank Lui last week sent Sir Robert a letter saying that if he did not quit they would mount a no-confidence motion in the Legislative Assembly.

In a startling move however Sir Robert announced midday Wednesday that he had fired Mr. Lakatani and Mr. Lui from cabinet. He said Mr. Vivian, and a newly elected opposition MP Fisa Pihigia, will join the four person cabinet with portfolios to be allocated later.

In a telephone interview with Agence France Presse from the capital Alofi Wednesday night Mr. Vivian said Sir Robert had the numbers in the 20 seat Assembly to survive a no-confidence motion.

He said Sir Robert still had a lot of clout with both his wife and son as MPs and widespread support in Niue.

BONN (SEPT 19) - A record number of refugees arriving in West Germany from around the world has revived the debate over the country's liberal asylum law.

The federal government in Bonn expects 180,000 foreigners to seek political asylum this year, a total of 60,000 more than 1989.

Reception centres are overfilled and in many cities hostility against foreigners is growing. Calls for legislation to restrict the refugee levels are becoming louder.

''The nation is helplessly confronted by the question: who may stay ...'' comments the glossy news magazine Stern.

The asylum law, anchored in the federal constitution, is considered unparalleled anywhere in the world.

A short sentence, ''the politically persecuted enjoy the right to asylum'', was enshrined in the federal Basic Law, or constitution in 1949. The West Germans thereby showed their appreciation for the refuge which many states gave to people fleeing from Hitler's Germany.

''The right to asylum is the statute of liberty of our constitution'', says Liberal member of parliament, Burkhard Hirsch, who rejects any limitation of it.

During the past four decades prosperous West Germany has become a magnet for refugees from all over the world. But while the number of those seeking asylum has mounted, progressively fewer have been recognised by courts as politically perscuted.

Since 1953 a million foreigners have applied for asylum, only 150,000 successfully. Now, only three out of every 100 refugees can expect to be gain such recognition.

LONDON (SEPT 19) - British Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major on Wednesday launched a four-point plan aimed at writing off as much as 18 billion dollars off the 27 billion debt among 19 of the world's poorest countries.

In a transcript issued here of his speech to the British Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Conference in Trinidad, Mr. Major proposed that the plan take effect under the auspices of the Paris Club, a group of Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development governments which oversee official debt repayments of poor countries.

Under the plan, the whole stock of eligible Paris Club debt would be rescheduled in one go rather than in one-year tranches, and debt relief given would be doubled to two-thirds.

Further, interest would be capitalised (added to the capital sum owed), with no payments required during the first five years, and repayment periods in such packages would be 25 years.

The 19 countries involved are Benin, the Central African Republic, Chad, Equatorial New Guinea, Guinea, Bissau, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Niger, Senegal, Tanzania, Togo, Uganda, Zaire and Zambia in sub-Saharan Africa, and two others -- Bolivia and Guyana.

Mr. Major said the proposals will be put to the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank meetings this coming weekend, and will require the agreement of all the creditor governments in the Paris Club.

The new terms would replace the Toronto Terms agreement on recovery of Less Developed Country debt, which was accepted at the IMF summit in Toronto in 1987, Mr. Major said.

"I am now convinced that we need to do more to bridge the long term financing gap faced by some of the very poorest debtors" Mr. Major said.

KHAFJI (SEPT. 19) - More than 12,000 refugees have escaped from Kuwait to Saudi Arabia in the past four days, Saudi authorities said Wednesday in Khafji, a crossing point on the Saudi-Kuwaiti border that was unexpectedly opened last Saturday.

Most of the refugees were women, children, elderly and sick people, the Qatar news agency reported.

It quoted refugees as accusing the Iraqi occupation forces of ''open terrorism'' by acting more and more brutally against civilians. They said soldiers were killing civilians who had pictures of the ousted Emir of Kuwait in their homes.

At the same time, Kuwaiti resistance groups were also acting more harshly against the occupying forces, reports said.

One refugee said civilians had invited six Iraqi officers to their home and shot them to death. In retaliation, Iraqi soldiers broke into the house and killed several guerrillas before the eyes of their families.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) - The United States will sell 520 Sidewinder air-to-air missiles to Britain and Israel for a total of 55 million dollars, a Pentagon spokesman said Wednesday.

Lieutenant Colonel Rick Oborn said Britain would install 220 of the close-range missiles on their F-4 Tornado combat planes currently deployed in the Gulf area, while Israel would purchase 300 missiles.

He did not say where the Israelis intended to deploy the missiles.

The spokesman would not comment on published reports that the United States had agreed to sell Israel a number of F-15 fighter jets and surface-to-air Patriot missile batteries.

MOSCOW (SEPT 19) - Soviet experts are working in Iraq in deteriorating conditions and in some cases restricted by members of the Iraqi military, Soviet news agency Tass reported Wednesday, quoting KGB chief Vladimir Kriuchkov.

Conditions had worsened recently, Mr. Kriuchkov said, adding, "We will hold Baghdad responsible for their lives and state of health".

Soviet foreign minister Eduard Shevardnadze spoke last week for the first time about difficulties facing some Soviet citizens in Iraq seeking to leaving the country.

He said they were having trouble obtaining exit visas but he did not see this as an indication that they were being held "hostage" as Westerners have been.

RIYADH (SEPT 19) - Saudi Arabia announced Wednesday it was restricting the entry and stay of certain foreigners on its territory and cancelling facilities to some foreign communities, the official Saudi Press Agency (SPA) reported.

SPA, citing an interior ministry communique, said the new measures were undertaken to ensure equal treatement for all foreign travellers and residents in Saudi Arabia.

But the order is aimed primarily at Yemenis, an informed source here said, adding that Saudi Arabia would first suspend of entry visas at border points where Yemenis obtained them in the past.

Analysts believe the new rules may be in response to Yemen's strong support for Iraq after the latter invaded Kuwait on August 2.

Yemenis must henceforth go to Saudi consulates in their country to obtain entry visas, the communique said.

The measure also imposes a system of sponsorship requiring that Saudi nationals vouch for foreigners wishing to reside in Saudi Arabia. The foreigners are being given a month, starting Wednesday, to follow the procedure.

Those already in the country will fall the law and have their residence permits revoked if they do not abide by the new rules, the ministry warned.

It further warned those who engage in business and investment activities without the benefit of a local sponsor.

To date, only Yemenis had been permitted to engage in commercial activities in Saudi Arabia without the need for Saudi sponsors.

About a million Yemenis live in Saudi Arabia.

BEIJING (SEPT 19) - Chinese purchases of durable goods since May increased 38.3 percent over the same period a year earlier, some of it spurred by the Asian Games here, the China Daily reported Wednesday.

Urban sales of color television sets and videotape recorders both increased 120 percent in the period, the official daily said.

Most of the sales were likely spurred by the 11th Asian Games in Beijing, with state television planning 280 hours of live coverage of the Games, which open here Saturday and close October 7.

The capital has made a special effort to satisfy consumer demand during the Games, increasing imports from the provinces by 40 percent in August to 426 million dollars.

WELLINGTON (SEPT 20) - The New Zealand government has reversed its previous hands-off role and is now part of a 2.2-billion-dollar (1.3 billion U.S.) effort to pay off creditors of collapsed DFC New Zealand merchant bank, press reports said here Thursday.

Finance minister David Caygill refused to confirm the report in the Dominion newspaper and claimed it was sourced to Leader of the Opposition Jim Bolger, who two weeks ago had been briefed privately by officials on the government's negotiating position.

Mr. Caygill said Mr. Bolger had breached the trust given him.

Statutory manager (receiver) Sandy Maier was currently overseas negotiating with DFC's creditors, he said, adding that it was thus "entirely inappropriate" to discuss the issue publicly.

The bank's mainly Japanese bank creditors believed, when it collapsed in October, that it had a government guarantee.

Although the government denies it guaranteed DFC and has still avoided guaranteeing the debts, the newspaper said its new "involvement is a way of saving face with some of ... the creditors."

Shortly after the DFC collapsed, a Japanese banking consortium scuttled a planned New Zealand government 600-million-dollar (370 million U.S.) debt issue in Tokyo.

The Dominion said the government had agreed to a complicated financial arrangement that would see the DFC's main creditors fully repaid after seven years. Smaller creditors had already been offered paybacks of 75 to 100 per cent.

Details of the settlement for main creditors were still being completed, but the newspaper said it was understood they would be offered a mixture of bonds under which DFC would promise to pay the lenders a fixed amount in future with some interest in the meantime.

Two types of bonds would be offered: the first would mature in five years with the amount of interest depending on how much cash DFC could raise through selling assets. The interest would be less than market rates.

The second of the bonds would offer a fixed interest rate - again less than market rates - over the next seven years.

San Sebastian, Spain (SEPT. 19) EFE - Supporters of the Basque terrorist group ETA set fire to buses and blocked roads in northern Spain over the past 24 hours to protest the death of an ETA gunman shot by police.

In the Basque city of San Sebastian, a bus was set on fire shortly after dawn Wednesday, tying up traffic for hours on a major highway. Another bus had been destroyed by protesters the night before in the city center.

Other disturbances were reported in the Basque port city of Bilbao, where a bus was also burned, and in Pamplona, where demonstrators setting rubbish containers ablaze battled with anti-riot police late Tuesday.

The rioting broke out Tuesday hours after a suspected ETA member was shot dead in Pamplona when he tried to escape police who approached his car to ask for identification.

Some reports said the dead ETA member pulled a gun on the police officers.

One of the gunman's accomplices was arrested and a third ETA suspect managed to escape. Police said the trio was setting up an ambush to murder an alleged neighborhood drug pusher.

ETA has killed more than 600 people in its 22-year-old campaign for the right to independence of northern Spain's Basque region.

Basque separatists have demanded that the neighboring province of Navarre, of which Pamplona is the capital, become part of an independent Basque nation.

Moscow (SEPT. 19) EFE - Gun battles broke out Wednesday between rival nationalist groups in the Soviet republic of Georgia's capital Tbilisi, Radio Moscow's Interfax news service reported.

Several people were injured in the clashes which occurred overnight along the city's main avenue, Interfax said.

The shootouts followed attacks by unknown assailants on the headquarters of the National Independence Party and the Democratic National Party.

The disturbances began late Tuesday during a demonstration outside the headquarters of the republic's government by a coalition of radical nationalist groups called the +Round Table+.

The demonstration was in protest to the kidnapping by suspected rival political parties of a nationalist leader, who was later released.

Meanwhile, the headquarters of the KGB secret police in Tbilisi Wednesday remained occupied by hundreds of unarmed nationalists who stormed the building Sunday to demand the resignation of the government and the closure of the regional KGB headquarters.

Nationalist unrest in the republic has increased since 19 people were killed in Tbilisi in April 1989 when troops broke up a nationalist demonstration.

In August this year, the parliament passed an electoral law paving the way for multi-party elections, following weeks of protests organized to demand open polling and the resignation of the Georgian leadership.

MADRID (SEPT 19) EFE - The government Wednesday renewed an order barring horses from being moved outside the southern Spanish region of Andalucia, following the fresh outbreak of a highly-contagious disease which has killed dozens of animals.

Spanish officials, concerned that the outbreak of African equine fever could jeopardize equestrian events at the 1992 Barcelona Olympic Games, have stressed that the cases are restricted to Andalucia and do not affect the northeastern region of Catalonia where the games are to be held.

The government order comes less than two weeks after authorities in Andalucia announced that a previous ban could be lifted because there had been no cases of the disease since October 1989.

Almost 50 horses have died in the Andalucian province of Malaga over the past few weeks and regional officials Wednesday confirmed that at least 10 of the deaths were due to the disease.

The fever, transmitted by mosquitoes and believed to originate in Africa, claimed the lives of more than 90 horses in 1988 and almost 1,000 in 1989.

Spanish officials believed they had eradicated the fever after an extensive vaccination programme.

BUENOS AIRES (SEPT 19) EFE - One million Argentine industrial workers have lost their jobs over the past year as a result of falling productivity and a crushing recession, according to a business report released Wednesday.

In the report, the president of the Union of Argentine Industry, Gilberto Montagna, said that a year ago the sector employed 2.3 million workers, but that the number has now fallen to 1.3 million.

Montagna, who supports President Carlos Menem's strict austerity measures of price hikes and layoffs at state enterprises aimed at slashing the public deficit and curbing runaway inflation, warned that industry was being threatened.

He said that factories producing export goods were suffering most as a result of a weakening dollar.

Montagna added the situation was made worse by the drop in domestic demand for manufactured goods, the government's tight monetary policies and by the central bank's decision to fix the foreign exchange rate.

He said all these factors have caused confusion among the country's economic sectors.

"This uncertainty has frozen all possibilities of getting loans and impedes the signing of export contracts or the creation of export operations," Montagna said, and added that it ultimately caused the loss of jobs in industry.

Madrid (SEPT. 19) EFE - Spanish Economy Minister Carlos Solchaga said Wednesday that Spain may agree to begin holding the peseta's exchange rate fluctuations within the European Community's 2.25-per-cent narrow band well before 1994.

The possible early incorporation of the peseta into the narrow band was announced by Solchaga in the Spanish parliament, where legislators questioned the minister on the proposal for European monetary union that he made in a recent EC finance ministers' meeting.

Madrid is currently maintaining the peseta within a six-per-cent band of fluctuation, under an agreement with the EC which calls for Spain to join the narrow band by 1994.

Solchaga said Spain could join the narrow band soon after the liberalization of capital movement, set for January 1, 1993 under EC accords.

Solchaga said his September 7 proposal calls for the 12 EC trading bloc members to narrow the range of exchange rate variation to one per cent over a five-year period beginning during the European monetary union's second phase.

He said the second phase should start on January 1, 1994, a year later than the date proposed by European Commission president Jacques Delors.

The postponement of the beginning of stage two, in which a common currency would be issued, would give the EC members the experience of a year under the Single Market, Solchaga said.

He said the second phase should wait until after all EC members had eliminated exchange controls, joined the European Monetary System's exchange rate mechanism, and guaranteed the central banks' autonomy.

Solchaga's proposal calls for stage two to include establishment of an embryonic European Central Bank, which would issue a new currency and help coordinate EC members' economic policies.

A leader of the Lithuanian parliament's nationalist Sajudis movement, Algimantas Chekoulis, said the tanks carrying armed soldiers wearing bullet-proof vests, also took up positions in front of the Vilnius city hall.

Chekoulis said Lithuanian government officials had assured him they did not intend to take down the monuments and were talking with the family of Red Army General Charniakhovski about tranferring his tomb and monument to the city's military cemetery.

MADRID (SEPT 19) EFE - Last month 7.1 percent fewer foreigners visited Spain than in August 1989, as the number of tourists fell by 703,189, the government tourism agency said Wednesday.

It was latest of several months of slumping tourism, owing to Spain's inflation and strong currency, as well as to the growing popularity of competing holiday destinations.

In the first eight months of 1990, the number of tourists has dropped by 3.8 percent compared to the same period last year.

Income from tourism, the biggest sector in the Spanish economy, amounted to some 979.2 billion pesetas (dlrs 9.285 billion) in the first seven months of 1990.

This represents a 7.6-per-cent decline in peseta income to the sector compared to the year-earlier period.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - THE TOKYO METROPOLITAN GOVERNMENT PLANS TO LIMIT TRUCK TRAFFIC ON TOKYO STREETS BEGINNING IN NOVEMBER IN A MOVE TO CUT HIGH LEVELS OF NITROGEN OXIDE POLLUTANTS WHICH PEAK DURING THE WINTER MONTHS, OFFICIALS SAID WEDNESDAY.

THE PLAN, TO LAST OVER A THREE-MONTH PERIOD, CALLS ON TRANSPORT COMPANIES TO CUT TRUCK USE ON WEDNESDAYS FROM NOVEMBER TO JANUARY, WHEN WEATHER CONDITIONS PUSH AIR POLLUTION LEVELS UP.

DIESEL-POWERED TRUCKS, THE NUMBERS OF WHICH HAVE INCREASED IN RECENT YEARS, ACCOUNT FOR MUCH OF THE CITY'S NITROGEN OXIDE EXHAUST POLLUTANTS, MAKING IT DIFFICULT TO MAINTAIN AIR QUALITY STANDARDS, OFFICIALS SAID.

OFFICIALS SAID THEY DECIDED TO LIMIT TRAFFIC ON WEDNESDAYS JUST BEFORE THE SURGE OF TRAFFIC OCCURRING TOWARD THE WEEKENDS WHEN NITROGEN OXIDE LEVELS REGULARLY EXCEED ENVIRONMENTAL STANDARDS.

WITH THIS MEASURE, THE METROPOLITAN GOVERNMENT HOPES TO CUT NITROGEN OXIDE EMISSION LEVELS BY CLOSE TO 30 PERCENT.

ONLY THREE OF 30 STATIONS SET UP TO MONITOR AUTOMOBILE EXHAUST EMISSIONS IN THE CITY RECORDED ACCEPTABLE NITROGEN DIOXIDE LEVELS, AND NEW AIR QUALITY STANDARDS SET THIS YEAR HAVE YET TO BE ACHIEVED, OFFICIALS SAID.

TOKYO IS ALSO STUDYING RESTRICTIONS ON EXPRESSWAY TRAFFIC.

BEIJING (SEPT. 19) KYODO - CHINESE PRESIDENT YANG SHANGKUN SAID HIS COUNTRY IS FOCUSING ON THE REVIVAL OF ITS ECONOMY AND CALLED FOR AN EXPANDED SCOPE OF COOPERATION WITH JAPAN IN A MEETING WEDNESDAY WITH A VISITING JAPANESE BUSINESS DELEGATION.

DELEGATION MEMBERS RESPONDED POSITIVELY TO YANG'S REQUEST, NOTING THAT CHINESE PREMIER LI PENG, DURING A TUESDAY SESSION, HAD SUGGESTED SPECIFIC PROJECTS, INCLUDING THE CONSTRUCTION OF A STEEL MILL.

THE 60-MEMBER DELEGATION, SPONSORED BY THE JAPAN-CHINA ASSOCIATION ON ECONOMY AND TRADE IS IN CHINA FOR A WEEKLONG VISIT AIMED AT REVIVING BUSINESS CONTACTS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES THAT WERE STRAINED FOLLOWING LAST YEAR'S BLOODY JUNE 4 GOVERNMENT CRACKDOWN ON PROTESTERS IN TIANANMEN SQUARE.

YANG ALSO THANKED JAPAN FOR REOPENING ITS 810 BILLION YEN LOAN PACKAGE, CALLING THE TIANANMEN INCIDENT ''PAST HISTORY'' AND PRAISING THE SHIFT IN JAPANESE POLICIES.

JAPAN HAD HALTED THE 1990-1995 PACKAGE AFTER THE CRACKDOWN, FOLLOWING THE LEAD OF WESTERN COUNTRIES. JAPAN REVERSED THAT DECISION AT THE HOUSTON SUMMIT OF INDUSTRIALIZED COUNTRIES IN JULY.

DELEGATION MEMBERS SUGGESTED THAT CHINESE VICE PREMIER TIAN JIYUN AND COMMERCE MINISTER HU PING VISIT JAPAN IN THE NEAR FUTURE. YANG SAID THE GOVERNMENT WILL CONSIDER THE INVITATION.

OLONGAPO, PHILIPPINES (SEPT. 19) KYODO - FILIPINO WORKERS AT SIX U.S. MILITARY FACILITIES PLAN TO GO ON STRIKE BY OCTOBER 1 TO PRESS FOR MORE PAY, A LABOR LEADER SAID WEDNESDAY.

ROBERTO FLORES, PRESIDENT OF THE FEDERATION OF FILIPINO CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES ASSOCIATIONS, WHICH HAS 22,000 MEMBERS AT THE SIX FACILITIES, SAID FEDERATION OFFICIALS REACHED THE DECISION LATE TUESDAY NIGHT.

HE SAID THE 3 PERCENT PAY INCREASE PLANNED BY U.S. AUTHORITIES UNDER AMERICAN LAW VIOLATES A LABOR AGREEMENT.

THE WORKERS HAVE NOT AGREED ON A DEFINITE STRIKE DATE BUT WILL WALK OUT BEFORE OCTOBER 1, WHEN THE ANNUAL PAY INCREASE IS SET TO TAKE EFFECT, FLORES SAID.

HE SAID THE PAY RAISE VIOLATES BOTH THE BASES LABOR AGREEMENT AND A COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENT, WHICH STIPULATE THAT SALARY INCREASES SHALL BE BASED ON THE AVERAGE OF PAY SCALES AT THE COUNTRY'S TOP 32 FIRMS.

FLORES SAID THE LABOR PROBLEM IS NOT LINKED TO THE TALKS WHICH OPENED TUESDAY ON EXTENDING THE U.S. LEASE ON BASES IN THE PHILIPPINES.

ABOUT 20,000 FILIPINOS WORK FULL-TIME AT CLARK AIR BASE, SUBIC BAY NAVAL BASE, AND FOUR AUXILLIARY FACILITIES WHILE 60,000 PART-TIMERS WORK UNDER A CONTRACTUAL AGREEMENT.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - MITSUBISHI METAL CORP. SAID WEDNESDAY THAT IT HAD SIGNED A CONTRACT TO BUY COPPER ORE FROM TOLEDO MINE OF CEBU ISLAND, THE PHILIPPINES, OVER 15 YEARS BEGINNING THIS YEAR.

THE CONTRACT WAS SIGNED WITH ATLAS CONSOLIDATED MINING AND DEVELOPMENT CORP., OF THE PHILIPPINES, THE OWNER OF THE LARGEST MINE IN THE SOUTHEAST ASIA, MITSUBISHI OFFICIALS SAID.

UNDER THE AGREEMENT, MITSUBISHI PLANS TO INVEST 30 MILLION DOLLARS (ABOUT 4.2 BILLION YEN) WITH ATLAS IN RETURN FOR 130,000 TONS A YEAR OF THE MINE'S COPPER ORE FOR THE NEXT 15 YEARS. THE MINE'S OUTPUT LAST YEAR WAS ABOUT 280,000 TONS.

MITSUBISHI OFFICIALS SAID THIS WILL SECURE A LONG-TIME SUPPLIER OF ABOUT 20 PERCENT OF THE COPPER ORE THE COMPANY NEEDS EACH YEAR.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - THE AUSTRALIAN GOVERNMENT AND THE JAPAN SOCIALIST PARTY (JSP) AGREED ON WEDNESDAY TO MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO BAN THE EXPORT OF MILITARY WEAPONS, JSP OFFICIALS SAID.

AUSTRALIAN PRIME MINISTER BOB HAWKE AND CHAIRWOMAN OF JAPAN'S LARGEST OPPOSITION PARTY, TAKAKO DOI, MADE THE AGREEMENT WHEN THEY MET IN TOKYO TO DISCUSS THE GULF CRISIS AND OTHER INTERNATIONAL ISSUES.

DOI SAID, ''ONE OF REASONS WHY THE GULF CRISIS BROKE OUT CAN BE ATTRIBUTED TO THE EXPORT OF MILITARY EQUIPMENT BY ARMS EXPORTING COUNTRIES TO IRAQ,'' ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIALS.

THE SOVIET UNION, FRANCE, AND OTHER ADVANCED COUNTRIES ARE REPORTED TO HAVE MADE MILITARY SHIPMENTS TO IRAQ BEFORE BAGHDAD INVADED KUWAIT ON AUGUST 2.

DOI AND HAWKE ALSO AGREED TO COOPERATE IN BOOSTING PEACE AND SECURITY IN THE ASIA-PACIFIC REGION.

ASKED BY HAWKE ABOUT THE JSP'S VIEW OF U.N. PEACEKEEPING OBSERVATION TEAMS, DOI HAD THE GULF CRISIS IN MIND, AND SAID THE JSP OPPOSES SENDING JAPAN'S SELF-DEFENSE FORCES PERSONNEL TO ANY CONFLICT AREA.

SHE WAS QUOTED AS SAYING THE JAPANESE CONSTITUTION DOES NOT ALLOW JAPAN TO SEND MILITARY FORCES TO AREAS OF CONFLICT.

DOI SAID THE JAPANESE PEOPLE OBTAINED THE CONSTITUTION AT THE EXPENSE OF THE LIVES OF 20 MILLION ASIAN PEOPLE AND 3 MILLION JAPANESE DURING WORLD WAR II WHEN JAPAN INVADED ASIAN COUNTRIES.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - REPRESENTATIVES OF THE ASSOCIATION OF SOUTHEAST ASIAN NATIONS (ASEAN) ON WEDNESDAY CALLED ON JAPAN TO OPEN ITS MARKETS WIDER TO ASEAN PROCESSED AND MANUFACTURED GOODS AND BOOST INVESTMENT IN THE ASEAN REGION, FOREIGN MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID.

THE CALLS WERE MADE IN THE OPENING SESSION OF THE 12TH ASEAN- JAPAN FORUM, WHICH IS BEING HELD AT THE FOREIGN MINISTRY THROUGH THURSDAY.

SOLITA AGUIRRE, ACTING HEAD OF ASEAN AFFAIRS IN THE PHILIPPINE FOREIGN AFFAIRS DEPARTMENT, SAID PRODUCTS AND SERVICES EXCHANGES BETWEEN ASEAN AND JAPAN "SUFFER LOPSIDEDLY FROM INHERENTLY DISADVANTAGEOUS TERMS OF TRADE."

SHE CHARGED THAT JAPANESE PURCHASING PATTERNS TEND TO PERPETUATE THE CENTURIES-OLD ROLE OF ASEAN COUNTRIES AS EXPORTERS OF RAW MATERIALS AND PRIMARY PRODUCTS.

"ASEAN SEEKS GREATER ACCESS TO THE JAPANESE MARKET FOR COMMODITIES WHICH WILL HELP ITS MEMBER COUNTRIES ... SHIFT FROM PRIMARY PRODUCT OR RAW MATERIAL PRODUCTION TO THE PRODUCTION OF MANUFACTURED AND SEMIMANUFACTURED GOODS," AGUIRRE SAID.

AGUIRRE WAS SPEAKING ON BEHALF OF ASEAN IN THE PHILIPPINES' CURRENT POSITION AS "COUNTRY COORDINATOR" FOR ASEAN-JAPAN DIALOGUE.

ASEAN ALSO INCLUDES INDONESIA, THAILAND, MALAYSIA, SINGAPORE, AND BRUNEI.

AGUIRRE NOTED THAT WHILE ASEAN IMPORTS FROM JAPAN IN 1989 GREW BY 65 PERCENT, ASEAN EXPORTS TO JAPAN IN THE SAME PERIOD ROSE BY ONLY 35 PERCENT AND CONSISTED MOSTLY OF PETROLEUM PRODUCTS AND RAW MATERIALS.

"WE SHOULD ASK, OR AT LEAST KEEP IN THE BACK OF OUR MINDS, IF JAPAN'S INTEREST IN ASEAN WILL ALWAYS BE IN ASEAN'S OIL-PRODUCTION CAPABILITY AND RAW MATERIALS EXPORTS," SHE SAID. ;;MORE NNNN R130 R CA15 R :ASEAN-JAPAN 2 TOKYO:

OFFICIALS SAID THE JAPANESE SIDE COUNTERED THAT JAPANESE IMPORTS OF ASEAN MANUFACTURED GOODS ARE "EXPANDING GREATLY."

ACCOUNTING FOR ONLY 15.8 PERCENT OF JAPAN'S TOTAL IMPORTS FROM ASEAN IN 1987, THE RATIO OF MANUFACTURED GOODS ROSE TO 20.1 PERCENT IN 1988 AND 25.8 PERCENT IN 1989, THEY SAID.

OFFICIALS SAID ASEAN CALLED FOR A LARGER SHARE OF INVESTMENT FROM JAPAN, NOTING THAT THE CURRENT SHARE APPEARS LACKING WHEN COMPARED WITH THE SHARES FROM NORTH AMERICA AND WESTERN EUROPE.

IN RESPONSE, THEY SAID, JAPAN CALLED ON ASEAN COUNTRIES TO EXERT MORE EFFORTS IN CREATING AN ENVIRONMENT CONDUCIVE TO INCREASED JAPANESE INVESTMENT.

OFFICIALS SAID SAKUTARO TANINO, DIRECTOR GENERAL OF THE FOREIGN MINISTRY'S ASIAN AFFAIRS BUREAU, ACKNOWLEDGED THAT ECONOMIC COOPERATION PROJECTS BETWEEN JAPAN AND ASEAN HAVE BEEN "A SOURCE OF DISSATISFACTION" FOR BOTH SIDES.

TANINO SAID THAT WHILE THE ASEAN SIDE HAS COMPLAINED OF MANY PROPOSED PROJECTS BEING LEFT UNADDRESSED, JAPAN HAS BEEN UNABLE TO RESPOND DUE TO A LACK OF DATA WHICH HE SAID MAKES FURTHER ASSESSMENT OF THE PROJECTS IMPOSSIBLE.

TANINO PROPOSED THAT EACH SIDE WORK TO RECTIFY THE PROBLEM BY ENHANCING THEIR UNDERSTANDING OF THE OTHER SIDE'S POLICIES AND SYSTEMS.

OFFICIALS SAID THE ASEAN SIDE CALLED SPECIFICALLY FOR A BOOST IN JAPANESE DIRECT FUNDING FOR VARIOUS ASEAN HUMAN RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS, CULTURAL PROJECTS, AND FOR THE ASEAN SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND SCIENCE FUND.

TANINO PLEDGED THAT JAPAN WILL INITIATE AND STEP UP COOPERATION IN VARIOUS FIELDS, INCLUDING RELATIVELY NEW ONES SUCH AS ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION, OFFICIALS SAID.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - THE TRANSPORT MINISTRY UNVEILED WEDNESDAY DETAILS OF THE FIRST DIRECT FLIGHT BETWEEN JAPAN AND NORTH KOREA THAT WILL CARRY A HIGH-POWERED JOINT JAPANESE PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION HEADED BY FORMER DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER SHIN KANEMARU AND AN OPPOSITION LEADER.

THE CHARTERED JAPAN AIRLINES DC 10, THE FIRST NOT TO GO VIA A THIRD COUNTRY, WILL FLY OVER NIIGATA CITY AND THE SEA OF JAPAN TO PYONGYANG, NORTH KOREA, THE MINISTRY SAID.

THE 1,630-KILOMETER FLIGHT WILL TAKE ABOUT TWO HOURS, MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID.

THE USUAL CIRCUITOUS ROUTE VIA BEIJING IS THE RESULT OF THE TWO NATIONS HAVING NO FORMAL DIPLOMATIC TIES.

WHILE KANEMARU IS LEADING A MISSION COMPOSED OF MEMBERS OF JAPAN'S RULING LIBERAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY, MAKOTO TANABE, VICE CHAIRMAN OF THE NO. 1 OPPOSITION JAPAN SOCIALIST PARTY, WILL SIMULTANEOUSLY LEAD A SEPARATE DELEGATION FROM HIS PARTY.

DURING THEIR FIVE-DAY STAY, THE LAWMAKERS ARE TO CONFER WITH NORTH KOREAN LEADERS TO HELP NORMALIZE BILATERAL RELATIONS.

ACCORDING TO THE MINISTRY'S ANNOUNCEMENT, THE AIRCRAFT WILL PASS THROUGH A POINT CALLED ''KADBO'' ABOVE THE SEA OF JAPAN AND THEN HEAD DUE WEST INTO THE TERRITORIAL SKIES OF NORTH KOREA.

KADBO IS A POINT ABOVE THE SEA OF JAPAN WHERE ALL AIRPLANES MUST REPORT THEIR ROUTE TO A CONTROL TOWER.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - THE HEAD OF DAIMLER-BENZ AG SAID WEDNESDAY THE WEST GERMAN CONGLOMERATE WILL SIGN A LICENSE CONTRACT WITH THE SOVIET UNION AS SOON AS NOVEMBER TO PRODUCE BUSES FOR PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

CHAIRMAN EDZARD REUTER TOLD A TOKYO PRESS CONFERENCE THAT THE PROJECT CALLS FOR PRODUCTION OF 2,000-3,000 BUSES A YEAR USING EXISTING SOVIET FACILITIES. AGREEMENT HAS BEEN REACHED IN PRINCIPLE, HE SAID.

DAIMLER-BENZ HAS APPROACHED MITSUBISHI CORP. FOR POSSIBLE COOPERATION IN A PLAN TO BUILD A CAR PLANT IN THE SOVIET UNION, INDUSTRY SOURCES SAID, BUT THE JAPANESE TRADING GIANT HAS SHOWN RESERVATIONS ABOUT THE PLAN DUE TO ANXIETY OVER SOVIET ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

REUTER SAID HE WOULD LIKE MITSUBISHI TO COMMIT ITSELF TO THE PLAN. HE WAS IN TOKYO FOR TALKS WITH LEADERS OF THE MITSUBISHI GROUP, WITH WHICH DAIMLER-BENZ HAS AGREED TO COOPERATE IN VARIOUS FIELDS, INCLUDING AEROSPACE.

DAIMLER-BENZ HAD ITS SHARES LISTED ON THE TOKYO STOCK EXCHANGE ON WEDNESDAY, AHEAD OF WIDE-RANGING TALKS ON COOPERATIVE BUSINESS ARRANGEMENTS WITH FOUR COMPANIES IN THE MITSUBISHI GROUP.

REUTER SAID THE LISTING OF THE STUTTGART-BASED COMPANY'S STOCK WILL HELP PROVIDE MORE ACCESS FOR ITS PRODUCTS IN JAPAN, AND ENABLE IT TO RAISE YEN FUNDS TO FINANCE THE INDUSTRIAL GIANT'S EXPANSION INTO ASIA.

HE ADDED THE DAIMLER-BENZ GROUP WANTS TO ENTER INTO INTERNATIONAL COOPERATIVE ARRANGEMENTS WITH OTHER MAJOR COMPANIES TO REMAIN COMPETITIVE WORLDWIDE, AND DEVELOP NEW TECHNOLOGIES AND PRODUCTS THAT REQUIRE UNLIMITED CAPITAL OUTLAYS, RISK, AND EMPLOYMENT OF SCIENTISTS AND ENGINEERS.

IN MARCH, DAIMLER-BENZ ANNOUNCED IT HAD BEGUN TALKS WITH THE MITSUBISHI GROUP ON CARS, TRUCKS, SEMICONDUCTORS, AEROSPACE, AND OTHER SERVICES, FOLLOWING THE RECENT TREND OF LINKUPS BETWEEN JAPANESE, EUROPEAN, AND U.S. MULTINATIONAL CORPORATIONS.

THE TALKS IN TOKYO ARE EXPECTED TO FOCUS ON DAIMLER-BENZ'S BUS AND CAR PROJECTS IN THE SOVIET UNION, AND MERCEDES-BENZ AG'S 1 BILLION MARK INVESTMENT TO MODERNIZE ASSEMBLY FACILITIES FOR MEDIUM-SIZED HEAVY TRUCKS WITH A PREVIOUSLY STATE-OWNED TRUCK COLLECTIVE IN EAST GERMANY.

MERCEDES-BENZ OFFICIALS HAVE ALREADY ASKED MITSUBISHI REPRESENTATIVES TO SUPPLY EQUIPMENT IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE NEW PLANT IN GORKI, ACCORDING TO INDUSTRY SOURCES.

REUTER SAID THE TWO DIVERSIFIED GROUPS ARE TALKING ABOUT CROSS-SHARING TECHNOLOGY BETWEEN INDIVIDUAL COMPANIES AND NOT THE GROUP, AFTER COMPLETING AGREEMENTS IN FIELDS WHERE IT IS FEASIBLE.

THE MITSUBISHI GROUP COMPANIES INVOLVED IN THE TALKS WITH DAIMLER-BENZ ARE MITSUBISHI CORP., MITSUBISHI HEAVY INDUSTRIES LTD., MITSUBISHI ELECTRIC CORP., AND MITSUBISHI MOTORS CORP.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - LAND PRICES CONTINUED TO SOAR ACROSS THE NATION DURING THE YEAR ENDED IN JUNE AGAINST THE BACKDROP OF AN INVESTMENT BOOM DRIVEN BY A GLUT OF MONEY, THE NATIONAL LAND AGENCY SAID WEDNESDAY.

LAND PRICES IN OSAKA AND SURROUNDING PREFECTURES SHOWED AN ESPECIALLY STRONG INCREASE FOR THE THIRD CONSECUTIVE YEAR. RESIDENTIAL LAND IN THE OSAKA AREA CLIMBED AN AVERAGE 48.2 PERCENT WHILE COMMERCIAL LAND IN THE REGION WENT UP 39.7 PERCENT, ACCORDING TO A REPORT ISSUED BY THE AGENCY.

THE AVERAGE PRICE OF A SQUARE METER OF RESIDENTIAL LAND IN THE OSAKA AREA WAS 534,400 YEN, 20,200 YEN MORE THAN IN THE TOKYO METROPOLITAN AREA, THE REPORT SAID.

THE REPORT WAS BASED ON SURVEYS CONDUCTED JULY 1 BY PREFECTURAL GOVERNMENTS.

LAND PRICES IN RESIDENTIAL AREAS ROSE AN AVERAGE 13.2 PERCENT NATIONWIDE WHILE COMMERCIAL LAND PRICES CLIMBED AN AVERAGE 13.4 PERCENT.

THIS WAS THE FIRST DOUBLE-DIGIT INCREASE RECORDED IN AVERAGE NATIONWIDE

RESIDENTIAL LAND PRICES SINCE THE SURVEY WAS STARTED IN 1975, AN AGENCY OFFICIAL SAID.

HOUSING LAND PRICES IN THE TOKYO AREA INCREASED 11 PERCENT OVER THE YEAR.

RESIDENTIAL LAND PRICES IN KYOTO PREFECTURE SURGED 48.9 PERCENT, FOLLOWED BY 44.3 PERCENT IN OSAKA PREFECTURE AND 41.7 PERCENT IN SHIGA PREFECTURE.

THE AVERAGE PRICE OF A SQUARE METER OF RESIDENTIAL LAND IN TOKYO WAS 858,600 YEN, COMPARED WITH 571,400 YEN IN OSAKA.

THE MOST EXPENSIVE RESIDENTIAL LAND PRICE WAS IN SANBANCHO, IN TOKYO'S CHIYODA WARD, AT 12.5 MILLION YEN PER SQUARE METER. THE MOST EXPENSIVE COMMERCIAL LAND WAS ALSO IN TOKYO, UNDER THE MEIDI-YA BUILDING IN GINZA, AT 38 MILLION YEN PER SQUARE METER.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - JAPAN PRODUCED 6.09 MILLION KILOLITERS OF BEER IN 1989, UP 5.1 PERCENT FROM A YEAR EARLIER, OVERTAKING BRITAIN TO BECOME THE FOURTH-LARGEST BEER PRODUCER IN THE WORLD, A JAPANESE BREWER SAID WEDNESDAY.

JAPAN'S PER-CAPITA BEER CONSUMPTION, HOWEVER, REMAINED RELATIVELY LOW AT NO. 26. THE AVERAGE JAPANESE DOWNED 47.2 LITERS, ABOUT ONE-THIRD THAT CONSUMED BY THE AVERAGE RESIDENT OF WORLD LEADER WEST GERMANY.

ACCORDING TO KIRIN BREWERY CO., WORLD PRODUCTION OF THE YELLOW BREW IN 1989 WAS 117.4 MILLION KILOLITERS, UP 2 PERCENT FROM THE PREVIOUS YEAR.

ALTHOUGH GROWTH SLOWED FROM THE 3 PERCENT LEVEL RECORDED IN 1985-88, WORLD PRODUCTION WAS ENOUGH TO FILL THE TOKYO DOME 89.3 TIMES, THE REPORT SAID.

THE UNITED STATES WAS BY FAR THE WORLD'S TOP BEER PRODUCER, BREWING 23.36 MILLION KILOLITERS, UP 0.6 PERCENT. WEST GERMANY CAME IN SECOND WITH 9.3 MILLION KILOLITERS, ALMOST UNCHANGED FROM THE YEAR EARLIER.

CHINA WAS IN THIRD PLACE DESPITE A 3 PERCENT DECLINE IN PRODUCTION TO 6.24 MILLION KILOLITERS.

IN CONTRAST TO THE LOW GROWTH IN OUTPUT RECORDED BY THESE TOP-RANKING COUNTRIES, LOWER-RANKING NATIONS STAGED STRONG GROWTH.

BRAZIL SCORED A 15 PERCENT RISE, TAKING SEVENTH PLACE, WHILE MEXICO GREW 12 PERCENT FOR EIGHTH PLACE. THE PHILIPPINES MOVED UP TO 19TH FROM 21ST PLACE ON THE STRENGTH OF A 12 PERCENT GROWTH.

SOUTH KOREA MOVED UP TO 22ND FROM 25TH, WITH A 16 PERCENT GROWTH IN OUTPUT, THE REPORT SAID.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - PRIME MINISTER TOSHIKI KAIFU PLANS TO EXTEND 100 MILLION DOLLARS IN COMMODITY LOANS TO JORDAN FOR THE PURCHASE OF OIL WHEN HE VISITS THE KINGDOM IN EARLY OCTOBER AS PART OF A FIVE-NATION MIDDLE EASTERN TOUR, GOVERNMENT SOURCES SAID WEDNESDAY.

KAIFU ALSO INTENDS TO OFFER 22 MILLION DOLLARS TO JORDAN TO ASSIST REFUGEES FLEEING FROM IRAQ AND IRAQI-OCCUPIED KUWAIT, ACCORDING TO THE SOURCES.

KAIFU IS SCHEDULED TO VISIT EGYPT, JORDAN, TURKEY, SAUDI ARABIA, AND OMAN FROM OCTOBER 1-9 AFTER ATTENDING A UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE ON CHILDREN IN NEW YORK ON SEPTEMBER 29-30.

IN TALKS WITH JORDANIAN LEADERS, INCLUDING KING HUSSEIN, KAIFU WILL CALL ON THEM TO STRICTLY ABIDE BY THE UNITED NATIONS-SANCTIONED TRADE EMBARGO AGAINST IRAQ AND TO TAKE CONCERTED ACTIONS WITH WESTERN COUNTRIES TO RESOLVE THE GULF CRISIS, THE SOURCES SAID.

JORDAN HAS CONDEMNED IRAQ'S INVASION OF KUWAIT AND PLEDGED TO OBSERVE THE U.N. RESOLUTIONS AIMED AT PUNISHING IRAQ FOR ITS MILITARY ANNEXATION OF THE OIL-RICH NEIGHBORING COUNTRY.

JORDAN, HOWEVER, REMAINS CRITICAL OF THE U.S.-LED MULTINATIONAL TROOPS

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - THE INSTITUTE OF PHYSICAL AND CHEMICAL RESEARCH OF JAPAN AND THE RUTHERFORD APPLETON LABORATORY OF BRITAIN WILL LAUNCH A JOINT RESEARCH PROJECT ON NUCLEAR FUSION BY USING AN ESOTERIC ELEMENTARY PARTICLE, OFFICIALS OF THE NATIONAL JAPANESE RESEARCH LAB SAID.

THE 1.7 BILLION YEN PROJECT IS AIMED AT EXPLORING THE POSSIBILITY THAT NUCLEAR FUSION MAY OCCUR AT RELATIVELY LOW TEMPERATURES WHEN AN ELEMENTARY PARTICLE CALLED A MUON COLLIDES WITH THE ELEMENTS DUETERIUM OR TRITIUM, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

THE GOVERNMENT HAS ALREADY EARMARKED 600 MILLION YEN OUT OF THE 1.7 BILLION YEN FOR SUCH RESEARCH IN THE FISCAL 1990 BUDGET, THEY SAID.

THE BRITISH INSTITUTE SUGGESTED JOINT RESEARCH WITH THE JAPANESE LAB, WHICH HAS BEEN CONDUCTING RESEARCH ON NUCLEAR FUSION USING MUONS.

THE CONVENTIONAL METHOD TO ACHIEVE NUCLEAR FUSION IN HYDROGEN BOMBS, FOR EXAMPLE, REQUIRES HEATING DEUTRIUM AND TRITIUM TO EXTREMELY HIGH TEMPERATURES ABOVE 100 MILLION DEGREES CELSIUS.

BUT SCIENTISTS BELIEVE THEY CAN REALIZE NUCLEAR FUSION AT TEMPERATURES OF A COMPARATIVELY LOW SEVERAL HUNDRED DEGREES, OR EVEN AT VERY LOW TEMPERATURES LIKE 200 BELOW ZERO, IF THEY CAN SUCCESFULLY UTILIZE MUONS.

MUON IS ONE OF THE ELEMENTARY PARTICLES BELONGING TO A CLASS OF PARTICLES CALLED LEPTONS, WHICH CONSISTS OF THE ELECTRON, TAU PARTICLE, AND THREE TYPES OF NEUTRINO AS WELL AS MUON.

THE FACILITIES TO CREATE MUONS WILL BE BUILT ADJACENT TO RUTHERFORD'S PARTICLE ACCELERATOR (ATOM SMASHER), WHICH IS THE MOST POWERFUL IN THE WORLD. ;;MORE

NNNN R158 R CA15 R :MUON 2 TOKYO:

WHEN PROTONS ACCELERATED TO CLOSE TO THE SPEED OF LIGHT CLASH WITH CARBON ATOMS, A LARGE NUMBER OF CHARGED PI MESONS ARE CREATED.

PI MESONS, ALSO KNOWN AS PIONS, DECAY INTO MUONS AND NEUTRINOS WITHIN ONE-100 MILLIONTH OF A SECOND.

THE FACILITY TO BE BUILT IN THE RUTHERFORD LAB HAS A 6-METER-LONG SUPERCONDUCTING MAGNET TUNNEL IN WHICH THE PROCESS OF DECAY OCCURS.

THE MUONS THUS CREATED ARE RENDERED INTO HIGH-INTENSITY PULSES BY A PULSE KICKER ATTACHED TO THE EXITS OF THE TUNNEL.

THE PULSE KICKER IS DESIGNED TO MAKE MUONS FLOW INTO TWO SEPARATE HIGH-INTENSITY PULSES. A PULSE IN PHYSICS IS A BRIEF VARIATION IN A REGULAR WAVEFORM.

THE NEW FACILITY AT THE RUTHERFORD LAB IS EXPECTED TO CREATE PULSES OF MUONS WHICH INCLUDE 600,000 MUONS IN ONE CYCLE, 20 TIMES AS DENSE AS IN EXISTING MACHINES.

WHEN THE PULSES OF MUONS COLLIDE WITH DEUTRIUM OR TRITIUM, THE MUONS START CIRCLING AROUND THE ELEMENT'S NUCLEI, TAKING THE PLACE OF ELECTRONS.

SINCE MUONS ARE 200 TIMES AS MASSIVE AS ELECTRONS, THE CIRCLING MUONS CAUSE THE NUCLEI TO MOVE CLOSER TO EACH OTHER THROUGH LARGER GRAVITATIONAL FORCES, THEREBY CAUSING NUCLEAR FUSION.

USING EXISTING METHODS TO DATE, ONE MUON HAS BEEN ABLE TO CAUSE 150 NUCLEAR FUSION REACTIONS, CONSIDERED A SMALL AMOUNT. BUT THE NEW RUTHERFORD FACILITY COULD CREATE AT LEAST 300 REACTIONS, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

ALTHOUGH THE NUMBER STILL FALLS SHORT OF THE 500 REQUIRED TO USE NUCLEAR FUSION AS AN ENERGY SOURCE, THE JOINT RESEARH, IF SUCCESSFUL, IS EXPECTED TO BE AN IMPORTANT STEP TOWARD ACTUAL USE OF NUCLEAR FUSION FOR ENERGY, THEY SAID.

THE DESIGN OF THE FACILITY IS ALMOST COMPLETED AND THE MACHINE IS SCHEDULED TO START OPERATING AND CREATING MUONS IN LARGE QUANTITIES IN 1993, THEY SAID.

THE NUCLEAR FUSION RESEARCH WILL GO INTO FULL SWING IN 1995, THEY SAID. THE NEW FACILITY WILL ALSO BE USED FOR STUDYING THE CHEMICAL OR PHYSICAL MAKEUP OF MATERIALS BY EXPOSING THEM TO MUONS, WHICH DO NOT BREAK UP THE MATERIALS IN ORDER TO DETERMINE THEIR STRUCTURE.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) KYODO - CITING SLACK BROKERAGE COMMISSION EARNINGS DUE TO THE SHAKY STOCK MARKET SINCE EARLY THIS YEAR, 10 MEDIUM-SIZE BROKERAGE HOUSES SAID WEDNESDAY THEY HAVE REVISED DOWNWARD THEIR HALF-YEAR PROFIT FORECASTS.

THE FORECASTS SHOW THE BROKERAGES' UNCONSOLIDATED PRETAX PROFITS PLUNGING DRAMATICALLY FOR THE FISCAL 1990 FIRST HALF, ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, UNDER THE WEIGHT OF LOW TRADING VOLUME AND THE RESULTING DETERIORATION IN BROKERAGE PERFORMANCE.

THE BROKERAGE HOUSES ALSO BLAMED THE DOWNWARD REVISIONS ON THE INCREASED BURDEN OF CAPITAL SPENDING TO UPDATE THEIR COMPUTER SYSTEMS AS WELL AS ON WEAK UNDERWRITING COMMISSION INCOME.

THE UNDERWRITING BUSINESS WAS AT A STANDSTILL BETWEEN MARCH AND JUNE AS BROKERAGE HOUSES SUSPENDED UNDERWRITING NEW EQUITIES TO PROTECT THE THEN FLATTENING STOCK MARKET.

The INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND is scheduled to release its biannual economic report late this afternoon. ... NCR CORP. says it will offer an entire product line of computers based on INTEL microprocessors and standardized software.

FROM THE BULLS:

"Our reading of sentiment is bullish," says MICHAEL BURKE at "Investors Intelligence" where 56% of the advisory services he tracks are now bearish. Burke is also seeing buy signals from his NYSE money flow indicator, and says heavy insider buying is another very bullish sign. Although his portfolio is now only 17% invested, Burke says, "We hope to become much more fully invested over the next few months." (CNBC "World Business", 9/19)

FROM THE BEARS:

"At this point our time projections indicate that from September 13 all the way up to October 1, we should generally be in a downtrend," says HANS KASHYAP editor of the "Marketpulse Fax Advisory." "Now, within this downtrend, this particular week we expect the market to be extremely volatile. It is still an extremely nervous market, so we are expecting this type of roller coaster action, but into Friday we expect generally flat to higher prices." He expects next week to be a down week with "maybe a blip up somewhere near the middle." Mr. Kashyap finds good support at 2532. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/18)

STOCK MARKET:

"I don't think we've seen the lows on the market," says MARY FARRELL, first vice president at PAINEWEBBER. "I think we'll see some further additional weakness, unfortunately, as we wait for resolution to either the Mideast crisis or the economic uncertainty." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/18)

"There's no question that [a rumor the Fed moved to ease credit] was the catalyst" for yesterday's market showing, says GREG DRAHUSCHAK of BUTCHER & SINGER. "Right now, the market will take anything as a good excuse to buy."

("USA Today", 9/19)

"Short-term, the stock market is positioned to improve, owing to the oversold condition and bearish sentiment," says A.C. MOORE, director of research at ARGUS RESEARCH CORP. "Long-term, however, the market has not reached a meaningful buy point. I would like to see more bearishness and the Mideast crisis resolved." Mr. Moore is recommending a defensive posture, with equity accounts 60% in stocks and 40% in cash. For balanced accounts, he favors 40% stocks, 30% bonds and 30% cash. He does not recommend any aggressive buying of stocks at this time. ("Investor's Daily", 9/19)

"I think you have to take a look at the possibility there will be some good news that comes along," says FRANK GRETZ, technical analyst at SHIELDS & CO. "Now I don't know what that good news may be -- some kind of budget accord, good news out of the Mideast, or whatever it may be -- but when sentiment is so one-sided, everyone is looking for the negative, and I think a surprise to the plus side could really send prices dramatically higher," (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/18)

"The market seemed to latch onto the Fed stories," says ALFRED GOLDMAN, director of technical research at A.G. EDWARDS & SONS in St. Louis, describing yesterday's market action. As treasury securities recovered early losses, the rebound "took the stock market up with it." (WSJ, 9/19)

STOCK TIPS:

"We are still bottom fishing," says MARY FARRELL of PAINEWEBBER. "I would consider looking at very good quality companies with a view toward scaling in as we get some of these more attractive prices." She mentions COCA-COLA, PEPSICO and PHILIP MORRIS as the kind stocks that are peaking her interest, along with drug companies with good overseas businesses. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/18)

EDISON BROTHERS STORES INC. appears to be thriving amidst the general slump in retailing. "Definitely, things have slowed for them as for everyone else," says ROBERT BUCHANAN, senior retail analyst at ALEX. BROWN & SONS in Baltimore. "But I'm optimistic for Edison Brothers for the third and fourth quarters. I estimate third-quarter earnings at 80 cents a share, against 78 cents a share a year before." Mr. Buchanan says the current price "seems inexpensive for the stock of a retailer with a projected long-term earnings growth of 20 percent." He adds, "Edison's balance sheet is also strong, with long-term debt equal to just 13 percent of total long-term capitalization. Recent weakness in Edison's business appears tied to overall lethargy in the consumer-spending environment. Despite this near-term weakness, over the next several months I continue to think that in large measure Edison will fare well relative to other retailers." (NYT, 9/19)

COORS purchase of a brewery has boosted capacity and earnings are expected to be up 60% this year, says ANDREW ADDISON of the "Addison Report." The stock has shown new highs in relative strength and has two-to-one upside volume. Addison calls the stock a speculative recommendation and says it is an excellent purchase at the current price. He looks for it to test resistance at 27 and then move up to the 30 area. (FNN "World Business Update", 9/19)

GRUNTAL & CO. recommends stock in SCOTT PAPER CO. The brokerage notes that earnings were down the first half of this year due to expansion costs, but says they should rebound next year. ("USA Today", 9/19)

RICHARD ADLER of CRUTTENDEN & CO., recommends five stocks he says could double next year even in a recession. They are: TEXHALL INDUSTRIES, DESTRON, VIDMARK, PROVENA FOODS and HUMPHREY. ("USA Today", 9/19)

"USA Today" reports that emerging technology in health care favors a number of companies, including some that emphasize laparoscopic surgery, which is a less invasive procedure than traditional surgery. The report, a consensus of several analysts, says the following stocks are riding "a healthy trend:" CABOT MEDICAL, LASERSCOPE, U.S. SURGICAL, SURGICAL LASER, SURGICAL CARE and MEDICAL CARE. FALLS CHURCH, VA (SEPT 19) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

Given recent U.S. economic data, the currency market wants to be short dollars says JOHN HAZLETON, analyst with MANUFACTURERS HANOVER. But the Middle East situation is making traders nervous about straying too far from the greenback. "Last Friday when there was an announcement that shots had been fired, there was a very sharp and painful rally in the dollar," says Hazelton. (FNN "World Business Update", 9/19)

As currency movements are showing, "we still haven't seen enough of what is going on in the U.S. economy to make big bets on the dollar," says LISA FINSTROM, an analyst at LEHMAN BROTHERS. She says that may have to wait for the September employment number in early October. (WSJ, 9/19)

"I don't feel the drop in the fed funds rate was due to a move by the Federal Reserve to ease monetary policy." says A.C. MOORE, director of research at ARGUS RESEARCH CORP. "I feel the decline in the fed funds was due to action by the Federal Reserve in response to corporate tax returns being made on Monday with the result money was being taken out of the system. He continues, "With the unexpected jump in the CPI index, ex-food and energy, I doubt the Federal Reserve will ease now. My feeling is the Fed will drag its feet and won't ease until there is some resolution to the Mideast crisis. My rough guess is that it will not take place until sometime in the middle of the fourth quarter." ("Investor's Daily", 9/19)

BILL WOLMAN, chief economist for "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC," says it is almost impossible to determine whether Fed moves yesterday amounted to a calculated ease or merely a move to maintain liquidity in the banking system. Noting rumors that some big New York banks are having cash flow problems, Wolman points out that "the number one job of the Fed is to maintain the soundness of the commercial banking system, to provide liquidity to the commercial banking system. ... I do not know whether the Fed has eased or whether there were funding problems." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/18)

The junk bond market has been signaling recession since August of last year, says JOSEPH BENCIVENGA, high yield bond specialist at SALOMON BROTHERS. "I think the high yield market has basically discounted a lot of these recessionary fears," says Bencivenga who believes junk bonds are now poised to perform well over the next several years despite a record setting default rate thus far in 1990. He says the downside is limited: "With a 40% drop in the bottom tier of the market already, it's hard to believe bonds could go down any further from their average $60 price in the triple-C segment." (CNN "Business Morning", 9/19)

"The Fed has to look at the weakening of the overall economy." says RICHARD STUCKEY, chief economist for DuPONT CO. "Retail sales have been down six of the last seven months, industrial production is dropping and employment growth is slowing. ... They [the Fed] have had an exceedingly tight rein on money. What's uppermost in my mind is whether any loosening will be too little, too late." ("Investor's Daily", 9/19)

Investors in the bond and currency "are busy being nervous, hiding in closets " says TIM SCALA, financial risk manager of the SEQUOR GROUP. "We take positions for very short periods of time and we have got stop loss positions in our mind to cover them, and they are not big positions." He is very cynical about any believable budget deficit coming out of the current talks and says he'd sooner bet on the results of the Middle East. (FNN "Marketwrap" 9/18)

THE ECONOMY:

"I haven't felt this gloomy about the U.S. economy since 1979 ... right before the recessions of 1980 and 1981-82," says ALAN SINAI, chief economist at BOSTON CO. ECONOMIC ADVISORS. "Energy inflation is like an inverted pyramid. It starts at the top with gasoline, then filters down to jet fuel, chemicals, utility bills, plastics, paper, food ... most of the things we buy." ("USA

Today", 9/19)

"I'm afraid we're looking at some more rather ugly inflation numbers in coming months," says BRUCE STEINBERG, an economist with MERRILL LYNCH CAPITAL MARKETS in New York. "Just on the basis of the energy side of the equation, we have several months of bad inflation to come. We're basically looking at an annual inflation rate that's going to run at 7% to 8% for the rest of the year." ("Investor's Daily", 9/19)

"We have inflation numbers that could really sort of knock your socks off," says ROBERT BRUSCA of NIKKO SECURITIES following the CPI report yesterday. He was also very distressed by the higher than expected trade deficit. He says foreign trade had not only been the one star in the economy, it was really the only actor. Now that trade is faltering, many economists are predicting a recession soon if we are not already in one. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/18)

"I think this is a marvelously characteristic inflation number," says JOEL POPKIN, who heads a Washington consulting firm. "It delineates better than words what the inflation problem is. Half of it is from the 'core' inflation rate that existed before the Iraqi invasion and the other half is from energy." He says "we can expect an additional 0.5 percentage points to be tacked on to each of the next couple of CPI reports because of oil prices." ("The Washington Post" and "USA Today", 9/19)

"The one area of strength in our economy [exports] may have come to an end just when we can least afford to have that happen," says DAVID JONES of AUBREY G. LANSTON & CO. ("USA Today", 9/19)

"I don't know how anyone can explain that increase in imports," says WILLIAM ARCHEY, international vice president of the U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE in commenting on a 75% jump in the trade deficit. "It's heavy on capital goods and capital goods are one of the first sectors that should feel a decline because of the slowdown in the U.S. economy." ("The Washington Post", 9/19) 2

"Housing starts are now at a level that ... carries an 83% probability of recession," writes JAMES STACK, editor of "Investech." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/18)

IN WASHINGTON:

"Sequestration is a distinct possibility," says PETER BASS, a managing director at S.G. WARBURG SECURITIES INC., referring to the across-the-board budgets cuts that will take effect on Oct. 1 under the legislation unless a budget agreement is reached. "I don't think it is as much of a long shot as it seemed two weeks ago." (NYT, 9/19)

OAK BROOK, Ill. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Waste Management, Inc. (NYSE: WMX) announced today that its board of directors has authorized the repurchase by the company of up to 25,000,000 shares of its common stock in the open market or in privately negotiated transactions over the next 24 month period. After giving effect to the estimated number of shares issuable in the company's recent increase in ownership of the common stock of Wheelabrator Technologies Inc., the company currently has approximately 486,000,000 shares of common stock outstanding.

Dean L. Buntrock, chairman of the board and chief executive officer stated that "the decision to authorize repurchases of Waste Management common stock arises from the company's belief that, at the current market prices, Waste Management common stock is a sound financial investment for the company. In addition, the program will provide the Company with the ability to move quickly to capitalize on any future opportunities that may be created by general market reactions to events in the Middle East."

Common stock repurchased under the program will be held in the company treasury and will be available for use in connection with business acquisitions by the company, in connection with the company's employee benefit programs or for other general corporate purposes.

CLEVELAND (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Cumulus Corp., for the past three years, a leader in supplying PC enhancement products to the U.S. market and recently adding full systems to its product line, today announced a major expansion of its sales and marketing operations.

Spearheading the company's aggressive expansion plans is Marty Alpert, founder and chief executive officer of the Cleveland-based firm.

Alpert announced that he had hired Kathy Juve to the new position of vice president, sales. Formerly with CMS Enhancements Inc. in Tustin, Calif., Juve's responsibilities will involve widening Cumulus' channel network and thus increasing market penetration for its more than 175 products which enhance memory and data storage capacities in most personal computers.

"Operationally, we've enjoyed tremendous success," Alpert said, adding that the company's philosophy of offering high-quality, reliable products at competitive prices through reputable dealers and distributors has paid off.

"Most businesses, large or small, should not be subjected to the risks of mail-order purchasing when buying PC products," Alpert added. "We are committed to offering them the price advantage of mail order along with the security that comes with buying from a reputable reseller and service center."

While Juve and a growing staff of marketing experts are being added to the PC enhancement products division, Alpert said he is also focusing on the future by building the systems side of the business.

Cumulus last week announced a high-performance, low-cost PC -- the GLC/CO -- designed to make it easy for large corporations and small to medium-sized businesses to acquire maximum computing power along with the service and support they need at mail-order prices.

The 386SX-based systems, ranging from $1,195 to $1,895, are being sold with Microsoft's DOS 4.01, Windows 3.0 and Works; a one year parts and labor warranty and 24-hour parts replacement program through a network of authorized dealers.

The PC enhancement products include floppy disk subsystems for PS/2 and PC-AT compatibles; memory products for IBM, Compaq, Apple, Hewlett-Packard and AST computers; removable fixed disk subsystems for portable and desktop PCs, and microprocessor upgrade products for IBM and Compaq computers.

BEAVERTON, ORE. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - NIKE Inc. (NASDAQ: NIKE) shareholders, voting at NIKE's annual shareholders' meeting held Sept. 17, approved a three-fold increase in the number of authorized Class A and Class B Common shares. The increase in authorized shares was necessary in order to execute a two-for-one stock split in the form of a 100 percent stock dividend which was previously approved by the board of directors in June 1990.

Commenting on the results of the vote, NIKE Chairman Philip H. Knight said, "We believe this stock split will benefit our current and future shareholders by making the stock more accessible to individual investors and improving the stock's liquidity."

The stock dividend will be distributed on Oct. 5 and the stock will trade ex-dividend on Oct. 9, at which time the effect of the split will be reflected in the stock price.

In other business, NIKE's board of directors announced the intention to apply for listing the company's Class B Common Stock on the Pacific Stock Exchange. Such listing would occur simultaneously with the company's listing on the New York Stock Exchange, which is currently expected to occur in late October.

NIKE Inc., based in Beaverton, is the world's leading designer and marketer of performance athletic footwear, apparel and accessories. The company also markets a line of classic styled dress and casual footwear under the COLE HAAN brand name. Net income for the first quarter ended Aug. 31 increased 31 percent to $99.7 million or $2.62 per share on a 38 percent increase in revenues to $834 million. Worldwide revenues for the 12-month period ended Aug. 31 totaled $2.5 billion.

ELK GROVE VILLAGE, ILL. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - AAR Corp. (NYSE: AIR) today announced that for the company's first quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990 net income was $6,697,000 or 42 cents per share, compared to $6,570,000 or 41 cents per share the prior year. Net sales rose to $116,091,000 from $108,635,000 for the first quarter of fiscal 1990. The number of average shares outstanding increased to 16,084,000 from 16,018,000 year over year.

Net income for the period included an after-tax gain of $1,600,000 from the sale of a residual interest in a leased aircraft owned by the company.

Ira A. Eichner, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of AAR, commenting on the first quarter, said "These results were attained in a softer industry environment caused by the current economic uncertainties affecting our customers, in particular fuel prices. These market conditions appear to have created caution in discretionary purchases by airlines."

AAR Corp., is a leading supplier of aerospace/aviation products and services. The company primarily distributes parts and equipment, performs technical services and manufacturers proprietary products for the aviation industry in the United States and abroad.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Apple Bancorp (NYSE: APK) announced that its chairman and chief executive officer, Jerome R. McDougal, today responded to Stanley Stahl's letter of Sept. 18, 1990. In the letter, McDougal stated:

"The situation, as it now stands, is very clear. Apple Bancorp's board of directors cleared the way for you to purchase all tendered shares at your $38 price, and took all necessary actions that permitted you to do so before shareholders are required to vote at the annual meeting.

"Your response, had you chosen to do so, could have been equally clear and unambiguous. You could have stated, without equivocation, that you would buy all tendered shares when your offer expires at midnight on Oct. 1.

"Instead, you reacted exactly as we suspected you would. "First, and most telling, is your opposition to the brief delay in the annual meeting. If you truly intend to complete your offer at the earliest possible time, the date of the annual meeting is utterly irrelevant. Put simply, all you have to do is buy the shares and the ball game is over. This entire situation can be brought to conclusion at 12:01 a.m. on Oct. 2.

"Why is it that you absolutely insist that our shareholders vote in the election before you commit to buy their shares?

"Second, to our amazement, you now appear to have conditioned your offer on your satisfaction with the confidential information furnished to you. I'm sure that our shareholders and the marketplace must be very disturbed to learn for the first time that your willingness to complete your offer is about to become subject to a 'due diligence'-type condition.

"We can only speculate on what other new conditions you might seek to impose if you gain control of the board.

"Finally, you have cited the escrowing of funds which the company is legally and contractually obligated to pay as yet another condition to your offer. I have no doubt that you and your advisors know that this is a manufactured issue which has no bearing whatsoever on your ability to complete your tender offer should you choose to do so.

"Yesterday, a New York newspaper ran a headline 'Apple Calls Stahl's Bluff.' If this is an apt characterization, it appears that you are searching for reasons to leave the table. You can put to rest what I perceive as increasing speculation as to whether you will complete your offer for at least $38 per share. If you are prepared to buy the shares, just say so."

EAST CHICAGO, IN (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Inland Steel Co., a subsidiary of Chicago-based Inland Steel Industries, Inc. (NYSE: IAD), today announced it has sold the assets and limestone-dolomite reserves of its Inland Lime and Stone Co. Division in Gulliver, Mich., to Pfizer Specialty Minerals Inc., a subsidiary of Pfizer Inc. (NYSE: PFE).

The purchase price was not revealed. Pfizer said it is studying the facility, currently shut down, in the context of a capital improvement program and currently plans to initiate operations at the Gulliver site in 1992.

Inland said it plans to purchase stone from the Gulliver operations when production resumes. Operations at Inland Lime and Stone Co. were shut down in December 1989. Inland acquired the property in 1928 and began operating the newly built facility in 1930.

Robert J. Darnall, president and chief operating officer of Inland Steel Industries and president of Inland Steel Co., said, "The sale of Inland Lime and Stone Co. reflects management's policy of divesting nonstrategic operations."

Walter Nazarewicz, president of Pfizer Specialty Minerals, said, "This acquisition will fit nicely with increased raw material requirements resulting from the success of our satellite precipitated calcium carbonate (PCC) program."

Under the PCC program, satellite plants are built at or adjacent to papermills to produce high-quality precipitated calcium carbonate, which is piped directly to the mills in slurry form for use as a paper filler or coating pigment.

In addition to steelmaking, limestone is used in the manufacture of chemical-grade lime, glass, and other industrial products. Pfizer Specialty Minerals produces specialty-grade limestone at facilities in Connecticut, Massachusetts and California.

Pfizer Inc. is a worldwide research-based company headquartered in New York, with businesses in health care, animal health, consumer products, specialty chemicals and specialty minerals.

Inland Steel industries, Inc., is a holding company whose principal activities are conducted by wholly owned subsidiaries and centered in two core business segments: integrated steel operations and steel service center operations. It is the parent company of the nation's fourth largest steel producer, Inland Steel Co., and two general line service center organizations, Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, Inc., and J.M. Tull Metals Co., Inc.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Sedgwick James Inc. and Crawford & Co. (NYSE: CRDA CRDB) announced today that they have entered into an agreement in principle whereby Crawford & Co. will acquire the business of the FPE Group, a subsidiary that specializes in loss control and fire protection engineering services.

The transaction is expected to be completed by Oct. 31. Forrest L. Minix, chairman and chief executive officer of Crawford & Co., said that the acquisition would help the company build and strengthen its existing risk control business. "Since one of Crawford & Company's specialties is providing professional risk control services, the FPE Group will be a 'natural fit' in our organization."

Speaking for Sedgwick James, Quill O. Healey, president and chief operating officer, pointed out that the technical expertise of FPE will continue to be drawn upon as required by Sedgwick James clients. "We believe that it is in our client's and company's best interest that in some instances certain highly technical, loss control specialties be purchased from independent firms. Thus, we look forward to an ongoing business relationship with FPE as part of Crawford & Company," he said.

The FPE Group, with 72 employees, is based in Lafayette, Calif., and also has offices in Naperville, Ill.; Plainsboro, N.J.; Springfield, Mo.; Torrance, Calif.; and Wichita, Kan.

Sedgwick James is part of the London-based Sedgwick Group, the world's third-largest provider of insurance broking and risk services. Crawford & Co. is a diversified service firm that provides claims management, risk management, risk control and health care management services to insurance companies, corporations and self-insured entities.

HIGHLAND PARK, MICH. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Chrysler minivans, which account for nearly one-half of U.S. minivan segment sales, have been redesigned inside and out for 1991. The new minivan models were showcased today, Wednesday, Sept. 19, as Chrysler Corporation (NYSE: C) unveiled its 1991 product lineup and the advertising that will be used to support it.

With major interior and exterior refinements, plus significant engineering upgrades, the Dodge Caravan and Caravan C/V, Plymouth Voyager and Chrysler Town & Country models are more than ready to face import and domestic competitors pushing the outer limits of design in an effort to play catch-up, Chrysler Motors President Robert A. Lutz said.

The minivans, as well as other major product actions for 1991, mark the first evidence of the $15.6 billion five-year new product program at Chrysler designed to provide "plenty of steak and sizzle," added Lutz.

"Voyager and Caravan were the best to begin with, and now they're even better. We kept the basic, functional design of our minivan -- no spaceships, no inverted bathtubs -- because that's what our more than 2 million minivan customers told us to do.

"When 2 million people talk, we listen!" In addition to the exterior and interior redesigns, all-wheel drive versions of the minivans will be available for the first time, as will a 4-wheel anti-lock brake option.

Other major product actions for 1991 include new low-priced versions of the popular Dodge Shadow and Plymouth Sundance -- called the "America" models; new Dodge Stealth sports car; Dodge Spirit R/T model with Chrysler's first multi-valve engine; and a convertible version of the Dodge Shadow.

Among trucks actions, a new Jeep Renegade model makes its debut, and Dodge Dakota gets a 4-wheel drive Club Cab model as a mid-year change.

In addition to the 2.2-liter dual overhead cam multi-valve engine in the Spirit R/T, other major powertrain refinements include a new 3.8-liter V-6 engine available in mid-year as standard powerplant on Chrysler Imperial models and optional on Chrysler Fifth Avenue, New Yorker Salon, and Dodge Dynasty LE; and a 2.5-liter "high torque" turbocharged engine available on Dodge Spirit ES, Shadow and Daytona, and Chrysler LeBaron convertible.

LONDON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Reuters Limited today announced it has acquired Uplink Limited, a specialized satellite service operator (SSSO) company licensed by the United Kingdom to provide from the U.K. one-way point to multi-point satellite services of all kinds within Europe.

Uplink Limited was previously owned by the Business Television Corporation Limited, United Artists International Limited, UK Consumer Electronics Limited (part of the Granada Group), Swedtel Limited and Burpham Investments Ltd. It was awarded one of seven SSSO licenses issued by the U.K. government in October 1988.

One of its early clients was BrightStar, the television communications subsidiary of Visnews Limited, which is 51 percent owned by Reuters Limited, the U.K.-based trading company of Reuters Holdings PLC (NASDAQ: RTRSY).

Reuters and BrightStar intend to build on the business started by Uplink, anticipating growth in the television broadcast transmission field in which BrightStar is a leader.

Reuters already distributes some of its financial data services in Europe by satellite having established Europe's first point to multi- point network in 1987 with British Telecom International providing the transmission facilities.

The sum paid by Reuters for Uplink Limited was significantly less than half of one percent of Reuter shareholders' equity as of Dec. 31, 1989.

Reuters Holdings PLC (NASDAQ: RTRSY) supplies the global business community and news media with a wide range of facilities including real- time financial data and transaction services, access to numeric and textual historical databases, news and news pictures. Reuters has a controlling interest in Visnews, the international television news agency, and Reuter Group companies design and install trading room systems. Reuters obtains information from around 160 exchanges and over-the-counter markets and from a network of some 1,310 journalists, photographers and cameramen. Reuters distributes information through approximately 200,000 video terminals and teleprinters. This includes information directly transmitted to clients' computers.

MIAMI (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - General Development Corporation (NYSE: GDV) announced today it has hired The Palmieri Company to work with the company, its bankruptcy counsel, and its creditors in developing a plan of reorganization for the company.

Palmieri specializes in corporate crisis management. Peter A. Martosella Jr., a managing director of Palmieri, will direct the Palmieri team in the consulting effort which will begin by analyzing GDC's operations and cash flow in preparation for the development of a business plan and organizational restructuring. In addition to Palmieri's responsibilities in the planning process, their personnel will communicate and work with General Development's creditors and other constituencies in its bankruptcy proceedings.

Palmieri offers significant experience in complex Chapter 11 cases, including the Penn Central and Baldwin-United cases. At Penn Central, they transformed The Pennsylvania Company (a wholly owned subsidiary of Penn Central) and its operating companies into a profitable and growing concern which served as the foundation of the reorganized Penn Central Corporation. At Baldwin-United Corporation, Palmieri provided executive management through one of the largest and most complex reorganizations in American business history. Palmieri has considerable experience in real estate management, having served as court appointed trustee and manager of Levitt & Sons, Inc., at the time the largest diversified homebuilder in the United States. Palmieri also has considerable experience in the management of large real estate portfolios, including a portfolio of real estate assets in excess of $1 billion for Penn Central; approximately $900 million for the Teamsters Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund as ordered by the U.S. Department of Labor and the IRS; and over $250 million of diversified real estate properties and loans acquired by Palmieri through syndicated limited partnerships.

Most recently, Victor Palmieri, chairman of Palmieri, was appointed Trustee of Colorado-UTE Electric Association, a utility cooperative currently undergoing Chapter 11 reorganization.

General Development President and Chief Executive Officer Thomas J. Hutchison said, "This is a major step in our effort to reorganize and become financially sound. The Palmieri Company's expertise will prove vital in our goal of emerging as a successful company in the future."

CHICAGO (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - A unique employee training program operated jointly by the United Auto Workers union and Ford Motor Co. (NYSE: F) was cited by the U.S. Labor Department today in Washington, D.C. for innovative and effective efforts to upgrade the skills of the American workforce.

U.S. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole presented the department's LIFT (Labor Investing for Tomorrow) America Award to UAW Vice President Ernest Lofton and Ford Vice President Elliott Hall in formal ceremonies held in the Labor Department's Great Hall.

The UAW-Ford program was among 16 business and public organizations to receive LIFT America awards, a program established by Secretary Dole earlier this year. The program recognizes employers, labor organizations, and community educational and other groups for "outstanding achievement in designing and managing exemplary programs, or for contributing to the success of programs that mobilize communities to encourage labor investing for tomorrow."

The UAW-Ford National Education, Development and Training Center, Dearborn, Mich., provides comprehensive training and education curriculum for UAW-represented Ford employees in over 50 locations in 13 states.

Among the varied programs offered by the center, two were highlighted for the LIFT America Awards. Specifically, the Skills Enhancement Program which provides employees with the opportunity to pursue higher levels of education in order to develop new skills and sharpen existing skills, and the Life/Education Planning Program which assists employees in mapping and obtaining education, training or personal development goals.

Over 60,000 Ford employees have voluntarily participated in these self-paced, self-directed programs since their inception in 1982. Currently, over 380 employees have received a high school diploma and 950 have received high school credit, while approximately 700 employees are currently pursuing post-secondary education.

LIFT Awards were presented today in four categories: Employee Training Programs (which included the UAW-Ford program); Business-School Partnerships; School-to-Work Programs; and Employee Worklife Programs.

"At a time when the United States is competing in an increasingly complex global market, the basic skills of the American workforce are eroding at an alarming rate," Secretary Dole said.

"We are honoring these programs to encourage the discovery and application of creative, community-based solutions to address the ever- growing workforce crisis. These LIFT America Awards honor some of those who are making a difference in our efforts to bridge the skills gap."

Others receiving LIFT America Awards included: Partners in Education, Cincinnati; Shell Oil Co., Houston; Building Futures in Industry and Trades, Portland, Ore.; Yellowstone Contractors Association/Billings Career Center, Billings, Mont., all honored in the Business-School Partnerships category.

In the School-to-Work Programs category, those honored included: Jobs for America's Graduates, Alexandria, Va.; Children's Hospital/English High School Collaborative, Boston; and Career Ladder Programs, San Francisco.

In addition to the UAW-Ford program, others honored in the Employee Training Programs category were: Alliance for Employee Growth and Development, Somerset, N.J.; Polaroid/InnerCity, Inc., Roxbury, Mass.; San Antonio Housing Authority, San Antonio, Texas; Vermont Heating and Venting Co., Inc., Colchester, Vt.; and Plumley Companies, Inc., Paris, Tenn.

Those honored in the Employee Worklife Programs category were: Thomas J. Lipton Co., Englewood Cliffs, N.J.; Monsanto Co., St. Louis, Mo.; and IBM Corp., Armonk, N.Y.

LONDON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Western Petroleum Services International (WPSI), a wholly owned subsidiary of the Western Company of North America (NYSE: WSN), has signed a contract in Singapore to construct a 308-foot (93m) well stimulation vessel for operation in the North Sea oil fields of the United Kingdom, Norway, Denmark and The Netherlands. The dynamically positioned vessel, expected to cost approximately $43 million U.S. will be fabricated in Singapore by Singmarine Dockyard and Engineering PTE, Limited, a unit of the Keppel Corporation Limited, whose shipbuilding and offshore construction subsidiaries include Far East Levingston Shipbuilding Limited. The vessel is designed by Maritime Engineering, a leading designer of vessels and offshore drilling rigs. Western expects the vessel to be fully operational in the spring of 1992.

The new vessel, to be christened the "Western Renaissance," will become the largest stimulation vessel operating in the North Sea, according to Ed Will, president of WPSI. "The stimulation plant's independently powered high-pressure pumping units are designed for maximum reliability. The units' total available hydraulic horsepower allows for extended pumping operations at elevated pressures and injection rates."

The Western Company of North America, including its subsidiaries (Western Petroleum Services, Western Petroleum Services International and Western Oceanic, Inc.), is an oilfield service company providing pressure pumping and contract drilling services worldwide. Pressure pumping principally involves the acidizing, fracturing and cementing of oil and gas wells. Offshore contract drilling services are provided with a fleet of 13 mobile rigs.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - NaTec Resources, Inc. (NASDAQ: NATC) today announced it has made a proposal to acquire Advance Ross Corporation (NASDAQ: AROS) in a stock-for-stock merger. It is expected that, pursuant to the proposed transaction, Advance Ross shareholders would receive, in a tax-free exchange, sufficient shares of NaTec to represent a substantial premium to the recent trading price of Advance Ross. Advance Ross is NaTec's second largest shareholder, holding approximately 13.7 percent of NaTec's outstanding shares. NaTec has offered to construct a floating exchange rate to assure a premium to Advance Ross shareholders at various stock prices of NaTec. NaTec initially proposed an exchange ratio subject to due diligence which could be expected to represent over a 20 percent premium over the recent trading levels of Advance Ross common stock. In its most recent letter, NaTec has indicated that if given the opportunity to evaluate Advance Ross businesses, it would consider a higher valuation to reflect any additional source of value.

The proposal is subject to due diligence, negotiation of the terms of the transaction and definitive documentation, approval by the respective boards of directors and shareholders of both companies, and the absence of any material change in the financial condition or the cash and temporary investments position of Advance Ross. Merrill Lynch Capital Markets is representing NaTec and its major shareholder, CRSS Inc., in connection with this proposal.

NaTec is committed to the control of pollutants commonly associated with acid rain. The company provides consulting engineering, injection system installation, operations and maintenance services, and processed sorbent supply. Primary markets are utility, industrial power generation, pulp and paper, refining and municipal solid waste.

CANTON, OHIO (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The Timken Company (NYSE: TKR) announced today that $40 million will be spent on a Universal Forging Facility at its wholly owned subsidiary, the Latrobe Steel Company in Latrobe, Pa. The project is part of the company's previously announced $1 billion, five-year capital investment program.

"This investment will increase our capability across all our Latrobe product lines to supply specialty steels and alloys with quality characteristics unequalled in the industry," explained Joseph F. Toot, Jr., president, in making the announcement. "The Universal Forging Facility, along with other projects recently brought on stream to target the current and future needs of the market, will assure our ability to meet our customers' specifications and delivery demands. At the same time, we will maximize the use of our capital investment dollars and realize greater manufacturing efficiencies.

"Along with our acquisition of MPB Corporation earlier this year," Toot said, "this investment represents our commitment to expand our core bearing and steel businesses by pursuing the higher-performance spectrum in both the specialty steel and bearing markets. We see these areas as providing long-term profit opportunities and intend to capitalize on those markets that require materials and components for the most technically demanding applications." MPB is a precision bearing manufacturer while Latrobe Steel Company is a major supplier of specialty steel products to the aerospace, high-performance bearing and other critical application markets.

C. Philip Weigel, president of Latrobe Steel Company, said that the 53,000-square-foot facility is being built for the production of low-cost, high-quality billet and bar products. "It will add significantly to Latrobe's forging and rolling capability in the larger sizes required by our customers. Through a combination of the latest technology and significantly reduced operating costs, Latrobe Steel will enjoy a competitive advantage in the markets it serves."

The facility, which will replace existing, less-efficient equipment and increase capacity, has been designed to optimize the reduction of ingots to bars and billets and is particularly well-suited for low- volume exotic alloy applications that are Latrobe Steel Company's hallmark. The radial forging machine to be installed in the facility will provide excellent size control.

The facility, which incorporates advanced computer controls to help streamline the process, will be operated by skilled technicians.

CLEVELAND (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The Lubrizol Corporation (NYSE: LZ) announced today that the Federal Court of Canada ruled that one of Lubrizol's important patents is valid and was infringed by Exxon's Canadian affiliate. The suit was brought by The Lubrizol Corporation and its Canadian subsidiary, Lubrizol Canada Limited, against a Canadian affiliate of Exxon Corporation, Imperial Oil Limited, and its subdivision, Paramins.

The patent covers additives that are essential to the performance of high quality lubricants for gasoline and diesel engines, and also covers finished lubricants which utilize the additives. The Court permanently enjoined Exxon's Canadian affiliate from making, using and selling some 20 specified additives as well as the finished lubricants containing them. A temporary injunction on one of these additives had been in effect since January, 1989.

The Court also ruled that Lubrizol is entitled to a monetary recovery for past infringement, the amount of which will be decided at an undetermined future date by a referee appointed by the Court. The Court also ordered the payment of Lubrizol's attorneys fees and costs incurred in the suit as well as Lubrizol's expenses of its expert witnesses.

Trial of the infringement suit commenced in Toronto May 7, 1990 and concluded June 29, 1990 before Mr. Justice Cullen.

The Canadian patent is one of the international sister patents of a Lubrizol U.S. patent involved in an earlier suit in the U.S. Federal Court. That suit was settled with a Court order in 1988, under which Exxon admitted the validity of all Lubrizol patents involved in the case and paid Lubrizol $80 million in cash and $6 million in materials. Lubrizol has brought similar infringement suits in France and UK, and those suits are pending.

Lubrizol is a specialty chemical company using chemical, mechanical and biological technologies to develop products for world markets in transportation, industry and agriculture.

WASHINGTON (Sept. 19) PR Newswire - Administrator Richard G. Austin of the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) announced the award of two telephone equipment and services contracts valued at $9,470,418 to Communications Resource Group, Inc., a woman-owned small business of Columbia, Md.

The contracts were awarded under the set-aside program in which suitable government purchases are reserved for competitive award to small business concerns. Cathy S. Young is chairman of Communications Resource Group, Inc.

Austin said the contracts are part of the Purchase of Telephones and Services (POTS) program of GSA's Information Resources Management Service. They provide federal agencies in New York and New Jersey a fully-competed, non-mandatory source of supply for PBX's, integrated voice/data terminals, telecommunications devices for the deaf, migration to Integrated Services Digital Network (ISDN), single-line video display phones, automatic call distributors and automatic dialers. They also offer more than 300 standard telecommunications equipment items and such follow-on services as maintenance, installation, moves and deinstallation of embedded cable.

Both contracts are for three years and include two one-year renewal options. One, with an estimated worth of $5,274,319 for the five-year period, will serve federal offices in New York State, excluding New York City. The second, valued at $4,196,099, will serve New Jersey. Service in New York City will be provided under a separate procurement.

Austin said procurements are underway to replace all existing POTS contracts nationwide. All are targeted for award by the close of fiscal year 1991.

PITTSBURGH (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - National Steel Corp., Dofasco Inc. of Canada and NKK Corp. of Japan announced today that they have reached an agreement to build a new $200 million joint venture continuous galvanizing line (CGL) to serve North American automakers.

A new limited partnership, DNN Galvanizing Corp., has been formed to oversee construction and operation of the new facility. National Steel will be a 10 percent equity owner of the facility, Dofasco will be a 50 percent owner and NKK will own the remaining 40 percent. Ben J. Ciprietti, vice president-planning of Dofasco, has been named president of the new firm. Hirotsugu Miyazaki, a managing director of NKK; David A. Chatfield, vice president-technology of National Steel; and Yoshito Tokumitsu, vice president-distribution and services of National Steel will be directors.

The new 400,000-ton-per-year line will use NKK's advanced CGL technology and will be modeled after NKK's No. 2 Fukuyama facility. The line will include an electrolytic cleaning section, a vertical annealing furnace, induction galvannealing, tempering and tension leveling. NKK will supply the process equipment and provide technical and operational assistance. The location of the new line has not yet been determined.

The proposed facility will operate as a toll coating line. The owners will provide their own marketing and distribution functions. The high quality, hot-dip galvanized steel, produced by the facility, will be supplied to automotive markets both in the United States and Canada. One-half of the total output will be marketed and distributed by Dofasco, and the remainder by National Steel. It is anticipated that production will begin in early 1993.

National Steel Corp. is the nation's fifth largest steelmaker with production facilities in Ecorse, Mich., near Detroit; Portage, Ind., near Chicago; and Granite City, Ill., near St. Louis. The company is headquartered in Pittsburgh and employs about 12,000 people. It is owned 70 percent by NKK Corp. and 30 percent by National Intergroup Inc. (NYSE: NII). In 1989, National Steel shipped 4,957,000 tons of steel and had sales of $2.6 billion.

NKK Corp., formerly Nippon Kokan K.K., is Japan's second largest steelmaker and the seventh largest in the world. The company makes a full line of steel products, including hot and cold rolled sheets, bars and shapes, pipe and tubes, plates and coated. NKK employs approximately 22,000 people and has annual sales of about $8.1 billion. Raw steel production in the corporation's fiscal year ending March 31, 1990, totaled 12.3 million metric tons.

Dofasco Inc. is Canada's largest integrated steelmaker, providing approximately 40 percent of the country's total steel production. Products include hot and cold rolled steel, plate, galvanized and Galvalume steel, prepainted steel, tinplate, chromium-coated and electrical steel; seamless and welded pipe and tube products; structural steel shapes, rails, as well as carbon and low alloy steel castings. In 1989, consolidated sales were $3.9 billion Cdn. with raw steel production of 7.2 million tons. Dofasco employs 22,700 people.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Wells Fargo Bank has been named one of the 75 best companies in the United States for working women with children, according to a recent survey by "Working Mother" magazine, and was also featured as one of the top seven U.S. companies for job flexibility.

Wells Fargo was first noted on "Working Mother's" annual listing of best companies to work for in 1987. It has since added five new work/family programs, including a child care referral service, a leave program to take care of children or elderly family members, a work/family resource center and a program to train retirees to become child care providers.

More than 70 percent of Wells Fargo's workforce are women -- 60 percent of whom hold managerial positions. In addition, four of the 37 executive vice presidents at the bank are women and two of the bank's 18 bank directors are women.

According to the magazine, Wells Fargo is also a leader in providing flexible work programs for its employees, including telecommuting, job sharing and compressed work weeks. Because more than a third of its employees have children under the age of 12, Wells Fargo also has a pre- tax dependent care reimbursement account, pays for child care costs or travel expenses when employees work overtime, and funds the training of new child care providers. A one year personal unpaid leave can be negotiated.

Employees can also take a six month paid social-service leave after they've been with the bank for three years, or, if they've been with the bank for 10 years, can take a three month paid leave to pursue a personal interest.

The fifth annual survey was prepared by Carol Townsend and Milton Moskowitz, coauthor "The Best Companies to Work for in America." The companies selected were based on the following criteria: pay (compared to the industry competition), opportunities for women to advance, support for child care, and family-friendly benefits (maternity leave, flextime, part time job sharing).

Following is a list of the best California companies for working mothers, listed alphabetically:

Apple Computers, Cupertino; Atlantic Richfield Co. (ARCO), Los Angeles; Genentech, San Francisco; G.T. Water Products Inc., Moorpark; Lost Arrow, Ventura; Morrison & Foerster, San Francisco; Oracle, Redwood Shores; Syntex, Palo Alto; Wells Fargo & Co., San Francisco.

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - "There is an ever- increasing trend on behalf of pharmaceutical companies and regulatory bodies around the world to prevent the marketing of drugs that contain both therapeutic and potentially harmful or undesirable properties," two scientists from Celgene Corporation (NASDAQ: CELG) told the "Chiral '90" conference.

Dr. David Stirling, senior research fellow, and Dr. George Matcham, manager of chiral research and development, presented Celgene's novel method for producing uniquely pure pharmaceuticals and other biologically active compounds at this two day symposium at Manchester University. Drs. Stirling, Matcham and Andrew Zeitlin recently received U.S. patent no. 4,950,606 for this innovative method of synthesizing or separating the beneficial from the unneeded or harmful forms of compounds.

Many compounds come in two molecular forms which are mirror images of each other, a phenomenon known as chirality. Usually one form delivers the desired characteristic, while the other often causes undesired side effects or has no effect.

Conventional chemistry has had only limited success in separating these forms, known as chiral isomers. Co-authors Matcham and Stirling described how the Celgene process utilizes the living cell to produce the preferred isomers. The process offers a new, practical and economic method of achieving high purity, which could translate into lower dose rates, reduced side effects, and increased efficacy in the final drug.

The system is effective on a broad class of compounds known as amines, which includes cardiovascular, antibiotic, and antidepression drugs, along with sweeteners and agricultural chemicals. It is estimated that 500 drug compounds in development are candidates for this technology.

Celgene, based in Warren, N.J., is a chemical biotechnology company engaged in the development of fine and specialty chemicals and the bioremediation of hazardous waste.

MONTVALE, NJ (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Federal Paper Board Company, Inc. (NYSE: FBO) today announced that it had completed the purchase of Continental Bondware, Inc., a subsidiary of Continental Holdings, Inc., owned by Peter Kiewit Sons' Inc.

Continental Bondware is a major producer of wax and poly-coated paper cups and will complement Imperial Cup Corp., which Federal acquired in October of last year.

The combined companies will be operated as a subsidiary of Federal, under the name Imperial Bondware Corp. The new company will operate six cup plants in Kenton, Ohio; Shelbyville, Ill.; Chicago; LaFayette, Ga.; Salisbury, Md.; and Visalia, Calif. Combined estimated sales will be approximately $260-$270 million.

John R. Kennedy, president of Federal, stated that the combined entities utilize over 100,000 tons of bleached paperboard per year, which fits in with the company's expansion of its Augusta, Ga. mill. The second phase of the Augusta expansion will be completed in the first quarter of 1991. Upon completion, Federal will have capacity at its two bleached paperboard mills in Riegelwood, N.C. and Augusta, Ga. to produce more than 1 million tons of bleached paperboard per year.

Kennedy further stated that Continental Bondware and Imperial Cup complement one another in that they have been serving different segments of the market. There will be substantial synergism, since on a combined basis the new company will have both west coast and east coast manufacturing facilities which Bondware lacked prior to the acquisition.

Federal Paper Board Company, Inc. manufactures and sells solid bleached paperboard, bleached market pulp, recycled paperboard, folding cartons, lumber paper cups, and in the European market, uncoated freesheet paper.

HARRISBURG, PA. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board (PLCB) today unveiled the newest addition to its private label product line.

Simply Blush, a California blush wine, joins two other products, rounding out Pennsylvania's selection of private label wines. Last year more than 750,000 cases of blush-style wine was sold in Pennsylvania wine and spirits shoppes. That's more than any other wine category.

"The Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board recognizes the increasing popularity of wine, particularly blush wines," said Chairman James A. Goodman. "This is a product which could not be ignored," he said.

The PLCB began selling its Laurel Collection brand of products in May of 1988, with red and white French wines marketed under the names L'Amandier. Since that time, more than 17,000 cases of Laurel Collection L'Amandier have been sold in Pennsylvania.

"The success of the private label depends largely on the board's ability to give consumers quality products at fair prices," said Goodman. "The Laurel Collection effectively provides both," he said.

Simply Blush, provided to the PLCB through Eric M. Price III & Co. of Upper Darby, Pa., is a California blush wine comprised of a blend of grapes including Chenin Blanc, French Colombard and Muscat. Simply Blush has marvelous balance, exceptional taste and is an outstanding value at $4.49 (750 ml) and $6.99 (1.5L).

Laurel Collection wines are available in all Pennsylvania Wine and Spirits Shoppes.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Pan Am Corporation (NYSE: PN) Chairman Thomas G. Plaskett announced today that Pan American World Airways has launched a series of strategic route and equipment actions to strengthen its position and has also begun a cost-cutting program to counter the rapidly rising cost of jet fuel and softening demand for air travel. A key component in the cost reduction program is the elimination of 2,500 jobs.

In his presentation to the New York Society of Airline Security Analysts, Plaskett said the airline's strategic program includes "right- sizing" transatlantic services to better match capacity with demand, adjusting its network of domestic feeder flights into John F. Kennedy Airport in New York, and continuing development of its Miami hub and presence in Latin America. These programs, Plaskett said, will result in a 7.5 percent reduction in capacity planned by the airline in 1991. In line with new capacity levels, Plaskett said that headcount would be reduced by 2,500 next month. Both management and non-management positions are affected. Pan Am's current total employment is approximately 29,000.

As part of its plan to "right-size" its transatlantic services, Plaskett said the company would return five of its fleet of 35 B747s to the lessor this fall and substitute twin-engine, fuel efficient A310/300s on several transatlantic routes. He noted that while the 412- seat B747 is the ideal aircraft for peak summer demand travel period, the 192-seat A310s are more profitable on an annual basis on several of the markets where they will now be assigned, such as JFK/Milan, JFK/Madrid, Washington (Dulles)/Frankfurt and Washington (Dulles)/London.

Pan Am also announced that it would take delivery of two new A310/300s for next summer's peak and use the new capacity to inaugurate service from JFK to Manchester, England; JFK to Zagreb, Yugoslavia; and Newark to London's Heathrow Airport.

As Pan Am removes capacity from the Atlantic, it will also improve its network of domestic feeder flights into JFK, Plaskett told the group. Several unprofitable feeder segments have been or will be eliminated or consolidated, he said, citing plans to terminate service from Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Austin, San Antonio and Cincinnati to JFK. He noted that Pan Am Express, the corporation's commuter subsidiary, would replace Pan Am and continue to provide an air link to JFK from both Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

The acquisition was made by Western Gas Processors Ltd. (NYSE: WGP) which is 52 percent owned by Western Gas Resources. The Waha Header System, located in Pecos County, Texas, serves to interconnect pipelines in the area to provide a number of transportation options to transporters for natural gas flowing at different operating pressures and in different directions. The system's terminus points are El Paso Natural Gas Co.'s pipeline to the west and Lone Star's pipeline to the east and ultimate plans include connections with Westar, Valero, Oasis, Red River, Northern Natural and Transwestern. The high pressure portion of the system was designed to transport 350 million cubic feet per day and the low pressure side was designed to transport 200 million cubic feet per day. Intrastate and interstate pipelines connected by the Waha Header access gas from New Mexico, Western Oklahoma and virtually all of Texas. The interconnected pipelines can provide access to most natural gas markets in the continental United States.

The facility is operated by Lone Star Gas Co. which operates an elaborate intrastate pipeline network in Texas and encompasses more than 10,000 miles. The facility taps into eight major natural gas basins in the Southwest and provides connections to California, the Midwest, Gulf Coast and East Coast regions. Western's acquisition of the interest will enhance Western's ability to market natural gas and particularly gas produced from its Midkiff and San Juan River facilities located in the Permian and San Juan River Basins respectively, and its most recently acquired Giddings System which gathers and processes gas from the Austin Chalk play. The flexibility provided by this system will allow Western to maximize gas flow efficiency and profitability benefitting producers and investors.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Tenneco Inc. (NYSE: TGT) today announced the approval of a major capital project to further expand production capacity at its Tenneco Minerals Company division Green River, Wyo., trona mine and soda ash plant.

The project will add facilities to process an additional one million tons of trona ore per year into calcined trona, with the ability to increase the processing rate to 1.5 million tons per year in the future.

Calcined trona is a feedstock used to make products including soda ash, sodium sulfite, caustic soda and other sodium chemicals. If all the production of the expanded capacity were used to produce caustic soda, the project would provide enough feedstock for 750,000 tons of the product per year, or about six percent of U.S. industry demand. The unusually high quality of this trona ore further enhances this project.

The opportunity for this expansion is the result of the declining use of chlorine in pulp bleaching and other chlorine end uses while caustic soda demand continues to grow. Currently, more than 98 percent of all caustic soda is produced by the electrolysis of salt brine which yields a nearly equal amount of chlorine.

David R. Delling, president of Tenneco Minerals Co., also reported that three other company projects have been completed or are progressing on schedule, including:

- Completion of the company's second stage debottlenecking of soda ash capacity at the Green River plant last month, bringing current capacity of refined soda ash to 1.25 million tons per year.

- Engineering planning and development for the Asahi Glass Co., joint venture announced earlier this year, which will expand refined soda ash production by 600,000 tons per year, is ongoing with plant completion set for mid-1992.

- And, construction on another new project, which will produce 75,000 tons per year of caustic soda and 50,000 tons per year of sodium sulfite at the Green River plant, is now approximately 40 percent complete with facilities expected to come on stream at the end of the first quarter of 1991.

"Demand for all of Tenneco Minerals' products is strong and the new projects are all progressing as planned," said Delling. "As a result of the calcined trona project, additional new downstream projects might be forthcoming."

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Burns, Philp & Company Limited (OTC: 3EPHCY), the Australian-based industrial group whose U.S. operations include Spice Islands spices, Fleischmann's yeast and Fermtec antibiotics, today announced a record profit of Australian $106 million (approximately U.S.$83 million) during the fiscal year ending June 30.

Andrew Turnbull, managing director and chief executive, said the equity-accounted net profit before extraordinary items represented a 6 percent increase over the previous year. It was the seventh consecutive year of record profit.

Burns Philp shares, listed on the Australian Stock Exchange, are traded in the U.S. in the form of American Depositary Receipts (ADRs). The ADRs are quoted on the National Association of Securities Dealers' Electronic Bulletin Board (Symbol: 3EPHCY), and traded in the Pink Sheets. One ADR equals six Burns Philp shares.

Strong North American Food Operations

"Good results were recorded in our North American food businesses including Spice Islands and Dromedary. Worldwide yeast operations generally reported increased profits, as did bacterial products such as Nisin, a preservative used mainly in the dairy and canning industries," said Turnbull.

"The overall results were particularly pleasing, given the negative effect of lower prices in the North American baker's yeast market during the year and the failure of the antibiotics business to meet expectations," he noted.

"In Australia, the hardware division finished the year with another fine profit increase, and our Pacific Islands businesses also performed strongly."

Due to low prices and environmental restraints on the production of antibiotics in Italy, a major restructuring of that business has been undertaken.

Group earnings before net interest and taxes were $168 million on sales, up 12 percent to $2,144 billion. Higher net interest, up 20 percent to $61 million, was (a result of acquisitions and the group's capital works programs), but was party offset by a reduction in tax.

"The tax situation continues to benefit from the utilization of past tax losses, significant local tax incentives and other deductions available to some of our international operations. Corporate tax rates applicable to subsidiaries operating outside Australia were also generally lower than the standard Australian rate," Turnbull said.

Net abnormal items of $36 million loss were mainly attributable to the write-down of plant and equipment at the Milan and Westchester antibiotics plants.

Reflecting the difficulties experienced by reduced prices in the Fermtec antibiotics business and reduced prices, for most of the year, in the U.S. baker's yeast market, the Food and Fermentation Division's profit after tax held steady at $58 million, on sales up two percent to $810 million.

Strong performances by the BBC hardware retail chain and the builders merchants group, Benchmark Australia, and Traversi Jones contributed to the record result. The Tradelink and McIlwraith plumbing supplies businesses held profitability in declining market conditions, and Benchmark New Zealand achieved a small increase in profit.

Since year-end the hardware division has strengthened its network of builders supplies stores with the acquisition of a further 15 more timber and hardware outlets in Australia. The division now has 275 outlets trading throughout Australia and New Zealand.

A stable political environment and consequent improved economic conditions in Fiji and excellent returns from the shipping and automotive businesses in Papua New Guinea boosted the Pacific Island operations to record results.

QBE Insurance Group (46 percent owned) achieved a record after tax profit of $47 million despite the unprecedented number and severity of natural disasters which adversely affected the Australian and international insurance markets. The contribution to Burns Philp was $21.7 million, last year $20.1 million.

Final dividend is 7.5 cents per share franked to 25 percent taking the total dividend for the year to 15.5 cents. This is an 8 percent increase on the previous 14.3 cents payout (adjusted for the 1 : 10 bonus in November 1989).

Commenting on the outlook for Burns Philp, Turnbull said, "Current trading conditions in our major markets are difficult with varying effects on our business. Both the trade and retail sectors of the hardware business in Australia experienced low levels of activity in July and August. However, the North American food businesses are benefiting from a more stable yeast market and improved prices and our growing yeast interests in Europe are performing well.

"Nevertheless, with the present adverse economic climate in Australia and the uncertainties in international markets, I am cautious of predicting any material improvement in our results for the first half of this year," Turnbull said.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Kettle Restaurants Inc. announced that the net profit for the quarter ended Aug. 2, 1990 was $130,000 or 11 cents per share compared with net profit for the quarter ended July 27, 1989 of $313,000 or 28 cents per share. The net profit for the three quarters ended Aug. 2, 1990 was $448,000 or 39 cents per share compared with a net profit for the three quarters ended July 27, 1989 of $695,000 or 61 cents per share.

Total revenues increased 20.1 percent to $13,028,000 for the quarter and increased 11.3 percent to $35,427,000 for the three quarters ended Aug. 2, 1990 compared to the same periods the prior year. These increases were, in part, due to an increase in company-operated restaurant revenues of 21.4 percent to $9,268,000 and 13.9 percent to $23,938,000, respectively, for the quarter and three quarters ended Aug. 2, 1990 compared to the same periods the prior year. Weighted average sales per restaurant increased 8.8 percent and 8.4 percent, respectively, for the quarter and three quarters ended Aug. 2, 1990, compared to the same periods the prior year. Also, industrial catering revenues were $614,000 in the quarter ended Aug. 2, 1990 compared to amounts billed in the comparable period the prior year which results in a cumulative increase to $1,832,000 for the three quarters ended Aug. 2, 1990 compared to $1,184,000 the prior year.

The company implemented a new menu in its company-operated and franchised stores during the third quarter, herein reported. The new menu is expanded to eight pages and has a significant focus on the many choices available for lunch and dinner. While a Kettle restaurant has always been well known for its breakfast selections and "all you care to eat" breakfast and fruit bars available at most locations, the new menu contains aprroximately 80 colorful plate photographs that demonstrate the variety of selections available for lunch and dinner. Specifically, an appetizer section and a new soup and sandwich "Express Lunch," which is guaranteed to be served in 10 minutes, have been added. Also, the senior citizen and dessert sections have been enhanced in concept and price.

The company believes the expanded menu reflects the changing demands of today's family restaurant customer based upon a review of customer comments and competitive direction in its market. The menu is expected to appeal to a broader base of customers, particularly senior citizens and teenagers. The company believes that the new menu pricing, which reflects an average price increase of approximately 8 percent, has contributed to the increase in restaurant revenues for the quarter and three quarters ended Aug. 2, 1990.

The company presently has no current expansion plans and does not anticipate adding any units to the system during the current fiscal year.

Kettle Restaurants Inc. is principally engaged in the operation and franchising of 24-hour, full-service, family-oriented restaurants. The restaurants offer a wide selection of moderately priced menu items for all meal periods. Kettle and its franchisees operate 184 restaurants in 17 states primarily in the Sunbelt region.

IRVINE, CA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - As part of an ongoing plan to improve the efficiency of its business, Allergan, Inc., (NYSE: AGN) announced today that the Allergan Optical division will close its Woodbury, N.Y., contact lens manufacturing facility in 1991 and transfer these operations to Allergan facilities in Waco, Texas and Irvine.

This transition will affect approximately 280 New York based employees. The net reduction in headcount for this manufacturing consolidation will be 70 employees. Last year, Allergan Optical consolidated its European contact lens manufacturing operations into one plant in the U.K.

"This move is consistent with our stated corporate objectives to control operating costs and streamline our business operations," said Bill Shepherd, chief operating officer of Allergan. "Costs associated with consolidation were previously accrued by Allergan," added Shepherd.

Contact lens functions moving to the Waco facility include manufacturing, manufacturing engineering, distribution, materials, quality assurance, cost accounting and returned goods. Responsibility for customer service, research and development and related administrative responsibilities will be relocated to Irvine. These same functions already exist in Waco and Irvine for Allergan's contact lens care business.

As a result of streamlining its business throughout the year, Allergan Optical has reduced its U.S. non-manufacturing work force by 19 percent.

Allergan, Inc. is comprised of six business units: Allergan Pharmaceuticals -- prescription and nonprescription eye care products; Allergan Optical -- contact lenses and lens care products; Allergan Medical Optics -- surgical ophthalmic products and services; Allergan Humphrey -- microprocessor-based ophthalmic diagnostic instruments; Herbert Laboratories -- prescription and nonprescription skin care medications; and Allergan International, which markets Allergan products in more than 90 countries around the world.

Allergan employs over 6,500 people worldwide, and is headquartered in Irvine.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The Christian Action Council (CAC), which on Aug. 8, announced a boycott of corporate supporters of Planned Parenthood, today challenged the Dayton Hudson Corporation, Planned Parenthood and the media to tell the whole story when speaking to the media about grants made to Planned Parenthood.

"Planned Parenthood and the media have given the impression that scores of abortion-rights supporters have threatened to boycott Dayton Hudson for its decision to stop its funding for Planned Parenthood," said Douglas R. Scott, director of public policy for the CAC and founder of the project to end corporate support for Planned Parenthood. "The fact is that letters and telephone calls to Dayton Hudson have run essentially even between those who support the corporate decision and those who oppose it." Scott cited a radio program on WWCM (Detroit) during which Ann Barkelew, spokesman for Dayton Hudson, acknowledged that response to its decision has been virtually even.

"While the public reaction has been even, Planned Parenthood, other abortion-rights groups and the media have acted as though there's this massive negative response -- a universally negative response -- to the Dayton Hudson decision," Scott said. "Nothing could be further from the truth."

Scott, who expects Dayton Hudson to announce that it will resume Planned Parenthood funding any day now, also said Dayton Hudson, Planned Parenthood and the media have refused to address the real issues. "They are trying to reshape the debate to appear victims instead of facing the issues straight on. Just like a politician who has been caught in a debate he cannot win, these spokesman are choosing to ignore the issues and change the subject."

Scott said that Dayton Hudson and Planned Parenthood have emphasized that "only one" Planned Parenthood clinic in Minnesota performs abortions and that Dayton Hudson's donations are not for abortions. "We know that," Scott said. "We've said over-and-over again, we know that. The point is that every Planned Parenthood affiliate is bound by national Planned Parenthood policy to participate in abortion rights advocacy and to either perform or refer for abortions. Every Planned Parenthood, regardless of its place in the international organization, have the same agenda." Scott noted that Faye Wattleton, president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, has urged that all Planned Parenthood affiliates offer abortion services. He also pointed out that any support for Planned Parenthood releases unrestricted funds for abortion and abortion advocacy. "For some reason, the media doesn't want to print these facts," Scott said.

Scott said that attempts to paint the CAC as a "fringe" group acting alone are not only attempts to evade the issues, they are simply untrue. "Once again, if you cannot deal with the issues, you attack those who raise the issues," Scott said. "The truth is that virtually every national pro-life and pro-family organization has joined the CAC in its call for a boycott of corporate supporters of Planned Parenthood." Scott notes that most of these groups were represented at the Aug. 8 press conference.

The Christian Action Council (CAC) is the nation's largest Protestant pro-life organization. Based in the greater Washington area, the CAC was founded in 1975 and has more than 500 local affiliate organizations throughout the United States and Canada.

MOUNT LAUREL, NJ (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Tyco Toys, Inc. (NASDAQ: TTOY) and Nasta International, Inc. (AMEX: NAS) today jointly announced that Tyco has agreed to increase its tender offer for any and all shares of Nasta common stock to $1.25 per share in cash, including shares already tendered, and extended the offer until Oct. 3, 1990.

Tyco and Nasta said they have entered into a definitive merger agreement which was approved unanimously by the boards of both companies. The merger agreement assures that, subject to the terms and conditions of the merger agreement, Nasta common shares not purchased in the tender offer will be converted in a merger following the tender offer into the right to receive the same $1.25 per share in cash, subject to dissenters' rights to appraisal.

Tyco and Nasta also announced that they had reached an agreement in principle to settle three purported class actions based on the increase in price, the merger agreement, and an agreement to pay certain attorneys' fees and expenses. The agreement in principle is subject to certain conditions, including court approval.

As of Sept. 17, 1990, 607,965 shares had been tendered pursuant to the original tender offer, and if that number of shares were purchased in the tender offer, Tyco's stake in Nasta would increase to 86 percent. Tyco presently owns 74 percent of Nasta.

The offer is not conditioned upon any minimum number of shares being tendered.

Tyco and Nasta also stated that additional tender offer material containing information in connection with the increased offer and the merger agreement will be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and sent to Nasta stockholders shortly.

WALTHAM, MASS. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Cabot Corporation (NYSE: CBT) announced today that the United States Maritime Administration ("MARAD"), companies of the Royal Dutch/Shell Group ("Shell"), units of the Argent group of companies ("Argent"), and units of Cabot Corporation ("Cabot"), agreed to settle a dispute concerning the disposition and ownership of three LNG tankers the ARZEW, SOUTHERN and GAMMA, which MARAD had repossessed from subsidiaries of the El Paso Corporation.

The key provisions of the settlement are as follows: -- All litigation among the parties will be dismissed with prejudice. -- The GAMMA will be sold to Cabot, which will enter into a long- term time charter with Nigeria LNG Ltd., on a half-yearly basis, following the start-up of the Nigerian LNG project. Cabot will have free use of the GAMMA at all other times.

-- The ARZEW and SOUTHERN will be sold to Argent, which will enter into long-term time charters for both vessels with Shell.

-- The total purchase price paid to MARAD for each vessel will be $18.1 million, which includes options fees already paid to MARAD.

-- By agreement with MARAD, the vessels will undergo refurbishment in United States shipyards, and will receive on-going maintenance and repairs in the United States.

-- Also by agreement with MARAD, the vessels will be dedicated to the LNG trade between the United States and foreign countries.

Samuel W. Bodman, chairman and CEO of Cabot Corporation and Cabot LNG Corporation, indicated Cabot plans to use the GAMMA for service between Algeria and Boston, and between Nigeria and the United States.

Bodman commented, "The settlement promises the earliest possible return to service of the vessels for their intended purpose: delivering LNG to the East Coast of the United States and promoting the development of the United States flag fleet. In addition, the settlement is a significant event for Cabot and energy consumers in New England. By acquiring the GAMMA, we have enhanced our reliability and expanded our capacity to serve the energy requirements of the entire northeastern United States."

Cabot Corporation is a Fortune 300 Company, headquartered in Waltham, Mass., with operations in specialty chemicals and materials, and energy.

LAKE MARY, FLA. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Stromberg-Carlson announced today that its United Kingdom parent, GPT, has signed a purchase agreement in which British Telecom could buy digital System X exchanges from GPT worth up to almost $1.9 billion.

This agreement covers the purchase of up to 6.5 million or more lines of System X during the next two years, and covers the full range of the System X public exchange switching equipment, including local and trunk exchanges. Orders already placed under the agreement will add a further 2.7 million lines to British Telecom's rapidly expanding network of local System X exchanges.

GPT expects total sales of its System X exchanges to British Telecom to exceed $4.5 billion by the end of next year.

Over the last four years an intensive installation program has brought the number of operational System X exchanges worldwide to over 2,500. Nearly half of the British Telecom U.K. network now uses the system, and by the end of March 1992, British Telecom estimates that there will be more than 14 million digital lines of System X in service.

Barrie Lawson, group director of GPT Telecommunications Systems, said: "British Telecom has long identified System X as one of the best digital switches in the world. Its confidence in the equipment and its sophisticated software has been continually proven by the placement of further contracts under an ongoing agreement.

"GPT has constantly improved the system, with new developments being incorporated into operational equipment without loss of service. Both business and residential customers are gaining increasingly more value from their telecommunications, as well as a range of new facilities.

"System X developments currently include advanced intelligent networks, mobility on the fixed network, Centrex, ISDN, voice messaging, voice guidance and a large variety of custom calling features. GPT is also participating with British Telecom in its Bishop's Stortford trial, which will bring fiber optics into the home."

GPT is a global telecommunications company operating in major world markets. It is successful in many national and regional equipment telecommunications markets worldwide, with complete knowledge of local standards and procedures. GPT is also the parent of Stromberg-Carlson, the third leading supplier of digital central office lines in the United States with an installed base of over 3 million lines.

SALT LAKE CITY, (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Bonneville Pacific Corp. (NASDAQ: BPCO), reported first quarter revenues of $28,909,000 resulting in a loss of $1,105,000 or 9 cents per share based on 12,845,093 weighted average number of shares outstanding.

Revenues for the first quarter of the prior year totalled $9,954,000 and resulted in a loss of $1,306,000 or 10 cents per share based on 12,892,382 average shares outstanding.

According to Robert L. Wood, chairman of the board, the results for the first quarter were expected. Bonneville typically has had uneven quarter to quarter earnings and this trend could continue in the near future until the company accomplishes its stated long-term goals of predictable, recurring revenues. Bonneville expects to accomplish these goals by building larger facilities and retaining significant ownership interests in such facilities.

Bonneville currently has five major electric generating facility projects under development with a total estimated capacity of approximately 290 megawatts.

CHICAGO, (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Oil-Dri Corporation of America (NASDAQ: OILC) today reported record sales of $94,192,000 for the year ended July 31, 1990, an increase of 14 percent over last year's sales of $82,596,000. Net income for the year, also a record, was $7,048,000, up 25 percent over the $5,643,000 earned in 1989. Earnings per share were $1.00 versus $.81 for last fiscal year.

Fourth quarter sales were $23,570,000, up 14 percent over the $20,759,000 reported for the same period a year ago. Net earnings were $1,775,000, a 43 percent increase over the $1,240,000 earned last year. Earnings per share were $0.25 for the quarter, as compared to $0.18 for the same period a year ago.

In July 1990 the company adopted SFAS No. 96 "Accounting for Income Taxes" issued by the Financial Accounting Standards Board. The cumulative effect of this accounting change increased net income for the fiscal year ended July 31, 1990 by $160,000 or $.02 per share. First quarter earnings were restated to reflect this change.

Commenting on the results for the year and the quarter, Richard M. Jaffee, Oil-Dri's president, stated, "Increased earnings are the result of improved margins, increased sales of value added products, and continued control of promotional spending and administrative costs. We have made significant progress on our strategic goals.

"The consumer products division had excellent sales for the year. Cat's Pride(R) Premium, Oil-Dri's branded product, is the category's fastest growing cat litter. The success of the marketing plan behind Cat's Pride has increased sales and profits for the division.

"Control(see note) and Fresh Step(see note) Cat Litters, manufactured for The Clorox Co., also performed well for the year. Fresh Step held firm as the second best selling cat litter in the category, and Control expanded its sales and distribution during the year.

"A major contributor to the increased sales of the fourth quarter were the new Lite Sorbents made from polypropylene. With the purchase of Industrial Environmental Products Inc. (IEP) in April 1990, a merging of Oil-Dri's existing distributors with those of IEP began. The results have been quite successful, bringing Oil-Dri into the environmental spill response sorbents business.

"Another contribution to sales and profits was the expansion of domestic shipments of Pure-Flo(R) and the reopening of the bleaching clay market in Malaysia. After negotiations with appropriate government officials in Malaysia, some trade restrictions have been lifted and shipments at the end of the fourth quarter were very strong.

"Oil-Dri has entered the '90s with an aggressive plan to increase profitability, improve quality and service, and accelerate new product development. The company continues to increase sales of value added branded technical products. This strategy will help us attain our short-term goal to rebuild margins while contributing to our long-term goal to develop a larger, more sophisticated and profitable company.

"Looking forward to the upcoming year, we are mindful of developments in the Middle East and the potential impact on energy costs and the general economy. However, with continued focus on our goals for the '90s, we foresee exciting opportunities to accomplish our business objectives of defining and meeting the needs of the markets we serve."

Oil-Dri Corporation of America is a leader in developing, manufacturing and marketing sorbent technologies for consumer, agricultural, specialty and industrial applications. The corporation is headquartered at 520 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The Trustees of HRE Properties (NYSE: HRE) declared a quarterly dividend of 45 cents per share at their regular meeting today. The dividend was declared at the same rate as the previous quarter and represents the 84th consecutive quarterly dividend since the trust began operations in 1969. It is payable Oct. 23, 1990, to shareholders of record Sept. 28, 1990.

Charles J. Urstadt, chairman and chief executive officer, said "Today's difficult real estate market and uncertain outlook for the economy make it prudent that we provide for contingencies and for future growth. Beginning in fiscal 1991, the Trustees expect to declare dividends at levels not exceeding the trust's funds from operations taking into account historic and expected fiscal results. HRE believes funds from operations to be the most significant indicator of the trust's performance." Urstadt noted that cumulative dividends of $1.15 per share paid during the first three quarters of 1990 exceeded funds from operations by about 10 cents per share so far in fiscal 1990.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Edward P. Gould, chairman of Trust Company of Georgia and Trust Company Bank, Atlanta, has announced a plan providing for six Trust Company Banks in the metropolitan Atlanta market to become divisions of the Atlanta bank.

The plan is subject to formal approval by the boards of the Atlanta bank and the banks in Carroll, Clayton, Cobb, Gwinnett, Henry and Rockdale counties. This will also require approval of bank regulatory authorities.

"Metropolitan Atlanta continues to be the most attractive of the larger metropolitan areas served by SunTrust Banks Inc.," Gould said. "We believe that bringing all of our metro Atlanta operations under one umbrella will allow us to serve the total market more effectively and with great efficiency. We are convinced this will produce economies of scale and will benefit our customers."

Gould explained that each division will have its own divisional president and advisory board. He noted that SunTrust (NYSE: STI), the parent holding company of Trust Company, has had excellent experience in establishing similar divisional structures at seven other banks in Georgia and at several others in Florida and Tennessee.

The division presidents will report to Tom Morris, who has headed Trust Company Bank of Gwinnett County. Morris will report to Charles B. Ginden, executive vice president of the Atlanta bank.

HARRISBURG, PA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Columbia Gas of Pennsylvania was granted a 3.8 percent general revenue increase today by the Public Utility Commission (PUC) but Columbia said only cold weather, not higher rates, will raise customers' bills this winter.

In fact, overall gas bills could even decline, said Columbia Gas of Pennsylvania President Gary J. Robinson.

Robinson explained that the reason the general rate increase will not translate into higher bills is that Columbia has reduced its costs of purchasing gas for customers.

Today's change in the base rate portion of customers' bills covers costs for Columbia operations other than the cost of buying gas. The reduction in purchased gas costs was approved last week by the PUC.

As a result of today's decision, the overall bill of the average Columbia customer, based on usage of 10,000 cubic feet of gas a month on an annual basis, will be $60.89, reflecing the gas cost reduction and the general rate change. This compares to the current average bill of $60.93.

The new rate levels will be reflected simultaneously in customer bills starting early in October.

"It's significant that our residential service rates will still be about 11 percent lower than they were in September 1984," Robinson said.

HONOLULU, HI. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - In a move aimed at further expediting car-rental service for inter-island business travelers, Hertz has unveiled "Hertz Islander Service." The new, faster service, exclusive for Hawaii residents, eliminates lines, waiting and rental agreements to sign. A pre-printed rental agreement is already waiting in the rental car even before the business renter arrives. The renter's initial signature on the Hertz Islander Service enrollment agreement is the only one required.

Hertz Islander Service is available at major airports in Hawaii- Honolulu, Kahului, Lihue, Hilo, Kona, Princeville, and West Maui.

The business renter just shows driver's license at any Hertz Islander Service counter or on-board any Hertz courtesy shuttle bus and picks up rental car keys. When the car is returned, the renter just fills in the pre-printed rental agreement and drops it off in the conveniently located Express Return box.

To qualify for Hertz Islander Service, a business renter becomes a Hertz No. 1 Club Gold member. The first annual Hertz No. 1 Club Gold membership fee is waived.

If customers sign up for Hertz Islander Service before Oct. 31, they receive:

-- A free additional weekend day coupon when customer pays for one day of weekend rental.

-- 1,000 bonus miles on United Mileage Plus for joining and 500 bonus miles with every qualifying rental.

-- In-car, pre-printed rental agreements. -- Kamaaina rates -- special low rates available to Hawaii residents only -- both in Hawaii and on the mainland.

For reservations and information, Hawaii residents can call their travel agent or the special Hertz Islander Service toll-free number, 1-800-654-8200. With Hertz Islander Service, reservations can be made in as little as two hours in advance.

Hertz, the world's largest car-rental company, is represented in more than 5,000 locations in over 120 countries.

MINNEAPOLIS (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Cargill today announced plans to open representative offices in Moscow and Warsaw as a preparatory step to making investments in the Soviet Union and Poland.

Cargill has had trading relationships with the two countries for more than 25 years, but has no physical presence there.

Juels Carlson, president of Cargill's Minneapolis-based worldwide molasses operations since July 1987, will head the Moscow office. Edgar T. Savidge will manage the Warsaw office. He formerly was account manager of Cargill's soybean processing plant in Liverpool, England.

Carlson joined Cargill in 1965 and, while in charge of the company's Tokyo office from 1983 to 1987, was responsible for broad-based business activities in Japan, South Korea and Taiwan. For two years prior to that, he was manager of the Oils, Oilseeds and Meals Department of Cargill International S.A. in Geneva, Switzerland, which handles much of the trading with the U.S.S.R.

Before going to Liverpool in 1986, Savidge held various management and merchandising positions in Cargill's domestic soybean processing and cattle-feeding operations. He also worked in the Geneva office in 1973-74 merchandising soybean meal. Savidge joined Cargill in 1970.

The Warsaw office is scheduled to open Oct. 1, followed by the Moscow office in early 1991.

Leonard Alderson, chairman of Cargill International S.A., will supervise the new offices in Moscow and Warsaw.

Cargill's trading involvement with the U.S.S.R. has centered on Soviet imports of grains, oilseeds and oilseed products from worldwide origins. In addition, Cargill has sold the Russians frozen concentrated orange juice, sugar, cotton, cocoa, coffee, malt and rubber.

Cargill's annual sales of grain, oilseeds and oilseed products to the Soviet Union over the past 15 years have ranged between 4 and 8.5 million metric tons Alderson said.

Cargill also participates in the Soviet export of crude oil, petroleum products and fertilizer, and purchases ocean-shipping services from the U.S.S.R. On some occasions the value of these purchases from the Soviets has exceeded Cargill's comparable annual dollar sales to the Soviet Union, Alderson said.

Cargill's commercial relationships with Poland include more than 25 years of grain and soybean meal sales and extensive chartering of ocean vessels. In some years, Alderson said, the volume of this activity has exceeded 3 million metric tons.

Alderson said Cargill and Polish companies also have engaged in large counter-trade transactions that involved -- in addition to items that Cargill normally trades -- Polish imports such as tea, lemons, meat, personal computers and videotapes.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Oregon Resources Corp. is pleased to report that the 1990 exploration program at the Flat Gold property in Alaska is progressing on schedule. A diamond core rig arrived on site in early July and is currently drilling 24 hours a day. Exploration is focused on the Chicken Mountain stock, a very large mozonite intrusive which hosts widespread gold mineralization. Streams draining the Chicken Mountain intrusive have produced over 1.5 million documented ounces of placer gold, making the Flat Mining district the sixth richest placer area in Alaska.

Work to date has outlined a very large soil and trench gold geochemical anomaly, centered on Chicken Mountain. The anomaly is over 8,000 feet long and up to 500 feet wide. A significant portion of the anomaly contains gold values between 500 ppb (0.015 ounce per ton gold) and 1000 ppb (0.030 ounce per ton gold) with coincident anomalous mercury, arsenic and antimony values.

The 1990 exploration program for the 128 square mile property is being managed by the Fairbanks Gold Ltd. exploration team. The U.S. $600,000 program includes geologic mapping, geochemical sampling, extensive trenching and approximately 10,000 feet of diamond core drilling.

A summary of field work carried out in 1988 and 1989 is currently being compiled and will be released shortly. Results from the 1990 trenching and drilling program will also be forthcoming.

MINNEAPOLIS (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - BMC Industries, Inc. (NYSE: BMC) today announced that it anticipates a loss of approximately 25 cents per share for its third quarter ending Sept. 30, 1990. BMC also stated that in spite of anticipated record fourth quarter earnings, its 1990 calendar year net earnings are expected to be approximately 15 percent lower than 1989 earnings.

Robert J. Carlson, BMC's CEO, stated, "Experience has shown us that each new state-of-the-art color television aperture mask we introduced into the production cycle brought with it unique manufacturing problems requiring numerous process changes before achieving acceptable yield and quality levels.

During the third quarter we executed a complete upgrade of all the manufacturing lines in our Cortland, New York aperture mask plant. This refurbishment incorporated many of the process improvements called for in producing state-of-the-art masks.

This upgrade program also required more time than originally anticipated, resulting in a significant reduction in manufacturing days available to us, with a concomitant loss of earnings for the period.

Our optimistic view of the fourth quarter is based on the very successful production of difficult aperture mask designs since the refurbishment was completed, as well as a full order book for Cortland aperture masks for the balance of the year."

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Kent Kresa, Northrop Corporation (NYSE: NOC) president and chief executive officer, today was elected chairman of the board.

Kresa, 52, succeeds Thomas V. Jones, 70, who is retiring as chairman. Kresa retains his responsibilities as president and chief executive officer. Jones will remain a member of the board.

Jones, who turned 70 this summer, retired as chief executive officer last year and has not been active in the management of the company since then. He said his retirement now from the responsibilties of chairman was made possible by the smooth evolution that has taken place within the company since Kent Kresa took over as chief executive officer.

"You have clearly established your leadership of the company, and you have gained the confidence of the Northrop employees, the board of directors, our customers and the defense community," Jones told Kresa. "The time has come now to complete the orderly transition of Northrop's top leadership."

Kresa served as president and chief operating officer of Northrop from 1987 and became chief executive officer in January, 1990. During that period, Kresa undertook a widespread program to reduce costs and improve the company's efficiency and operating performance by consolidating and streamlining the operations of several of Northrop's divisions and resource centers. By the end of the year total Northrop employment will be about 38,000 people, down about 20 percent from 1987. The number of corporate officers and staff vice presidents has been cut 25 percent in the last year alone, part of a gradual transition in which 60 percent of the senior corporate executives have retired or have left the company since 1987.

Despite the contraction in the defense business, at the end of the second quarter Northrop reported a business backlog of $6.5 billion, the largest in its history. The company expects sales this year to be about the same as last year's $5.2 billion.

"For more than three decades, Jones played an enormous role in building this company and establishing the tradition for technical excellence that earned us the responsibilities of prime contractor for programs such as the B-2 bomber and the YF-23 Advanced Tactical Fighter, both now in the midst of successful flight validation programs," said Kresa.

"With the talents and dedication and integrity of the men and women in this company today," he said, "Northrop will continue to make even greater contributions to our country's defense and its world leadership in aerospace in the decades ahead of us."

Jones joined Northrop in 1953 as assistant to the chief engineer. In 1958 he was named senior vice president-Development Planning. He was elected president in 1959, chief executive officer in 1960 and chairman of the board in 1963. He retired as chief executive officer at the end of 1989.

Kresa joined Northrop in 1975 as vice president and general manager of the Northrop Research and Technology Center.

From 1976 to 1982 he was corporate vice president and general manager of the Ventura Division, a leader in the design, development and production of unmanned aeronautical vehicles.

He was vice president of Northrop's Aircraft Group from 1982 until being elected senior vice president in March 1986, and subsequently president and chief operating officer in February, 1987.

Before he joined Northrop, Kresa served with the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA).

NEW YORK, (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Baldwin Securities Corporation (AMEX: BAL) announced today that the company experienced a net loss for the six month period ended June 30, 1990 of $368,000 ($.17 per share) a decrease of approximately $941,000 from the net income of $573,000 ($.27 per share) reported for the six month period ended June 30, 1989.

The company reported total operating revenues of approximately $421,000, a decrease of approximately $806,000 (65.7 percent) from the total operating revenues reported for the six month period ended June 30, 1989, and total expenses of approximately $807,000, a decrease of $680,000 (45.7 percent) from the total expenses reported for the six month period ended June 30, 1989. The net loss for the six month period ended June 30, 1990, as compared to the net income for the comparable ended June 30, 1989, is primarily attributable to the company's receipt during 1989 of $843,000 in interest on a federal tax refund combined with the reduction in interest income due to the contraction of the company's loan portfolio.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Bank South (NASDAQ: BKSO) will announce tomorrow the launch of Kroger Cash II, which will provide Bank South checking and savings customers with a 5 percent discount on groceries purchased at participating Kroger stores through the end of 1991.

The savings are achieved through the purchase of Kroger Cash II certificates which are sold for $19 but are redeemable for $20 worth of groceries. The certificates are the same size as "real" $20 bills and are available at any of over 90 Bank South offices located throughout metro Atlanta, Conyers, Macon or Warner Robins.

Kroger Cash II will also be available 24 hours a day at 47 Bank South automated teller machines (ATMs) located in metro Atlanta Kroger stores.

Bank South was awarded a Gold Reggie, the top award from the Promotion Marketing Association of America, for the original Kroger Cash promotion which was executed in 1989. Kroger Cash II, which will last more than twice as long as the original eight-month Kroger Cash promotion, will be supported by radio, newspaper, direct mail and collateral advertising. McCann-Erickson, Atlanta is the advertising agency for Bank South.

Kroger Cash II is redeemable for purchases in Kroger stores, including items from the pharmacy, but excluding alcohol and tobacco products. The certificates may be used in conjunction with manufacturers' coupons to obtain even deeper discounts.

Beindorff said Kroger Cash II enhances Bank South's strategy of providing unique and convenient services, such as seven-day banking until 8 p.m. in metro Atlanta Kroger stores and access to the state's largest cash machine network of 242 ATMs.

Bank South is an Atlanta-based $5.5 billion multi-bank holding company with offices throughout Georgia and the Florida panhandle.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Martin D. Payson, vice chairman and general counsel of Time Warner Inc. (NYSE: TWX), will devote his full time and attention to serve the corporation as vice chairman working with Time Warner's co-chief executive officers and, in that connection, will relinquish his responsibilities as general counsel, the company announced today. Peter R. Haje, a senior corporate partner with Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison will become executive vice president and general counsel of Time Warner, reporting to Time Warner's co-CEOs.

These changes in executive responsibilities, which take effect Oct. 1, were approved by the Time Warner board of directors and announced today by Steven J. Ross, Time Warner chairman and co-CEO, and N.J. Nicholas Jr., president and co-CEO.

Payson, 54, currently is one of two vice chairmen of Time Warner Inc. Beginning as Warner Communications Inc.'s (WCI) general counsel in 1970, he also became vice president in 1972, senior vice president in 1979 and executive vice president in 1982. He was elected to the WCI board in 1976. Prior to the merger of Time Inc. and WCI, he was a member of WCI's office of the president, in addition to general counsel. Payson is active in many organizations and currently serves as co- chairman of the entertainment division of the United Jewish Appeal/Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York; a director of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund; a director of the Legal Aid Society of New York; a trustee of Howard University and a member of The President's Council of Tulane University.

Payson was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and received an A.B. from Cornell University (1957) and an LL.B., cum laude, from New York University (1961). He and his wife Dottie reside in Long Island, N.Y.

Peter Haje, the new Time Warner general counsel, joined Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison in 1960 and became a partner in 1969. Among his many professional accomplishments, he played a major legal and strategic role during the 1970s fiscal crisis in New York City helping to create the Municipal Assistance Corporation.

Haje was born July 31, 1934 in Jamaica, Queens. He graduated from Cornell University with an A.B. (1955) and has an LL.B. (1960) from Harvard Law School. He and his wife Helen reside in New York City.

IRVINE, CALIF. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Western Digital Corp. (AMEX: WDC) today announced its WDAB130 and WDAH260, a pair of AT- compatible, 2.5-inch, intelligent disk drives. The WDAB130 and WDAH260 are the industry's first 30- and 60-megabyte 2.5-inch disk drives.

The WDAB130 features a formatted capacity of 31.5 megabytes with a 19 millisecond average seek time. At 0.6 inches (15.24 millimeters) in height and 144 grams in weight, it is the industry's lightest, lowest profile 2.5-inch drive. The WDAH260 features a formatted capacity of 62.9 megabytes with a 19 millisecond average seek time. With double the capacity of the WDAB130, the WDAH260 is 0.75 inches (19 millimeters) in height and 160 grams in weight.

Ideally suited for today's more powerful laptop and notebook- sized personal computers, evaluation units of both drives will be available in the fourth calendar quarter, 1990, with volume production slated in the first calendar quarter, 1991. Prices for evaluation units are $325 for the WDAB130 and $495 for the WDAH260.

"These new drives are interarchitected with our WD7600LP systems chipset, designed for 80286- or 80386SX-laptop and notebook personal computers, to provide our customers with a full-featured, 100 percent AT-compatible system solution," said Kathryn A. Braun, executive vice president, Western Digital Corp. "Through interachitecture (TM), we design our chips, intelligent disk drives and subsystems in concert to provide original equipment manufacturers with a complete, tested system solution with increased system performance."

"Initial product acceptance of our 2.5-inch disk drives is strong among the leading laptop and notebook personal computer manufacturers who are now designing their next generation machines," said Arif Shakeel, vice president of storage products. Shakeel noted that in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1990, Western Digital shipped 1.8 million 3.5-inch intelligent drives representing $391 million in revenue, to achieve one of the leading positions in the 3.5-inch market.

Western Digital Corp., headquartered in Irvine, is a multinational company that designs, develops, manufactures and markets semiconductors, subsystems and intelligent disk drives for original equipment manufacturers and resellers which serve the microcomputer industry.

HIGH POINT, N.C. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Roy T. Mitchell, President of LADD's American of Martinsville residential casegoods division, announced today that Dave Scarangella has been appointed National Sales Manager and Nancy Gordon has been appointed Manager of Administration of the retail division.

Commenting on the promotion, Mitchell said, "Both Dave and Nancy have done an excellent job of strengthening American of Martinsville's residential casegoods and occasional product line and enhancing the company's reputation throughout the U.S. and Canada. Despite general furniture industry sluggishness during the past year, the company has continued to increase its sales and earnings, which is a real tribute to their contribution to the overall team effort."

Scarangella's promotion to National Sales Manager will require more involvement and reponsibilities in expanding the American of Martinsville line with major accounts both on a national and regional basis. He joined American of Martinsville in March of 1989, working in the areas of sales management, advertising and administration. Scarangella has been in the furniture industry since 1986, working for 2 1/2 years as casegoods editor for "Furniture Today." Scarangella is a 1978 graduate of Virginia Tech, and earned an M.B.A. from UNC-Greensboro in 1989.

In addition to the responsibility for customer service, Gordon will assume the responsibilty for inventory planning/control and for sales planning and forecasting. She has 20 years experience in all administrative areas of the furniture industry. During the past four years, Nancy has been Manager of Customer Service for American of Martinsville and has spent a total of 12 years with LADD Furniture, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: LADF).

American of Martinsville residential casegoods manufactures and markets upper medium-priced residential wood bedroom, dining room and occasional furniture and curio cabinets in a variety of highly styled designs. The company is headquartered in High Point, N.C., with manufacturing operations in Martinsville, Va. LADD's other major furniture brand names include American Drew, Barclay, Brown Jordan, Clayton-Marcus, Daystrom, Design Horizons, Lea Industries and Pennsylvania House.

MINNEAPOLIS (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Mesaba Aviation, Inc. today received the Michigan Aeronautics Commission (MAC) annual Award of Excellence, which is given to an organization or individual whose contributions have led to significant improvements to aviation in Michigan.

Mesaba, a Minneapolis/St. Paul-based regional airline, was commended for expanding air service into eight Michigan communities. The airline operates as Northwest Airlink under an agreement with Northwest Airlines.

Mesaba has increased the number of flights to 74 daily departures in Michigan. The company has a statewide workforce of more than 340 employees which provided service to over 250,000 boarding and deplaning passengers from January to August 1990.

"Mesaba Airlines has proven it can accommodate the changing air service needs of Michigan residents," said Daniel Knopper, MAC chairman. "Through aggressive marketing and excellent service, the airline has made a tremendous difference in providing what Michigan air travelers need."

The airline serves passengers at Detroit Metro Airport, Kalamazoo, Pellston, Marquette, Houghton/Hancock, Muskegon, Flint and Traverse City.

HIGHLAND PARK, MI (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The Jeep(R)/Eagle Division of Chrysler Corporation (NYSE: C) today announced that two-time Formula One Champion and 1989 Indianapolis 500 winner Emerson Fittipaldi has signed an agreement to become a technical consultant for Jeep/Eagle.

"Emerson Fittipaldi's relationship will definitely be hands-on," said L.W. Baker, Jeep/Eagle Division general manager. "The performance evaluation and driving expertise he has acquired over his sensational racing career will be transferred to the street level particularly for new Eagle passenger cars.

"On top of that," he added, "his international style and flair are a perfect match for our target customers."

The Brazilian-born racing superstar will immediately assume his duties including evaluating, testing and consulting on all Jeep/Eagle products, both current and future.

"I see my role with the Jeep/Eagle Division as yet another challenge for myself," said Fittipaldi. "As a driving enthusiast, I consider a chance to influence the superb Eagle vehicles, especially a car like the Eagle Talon, and future Eagle vehicles a great opportunity."

Fittipaldi's automotive roots run deep. The son of famous racing journalist Wilson Fittipaldi, "Emmo," as he is nicknamed, began his racing career in 1963 at age 16, first on motorcycles and graduating to cars by 1965.

In 1967, Fittipaldi made his first mark on the racing world, winning the Brazilian Formula Vee Championship. Faster cars and international acclaim were just around the corner.

Promoted to Formula One racing in 1970 by Lotus team founder Colin Chapman, Fittipaldi, at age 23, became the world's youngest Formula One driver and just two years later became the youngest Formula One world champion.

After continued success in Formula One, including a second world title in 1974 Fittipaldi retired in 1980 only to return to racing in 1984 in the Indy Car series. Ultimate success in Fittipaldi's new racing venue was achieved in 1989 with his Indy 500 victory and the PPG Cup Indy Car title. With that title, Fittipaldi joined Mario Andretti as the only drivers ever to win Formula One and Indy Car world championships.

In 1990, Fittipaldi has earned more than $1 million for his Indy Car finishes, including almost $600,000 for placing third in the Indy 500, setting a new one-lap track record of 225.575 mph and winning the pole position.

Outside of actual racing, Fittipaldi is also the founder of the Miami-based Fittipaldi Motoring Accessories, Inc.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Viking Gas Transmission, a unit of Tenneco Gas, has announced its intention to accept the recent Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) order authorizing "open-access" transportation under Section 284 of the Commission's regulations. Such service will begin on Oct. 1.

Viking will accept and process requests for interruptible transportation service immediately. Requests for firm transportation service will be accepted beginning on Oct. 1, and a 10-day "open-season" for such firm service requests will extend until Oct. 10, 1990. After that, requests will be processed on a first-come, first-served basis.

Viking Gas Transmission encompasses nearly 500 miles of pipeline and eight compressor stations generating over 45,000 horsepower. The system -- one of only five gateways for Canadian gas -- extends from the United States/Canadian border near Emerson, Manitoba, through Minnesota to a terminus at an interconnection with ANR Pipeline Co. near Marshfield, Wis.

Tenneco Gas operates several open access pipelines in addition to Viking. The largest, Tennessee Gas Pipeline, has offered open-access transportation service since December 1986, and another, Midwestern Gas Transmission, has provided non-discriminatory service since October 1989.

Tenneco Gas is a division of Tenneco Inc. (NYSE: TGT), a diversified company with major business interests in natural gas pipelines, farm and construction equipment, shipbuilding, automotive parts, packaging, chemicals and minerals.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - American General Corp. (NYSE: AGC) today announced that the board of directors has authorized management to add a restructuring plan as an alternative to the current efforts to sell the company as a whole. This revises the sale process originally announced at the May 2, 1990 annual shareholders' meeting.

The restructuring plan would provide for the sale of the Home Service insurance companies--which account for over half of American General's current operating earnings--and the continuation of a publicly owned holding company composed of the remaining operations.

"There are four primary reasons for taking this action now," said Harold S. Hook, chairman and chief executive officer. "First, although we will continue in our efforts to sell the company as a whole, the interest shown thus far in the process has been primarily in the parts--particularly Home Service--and not in acquiring the entire company. Second, we believe that the new restructuring plan is the 'next-best' alternative to the sale of the company as a whole. Third, in order to implement this restructuring plan on a basis that is attractive both to potential buyers and American General shareholders, a number of steps involving the realignment of American General's businesses may be required. And finally, we believe that the current international and economic uncertainty has reduced the probability of completing a transaction of the size and complexity represented by the sale of the company as a whole."

The restructuring plan would require a favorable ruling from the Internal Revenue Service, as well as other federal and state regulatory approvals, which would take several months.

Currently, American General has three business segments: Insurance-Home Service, Insurance-Special Markets, and Finance/Real Estate.

American General's Home Service subsidiaries, which would be sold under the restructuring alternative, include those companies that concentrate on the selling and servicing of traditional insurance products directly through employee agents. These Home Service companies have assets of $8.9 billion, equity of $3 billion, and in 1989 generated earnings of $305 million.

The new American General would include the two remaining business segments, and on a pro forma basis would have assets of $24.9 billion, equity of $3.5 billion, and earned $235 million in 1989. The principal businesses of the new American General would include tax-qualified annuities sold through The Variable Annuity Life Insurance Co. (VALIC), consumer finance operations conducted by American General Finance, ordinary life insurance sold in niche markets through American General's ordinary life insurance subsidiaries, and real estate operations.

While the company is pursuing these alternatives vigorously, there can be no assurance at this time that this or any other alternative transaction can be consummated.

American General is an insurance and financial services organization with assets of $34 billion and total equity of $4.5 billion.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Royal Oak Resources Ltd. announced today that it has received a commitment from Sharps Pixley Inc. of New York, the bullion trading subsidiary of Kleinwort Benson, to provide debt financing for Royal Oak's Cdn. $33 million acquisition of control of the Pamour Group of companies. Subject to the terms and conditions of the commitment, Sharps Pixley will provide Royal Oak with a senior secured gold loan of up to U.S. $14 million. The commitment also provides Royal Oak with the option of borrowing up to an additional Cdn. $4 million from another financial institution on a subordinated basis, satisfactory to Sharps Pixley, to assist in financing the acquisition.

The facility established by Sharps Pixley will have an original repayment term of five years and will be secured against all Royal Oak's present and future assets, including the assets currently being acquired.

These assets being purchased, which are comprised of 67.1 percent of the outstanding shares of Pamour Inc., 16.6 percent of the outstanding shares of Giant Yellowknife Mines Limited and debt of approximately Cdn. $18 million, which after closing will be owed by Pamour to Royal Oak, will allow Royal Oak to control all of the companies within the Pamour Group. As a result of this acquisition, Royal Oak will control a collection of companies which produce approximately 200,000 ounces of gold per year and have an impressive collection of promising exploration and development properties surrounding the group's mining operations in Timmins, Ontario and Yellowknife, Northwest Territories.

Financing for this acquisition will be a combination of the loan being provided by Sharps Pixley, an equity issue of Cdn. $16 - $20 million which is currently being placed by ScotiaMcLeod, BT Canada Securities and Richardson Greenshields, and up to Cdn. $4 million of subordinated debt. Teck Corporation, which currently holds 16.5 percent of Royal Oak's outstanding shares, has indicated that it will maintain its pro-rata shareholding in Royal Oak and will subscribe for 16.5 percent of the equity issue.

This transaction is subject to TSE approval.

MINNEAPOLIS (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Ault Incorporated today reported net

sales of $4,851,000 for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 ended Aug. 31, an increase of 22 percent from the year-earlier period. Net income improved to $43,000 or $.02 per share from the net loss of $15,000 or $.01 per share in the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

Frederick M. Green, Ault's president and chief executive officer, said the first quarter earnings were on plan, representing a good turnaround from the company's performance last year. He said this keeps Ault on track toward attaining significantly improved results for all of fiscal 1991.

Green attributed Ault's improved results to higher sales of new- generation external power supplies that are allowing the company to expand its customer base and range of market applications. He said Ault's core telecommunications customers are continuing to return slowly to the market following an extended period of order weakness. Green added that Ault's first quarter results also include sales to European electronics manufacturers reflecting the company's entry into overseas markets.

Order growth remained strong during the first three months of fiscal 1991, with the quarter-ending backlog totaling $7,778,000, up 29 percent from $610,000 a year ago. The backlog was also up from the strong level reported in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990.

Ault is the nation's largest independent manufacturer of external power supplies and battery chargers for high-end applications in telecommunications equipment, computers and peripherals, portable medical equipment, and industrial products. The company's common stock is traded on the national over-the-counter market under the NASDAQ symbol AULT.

DENVER (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Weitz-Cohen Construction Co., the Colorado-based contractor that submitted the lowest bid for an airport tunnel contract, disputes the city's charge that it lacked the good faith effort to hire minority subcontractors necessary to secure the contract.

Weitz-Cohen's bid on the 4,000-foot tunnel, designed to carry passengers between concourses and terminals at the new airport, was $36.6 million, $2 million less than the company to whom the city awarded the contract. After learning the low bidder was not awarded, the Denver City Council stalled the award at its meeting Monday night, Sept. 17, 1990.

"We were shocked to learn through rumors that we were denied this contract, even though we were the low bid and we met all affirmative action requirements " said Weitz-Cohen President Don Thorpe. When Weitz-Cohen originally submitted the low bid, the company inadvertently overlooked one affirmative action item.

Weitz-Cohen provided back-up documentation, within the required time limit, that proved that the company's good faith efforts were completed prior to submitting the bid to the city. Thorpe stated that the company was informed by Amy Shaw at the Affirmative Action Office that clarification of the information submitted by Weitz-Cohen was needed. "Later, Shaw told us that her Affirmative Action review showed that Weitz-Cohen had included 6.46 percent of minority-owned businesses in our bid and that there were 'no other problems '" Thorpe explained.

Weitz-Cohen Vice President Rick Poppe added, "The fact that we didn't fill in one blank on a form is unfortunate, but the error was harmless and resulted in no change to the status or substance of our bid. We do not believe it should end up costing taxpayers an additional $2 million dollars." Poppe added, "Our attempts to communicate our good faith efforts, our DBE participation, and our low bid have been completely ignored."

A Denver City Council Airport Committee hearing scheduled Monday, Sept. 24, 1990, will review the award process. Weitz-Cohen will ask for a reconsideration of the award.

Weitz-Cohen is a Colorado corporation known for major construction projects including the Aurora Municipal Justice Center, Mountain Bell Center, Security Life Building, and the Amoco-Columbia Savings Building. The company is listed in Engineering News Record as the 60th largest general contractor in the United States.

LANDOVER, MD (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Applied Research Corporation (PHLX: ARL ARLX, ARL X, ARL.X) today released its results of operations for the fiscal year ended May 31, 1990.

As indicated in its results for the nine months ended Feb. 28, 1990, corrections to the statements were required and the company has decided to take a one-time write off in order to accurately reflect its position at the end of Fiscal Year 1990. The results are summarized below:

	FISCAL YEAR ENDED MAY 31
	1990	1989 (Restated)
Contract revenue	$6,203,287	$7,005,402

Operating income	12,194	37,976
Net income	(271,487)	(194,506)
Net income per share	(0.05)	(0.06)

The results of these statements indicate that corrective actions are required if the company is to strengthen its financial condition. Management is currently focusing on two areas of concern: increasing contract revenue through the hiring of directly chargeable personnel and reducing indirect expenses to a level where they are fully recoverable under contracts. Upon addressing these areas of concern, the company anticipates showing marked improvement in subsequent financial statements.

The company still enjoys a contract backlog in excess of $23 million and is currently working under its most favorable credit arrangement since 1987. It possesses the technical expertise and fine reputation that had sustained its growth through 1989. These attributes coupled with a new resolve to stress fiscal responsibility will propel the company to a level of financial stability not previously enjoyed.

ST. LOUIS (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - The May Department Stores Company (NYSE: MA) Foundation has contributed $200,000 to two national organizations which assist people with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

The National Community AIDS Partnership and the Design Industries Foundation for AIDS (DIFFA) each received $100,000 to distribute this year to community-based groups which assist people with AIDS. The $100,000 grants represent the first such grants The May Department Stores Company Foundation intends to make annually.

David C. Farrell, chairman and chief executive officer of The May Department Stores Company, said, "With AIDS affecting increasing numbers of people, we want to offer direct support to help meet basic needs for food, shelter and other assistance. We are very pleased to work with the National Community AIDS Partnership and DIFFA, both highly respected for their ability to identify and fund projects that help people with AIDS. We are especially pleased to target communities in which May Company operates."

The National Community AIDS Partnership provides matching grants to support community-based AIDS programs in 19 metropolitan areas of the United States. Based in Washington, D.C., the Partnership has distributed more than $8.5 million to 371 organizations since its founding in 1988.

DIFFA, whose membership represents all segments of the design industry, raises funds and makes grants to AIDS organizations and projects throughout the United States. Since its founding in 1984, DIFFA has distributed $5 million to more than 230 groups in 29 states.

Through The May Department Stores Company Foundation, May contributes nationwide more than $10 million annually for health, social welfare, educational, cultural and civic causes.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Delta Air Lines has been advised by the Fire Marshal that the law will limit the number of people allowed in the gate areas set aside for the arrival of the Atlanta Olympic Committee flight from Tokyo on Thursday, Sept. 20.

Thus, Delta is asking that the news media advise people not to go to the airport. Family members who will be meeting the flight will occupy most of the available space and any others wishing to welcome the AOC home will likely not be able to enter the area.

The AOC has advised Delta that a parade to celebrate Atlanta's selection as the site for the 1996 Olympics will be held in the city on September 24 and this will give everyone an opportunity to show their support.

Arrangements have been made to accommodate news media and family members greeting the flight. The airplane will arrive at approximately 7:21 p.m. Thursday. For additional information, the news media is asked to contact Delta Public Relations.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Janet Robinson has been named group vice president of The New York Times Company Magazine Group's advertising sales and marketing unit. The announcement was made today by William T. Kerr, president of the group.

Robinson, currently advertising director at Tennis magazine, replaces Harry Myers, who resigned.

A former teacher and education consultant, Robinson joined Tennis magazine as an account executive in June 1983. In May 1985 she was promoted to national resort and travel manager, Golf Digest/Tennis. She remained in that position until she became advertising director of Tennis magazine in August 1987.

Robinson, 40, is a native of Somerset, Mass. She received a B.A. degree in English in 1972 from Salve Regina College, Newport, R.I., where she graduated cum laude. She has also pursued graduate studies at Brown University, Providence, R.I.

Robinson will report to Charles H. Townsend, president and chief operating officer of Family Circle, Inc.

Townsend said, "Janet Robinson brings a great deal of management and selling experience to the group. She will be leading a very strong team which includes Helen Seligman, director of marketing, who has broad media experience. Together they will give the women's magazines in our group a well-rounded and highly focused marketing and selling unit."

The advertising sales and marketing unit was formed in March 1990 to offer advertisers marketing partnerships through group buys and value- added access to The New York Times Company Magazine Group's women's magazines, which include: Family Circle, McCall's, Decorating Remodeling, Child, and the Family Circle Great Ideas series. These magazines reach over one-third of all adult women in the nation. In addition, the unit works to tie in the advertising related to retail promotions and sports marketing, a well as newspapers and television stations of The New York Times Company.

Kerr said The New York Times Company Magazine Group has grown from six to 17 titles in the past five years. It also publishes Golf Digest, Golf Shop Operations, Tennis, Tennis Buyer's Guide, Cruising World, Sailing World, Snow Country, Golf World, Gold World (U.K.), Golf World Industry News (U.K.), Gold Illustrated Weekly (U.K.) and Golf Digest Sverige (Sweden).

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Angeles Corp. (AMEX: ANG) today reported a net loss of $6,416,000 or $2.23 per share for the fiscal year ended June 30. Revenue was $39,568,000. In fiscal 1989, Angeles had net income of $202,000, on revenue of $38,909,000.

Fourth quarter net income was $353,000, compared to $768,000 in the prior year period. Revenue was $13,535,000 in the quarter, versus $11,874,000 in the 1989 fourth quarter.

Angeles President Joseph Cattivera said $2,907,000 of the loss was recorded in the third quarter, due to one-time charges related to Angeles' withdrawal from the direct offering of real estate investment programs to the public and the reduction of the marketing staff and other support associated with that activity. These actions are expected to result in savings approximating $2.5 million annually.

Cattivera also said that reported earnings will continue to be impacted by the accounting treatment of its development and direct ownership of congregate-style retirement facilities and factory- direct shopping malls. This accounting treatment requires recording depreciation and interest expenses during the development and holding period, when the company believes these property values are being enhanced. Angeles currently owns and operates nine congregate care communities with a total of 1,392 units in six states, and jointly owns four factory-direct malls with aggregate square footage in excess of 800,000 square feet.

Angeles Corp. is a diversified investment management company whose subsidiaries currently manage in excess of $4 billion of securities, real estate, mutual fund and leased equipment assets for corporations and institutions, and for individual investors.

MANCHESTER, N.H. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - BankEast Corporation (NASDAQ: BENH) a New Hampshire-based bank holding company, announced today that two holders of $13 million in subordinated debentures have accelerated the maturity of this debt. This action is substantially a demand to pay this debt in full, a demand the holding company is not able to fulfill at this time.

W.N. DeWitt, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, emphasized that this action by the noteholders, should have no effect on the conduct of business by the holding company's subsidiaries: BankEast, its FDIC-insured banking subsidiary; BankEast Mortgage Corp.; or BankEast Trust Company. These subsidaries are separate legal entities and are not responsible for the holding company's obligations to the noteholders. "As far as BankEast depositors and other customers are concerned, it will be business as usual," said DeWitt. Deposits of BankEast are insured to the maximum extent permitted under applicable law.

"While the holding company has been in technical default for some time on certain covenants of the debenture agreeement, we have made all interest payments when due and principal payments were not scheduled to begin until November, 1992," DeWitt stated. "Significant efforts have been made over recent months to negotiate a restructuring plan with the noteholders that reflects the difficult economic environment that we, along with other New Hampshire institutions, have been facing.

"While this action by the noteholders is regrettable, we continue to favor a negotiated resolution of this matter. Should an acceptable solution be unattainable and the noteholders press their demands, the holding company may be forced to seek protection from the noteholders. However, the holding company is exploring all of its options," concluded DeWitt.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - TRISM, Inc. has reaffirmed its merger offer for Builders Transport, Incorporated (NASDAQ: TRUK).

TRISM has received financing proposals adequate to complete the merger offer for Builders. The offer to the Builders shareholders is $9 per common share in cash, $4 per common share in 12 year, 12 percent cumulative preferred stock with a current pay, and one-fifth of a new common share in the successor corporation. Based upon the assumption that all the holders of the existing two issues of convertible subordinate debt choose to convert their debt into equity and take the consideration offered to the common shareholders, this common stock distribution will represent 15 percent of the common equity of the successor company. The preferred stock and the new common stock will be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, so that they will be free to trade. A listing on a national stock exchange will be sought when the listing requirements are satisfied.

TRISM has submitted a merger agreement to Builders, which will allow time for TRISM and its lenders to do a confirming due diligence. The proposed merger agreement contains a provision to set the agreement aside if a majority of the newly elected board of directors of Builders are not members of the current board of directors.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - The Shidler/Holman Group today outlined additional principles which it will follow, if it is successful in its current consent solicitation to replace the board of directors of Grossman's, Inc., (NASDAQ: GROS) in order to address shareholder concerns about management accountability at Grossman's.

"In our meetings with shareholders of Grossman's, a number of corporate governance issues have been raised with us," said Jay Shidler of The Shidler/Holman Group.

Shidler stated that, should the consent solicitation be successful, "The Shidler/Holman Group and its nominees would present shareholders with the opportunity to vote upon the following proposals: (1) No 'poison pill' or shareholder rights plan without prior shareholder approval; (2) No 'green mail' or other transactions designed to repurchase at a premium the shares of one or more shareholders on terms not available to all other shareholders; (3) No adoption of 'golden parachutes' or similar severance compensation arrangements triggered solely by a change in control of the company without prior shareholder approval; (4) No issuances of 'white squire' preferred stock or other securities of the company under circumstances where the ultimate purpose of such issuance is designed to prevent or inhibit a change in control of the company; and (5) Confidential voting provisions and independent inspectors of election to be employed in connection with all shareholder voting." Shidler stated that, "If elected, those matters would be put to a shareholder vote as soon as practicable after such election and that a detailed disclosure statement relating to these proposals would be mailed to all shareholders." Shidler added, "We intend to vote all shares owned by us in favor of these proposals."

Shidler also stated, "The Shidler/Holman Group and its nominees intend to communicate regularly with shareholders, as well as to discuss separately with major shareholders a basis for creating a shareholders committee for purposes of enabling direct shareholder communication with the board concerning issues of importance to the company. In addition, we intend to establish a nominating committee of the board comprised of outside directors for the purpose of making recommendations to the board as to nominees for election as directors of the company." Shidler added that, "Any other corporate governance proposals received from or recommended by stockholders would be given appropriate consideration by the Shidler/Holman Group and its nominees."

The Shidler/Holman Group has previously stated its position that no member of The Shidler/Holman Group or any of its affiliates will participate in any financing proposal which may be made to utilize the company's substantial real estate as a financial resource or in any other transaction involving the sale, lease or purchase of real property between members of The Shidler/Holman Group and Grossman's.

BRAINTREE, MA (SEPT. 20) PR NEWSWIRE - Grossman's Inc. (NASDAQ: GROS) announced today that its board of directors has authorized repurchasing up to $2 million of its common stock in open market transactions from time to time over the next 12 months.

In announcing the share repurchase program, Thomas R. Schwarz, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, stated: "The stock repurchase program underscores our confidence in the company's long-term goals and strategies and reflects our belief that our common stock is undervalued. This share repurchase program therefore represents an excellent opportunity for the company to acquire common stock for its stock option plan and other general corporate purposes and to advance our objective of maximizing stockholder values."

Grossman's currently has approximately 26 million shares of common stock outstanding.

Schwarz also announced that after several months of extensive discussions, the company has engaged the management consulting firm of McKinsey & Company, Inc. to conduct an intensive analysis of all aspects of the company's operations, asset deployment, markets and finances. Schwarz said, "McKinsey will work with us in planning how best to build stockholder values by strengthening Grossman's market position and increasing cash flows in the current difficult environment."

Grossman's, a major retailer of lumber and building materials, operates 156 stores in nine Northeastern states and in California.

SALT LAKE CITY, (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Bonneville Pacific Corp. (NASDAQ: BPCO), reported first quarter revenues of $28,909,000 resulting in a loss of $1,105,000 or 9 cents per share based on 12,845,093 weighted average number of shares outstanding.

Revenues for the first quarter of the prior year totalled $9,954,000 and resulted in a loss of $1,306,000 or 10 cents per share based on 12,892,382 average shares outstanding.

According to Robert L. Wood, chairman of the board, the results for the first quarter were expected. Bonneville typically has had uneven quarter to quarter earnings and this trend could continue in the near future until the company accomplishes its stated long-term goals of predictable, recurring revenues. Bonneville expects to accomplish these goals by building larger facilities and retaining significant ownership interests in such facilities.

Bonneville currently has five major electric generating facility projects under development with a total estimated capacity of approximately 290 megawatts.

SAN DIEGO, (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Mail Boxes Etc. (NASDAQ: MAIL) announced today that it will vigorously defend itself and its Warminster, Pa., franchisee, in a lawsuit that was announced early this week, by the Pennsylvania Attorney General, Ernie Preate, Jr. The suit alleges that operators of private mail receiving agencies, of which there are several hundred in Pennsylvania, are violating Pennsylvania's unfair trade practices and consumer protection law by offering private mail boxes for rent at businesses and giving customers the opportunity to identify their boxes by suite numbers.

"Mail Boxes Etc. is defending the ability of hundreds of Pennsylvania operators of private postal centers, such as myself, and thousands of our boxholders to earn a living," said Mike Forcina, owner of the Mail Boxes Etc.

postal center in Warminster.

"The action of the Attorney General's office is simply outrageous," said Forcina. "Since the opening of my MBE Center in August 1987, I have received no consumer complaints regarding the use of suite numbers by my boxholders nor has any law enforcement agency requested information on one of my boxholders. I simply do not know why the Attorney General is suing me. This is an excellent example of unnecessary government interference that it making it difficult for small businesses like mine and my boxholders to survive in Pennsylvania. As an elected official, Mr. Preate should use taxpayer funds to prosecute criminals rather than to harass small business owners like me and my boxholders."

"Mail Boxes Etc. franchise owners are advised to cooperate fully with law enforcement officials in identifying any boxholder who engages in unlawful activities," said Tony DeSio, president of Mail Boxes Etc., the San Diego franchisor of private postal outlets. "Where the Attorney General has identified a specific boxholder in Pennsylvania who is engaged in any questionable activities, our franchise owners are always advised to cooperate in every way possible. We are aware of only one such request that has been made of any MBE Centers during the seven-year period that we have been operating in Pennsylvania and the MBE Center in that case, where the boxholder was not even using a 'suite' number, has fully cooperated with the Attorney General's office. However, we do not believe the Attorney General should be allowed to trample on the rights of the overwhelming majority of honest small businesses in Pennsylvania that use the services of our MBE Center Franchisees because of the potential that a dishonest boxholder might abuse the use of his box, especially in view of the fact that there is no other record of this type of abuse ever occurring in any of our Pennsylvania centers."

DeSio said that before the announced filing of the lawsuit, the company was threatened by the Attorney General's office to instruct its franchisees to cease and desist from advertising that boxholders could use the term "suite" in their address. "We refused because we feel strongly that we must defend the rights of our franchise owners and thousands of other small businesses in Pennsylvania from this type of harassment by their elected officials," said DeSio. DeSio also said that, contrary to statements by the attorney general, the company does not advise its franchisees to allow boxholders to use the term "apartment" in their addresses.

"We have been franchising this concept for 10 years and have assisted over 1,200 franchise owners throughout the United States, as well as in Canada, Mexico and Japan, to open and operate their own businesses," DeSio said. "Mr. Preate is the only government official in the world who has filed suit against MBE or our franchise owners regarding their advertising of the use of 'suite' numbers by their boxholders. We simply do not see anything misleading or fraudulent about a small business owner putting his best foot forward and calling his office in one of our postal and business service centers a 'suite

' since many boxholders actually do carry out their business activities, such as word-processing, faxing, voice-mail, packaging and shipping from our franchisee's centers. We see no difference between our postal, business and communications service centers and the fully furnished temporary office that individuals can rent and use for a week or a day and call themselves a 'suite.'"

"We think the Attorney General of Pennsylvania should be pursuing businesses which are actually defrauding consumers, not small businesses like those owned by our franchise owners who are helping thousands of legitimate small businesses to succeed by providing them a low-cost alternative to renting office space, purchasing equipment and hiring staff," said DeSio.

BURBANK, CA. (SEPT. 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Reacting quickly to the discovery that pirated copies of its new motion picture "GoodFellas" were already being sold, Warner Bros. has begun bringing civil suits. The first was filed in New York City Tuesday, Sept. 18, against a Bronx video retailer.

Pedro Camacho, owner of Camacho's Video Store, from whom a pirate copy of "GoodFellas" was seized, was ordered to appear in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

According to Warner Bros., represented in court by Sargoy, Stein, Rosen & Shapiro, authorities also seized duplicating equipment and copies of other pirated films.

The court order also allows for the seizure of any pirate cassettes of "GoodFellas" in the New York area. Armed with these court orders, investigative units of the Motion Picture Association of America, along with a private investigation firm retained by Warner, have been deployed to search for and seize pirate copies of "GoodFellas." Individuals from whom pirate copies are seized will be the subject of subsequent legal proceedings.

Warner is expected to refer this high priority matter to the Justice Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Molly Kellogg, Warner Bros.' vice president, Anti-Piracy, stated: "Warner's focused response to piracy of 'GoodFellas' is an indication of the aggressive action we will take in any area where pirated copies of 'GoodFellas' are reported to be presented."

BOSTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Syphilis has risen to its highest level since 1949 in the United States, with the resurgence of the venereal disease striking blacks hardest, government researchers reported.

After decreasing in the early 1980s, the overall rate of the sexually transmitted disease increased 61 percent between 1985 and 1989, with the incidence disproportionately high among black women and black men and in the South and the District of Columbia, the researchers said Tuesday.

The trends in syphilis transmission during the 1980s are ''likely to be important indicators of changes in sexual behavior'' affecting the course of the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS, said Drs. Robert Rolfs and Allyn Nakashima of the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

While syphilis rates among non-Hispanic white men dropped 69 percent between 1982 and 1989, and rates for white women remained low and changed little, the rate for blacks jumped 132 percent from 1985 to 1989, the researchers reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Syphilis among black women increased from 36 cases per 100,000 people in 1985 to 99 cases in 1989, while for black men, there was an increase from 71 cases per 100,000 to 147 cases during the same period.

By contrast, the syphilis incidence among white men was 3.2 cases per 100,000 people in 1989 - about 46 times less than for black men - and about 1.9 per 100,000 for white women, or one-fiftieth the rate for black women.

''Incidence rates for Hispanics were intermediate between rates for whites and those for blacks,'' the study said, with rates in 1989 standing at 10 cases per 100,000 population for Hispanic women and 27 cases per 100,000 for Hispanic men.

Syphilis is caused by a bacterium called Treponema pallidum, which cannot survive long outside the human body but can quickly travel throughout the body after being transmitted through sexual contact. In early stages, syphilis causes sores on sexual organs. If left untreated, the disease can lead to various symptoms including lymph node enlargement, fatigue, headaches, skin rashes and joint pain.

Although antibiotics can successfully treat syphilis - making it much less deadly than HIV - increases in the syphilis rate are noteworthy because the ''dramatic increase in syphilis incidence among homosexual men during the 1970s foreshadowed'' the beginning of the AIDS epidemic in the 1980s, the researchers said.

Not only can the incidence of syphilis serve as an indicator of sexual behavior, its ability to cause genital sores makes it a potentially important factor in the sexual spread of HIV, they said.

Rolfs and Nakashima found great variability in syphilis case rates among states and regions, with the lowest incidence in Midwest, Great Plains and Rocky Mountains states and the highest in the South.

The District of Columbia had the nation's highest syphilis rate at 150 per 100,000 people, the study said. Among states, Georgia had the highest rate at 60 per 100,000 people, followed by Florida, Louisiana, Connecticut, Delaware, New York, Tennessee, Mississippi, South Carolina and Texas.

For the United States as a whole, the syphilis rate was 18.4 per 100, 000 in 1989. Rolfs said the syphilis rate in 1949 was a reported 29 per 100,000. However, he noted that venereal disease reporting methods were not as sophisticated in the 1940s as they are today, so the actual number might have been higher.

Prior studies have suggested that the spread of syphilis is linked to illegal drugs, especially cocaine, and corresponding high-risk sexual activity, including prostitution, the researchers said. The current epidemic appears to affect mostly the ''minority, drug-using population, '' they said.

In an editorial accompanying the study, Dr. H. Hunter Handsfield of the University of Washington called the syphilis trend ''explosive.'' But while cocaine and high-risk sex may play specific roles in the epidemic, the ''underlying problems are unemployment, poverty, poor education, prejudice and inadequate health care, which in turn lead to crime, prostitution, substance abuse, family disruption and despair,'' he said.

Handsfield predicted control over the spread of HIV and syphilis ''will not come until the nation and governments at all levels develop the will and means to solve the interactive problems of the inner city.''

(SEPT. 19) UPI - Israel accepted more immigrants over the last 12 months than in any similar period since its founding in 1948. 115-thousand people moved to the Jewish state, pushing the population to four-point-seven-Million. And Israel plans to accommodate another 100-thousand before the end of the year and perhaps as many as 400-thousand next year.

The U-S Centers for Disease Control reports that the syphilis rate in the United States is at its highest level since 1949. The most alarming recent increase was among blacks, who reported a 132-percent rise in cases of the disease from 1985 to 1989. The syphilis rate for the country as a whole was 18-point-four cases per 100-thousand people.

OKLAHOMA CITY (SEPT. 19) UPI - Businessman David Walters, who never held public office, and former U.S. Attorney Bill Price claimed victories early Wednesday in the runoff primary for Oklahoma governor.

Walters, a Democrat who lost the 1986 general election to Gov. Henry Bellmon, said, ''It's time to put somebody different in the governor's chair. I think I am going to be that governor.'' Bellmon is not seeking re-election.

Walters was the apparent winner over Rep. Wes Watkins, who gave up his 3rd District seat in Congress to run for governor.

Watkins conceded, and said he will have to sit down and talk with Walters before deciding whether to endorse him in the Nov. 6 general election.

Restaurant owner and former television newscaster Vince Orza, the leader in the Aug. 28 Republican primary, conceded defeat late Tuesday.

''It is an honor tonight to join the ranks of the eight guys who didn't make it,'' Orza said. ''I have no remorse right now. I am proud. I look forward to working with Bill (Price) to get Oklahoma going again.''

Former University of Oklahoma quarterback Jack Mildren was the apparent winner over Oklahoma State University political science professor Jim Davis for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. Terry Neese won the Republican nomination.

Voters approved three state questions, including a first-in-the- nation proposal to limit legislators' service to 12 years. The proposal included a grandfather clause, giving current lawmakers another 12 years before the clock starts running.

Other questions approved were a constitutionally-based Ethics Commission and permission for state employees to work in places where alcoholic beverages are served.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 19) UPI - Alexander Solzhenitsyn, writing for the first time in a Soviet newspaper since his expulsion in 1974, said the Soviet empire must be abandoned and replaced by a new non-Communist Russia consisting of only the Slavic republics.

''We should now make our choice between the empire which is murdering us and the spiritual and physical revival of our people,'' Solzhenitsyn wrote in an unprecedented 16-page article in the Komsomolskaya Pravda newspaper.

Solzhenitsyn, who has refused to come home from the United States despite receiving his citizenship back last month, also said that communism's time was spent.

''The clock of communism has ticked away its time,'' he said. ''But its concrete building has not yet been destroyed. And we should not perish under its ruins.''

A fervent Russian nationalist and anti-Communist, Solzhenitsyn said the new Russia should include only the Russian republic, the Ukraine and Byelorussia rather than consist of 15 republics as now in a massive land empire.

''If we have no forces either economic or moral for an empire - then good riddance,'' he said.

The Nobel Prize winner, in the extensive article, said Japan began to flourish only ''after it gave up its ideas of its international mission and political adventurism.''

''We should loudly, precisely and immediately declare freedom for the three Baltic republics, the three Transcaucasian republics, four Central Asian republics, and should let Moldavia join Romania if it wants.''

He said that the fifth central Asian Moslem republic of Kazakhstan, a giant region second only in size to the Russian republic, should be divided, and that only the genuinely non-Russian part should receive independence.

Solzhenitsyn, who was imprisoned in a Gulag labor camp in Kazakhstan, said that the northern area of that republic is really part of Siberia and the Russian Urals.

''Moreover, this virgin area was cultivated by Russian prisoners and the peoples who were exiled there,'' Solzhenitsyn wrote.

Solzhenitsyn, who has lived in Cavendish, Vt., since he was driven out of the Soviet Union, donated the proceeds of his article to the victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident of April 1986.

In place of communism, Russia must find salvation in a revived Orthodox Church Solzhenitsyn wrote in his article, which will also be republished in a special supplement put out by the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta newspaper.

''The church will help us in the public renovation when it finds forces to free itself fully from the power of the state and restore its links with the people's feelings,'' he said.

Although Solzhenitsyn's works are now published openly in the Soviet Union, the writer previously had not written for a Soviet newspaper or magazine since his forced departure from the Soviet Union.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - The Pentagon said the number of Iraqi troops and tanks in Kuwait and southern Iraq has increased sharply within the past two weeks, while in China, athletes of the invaded oil emirate defied Baghdad at the Asian Games.

Two weeks ago, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said there were 265, 000 Iraqi troops and 2,200 tanks in the area - 150,000 troops in Kuwait and 115,000 in Iraqi areas north and west of Kuwait.

He said Tuesday that the Iraqis have about 360,000 troops, 2,800 tanks and 1,450 pieces of artillery in Kuwait and southern Iraq. However, Williams said the increase comes from a general buildup and ''no sudden surge'' of forces.

He also said Iraq appeared to be pulling back its armor from the border region with Saudi Arabia but increasing the number of tanks and artillery farther back, and placing more infantry on the front lines.

''It's neither more defensive or less defensive,'' Williams said of Iraq's posture.

Defiant Kuwaiti athletes hoisted their national flag at the Asian Games in Beijing Tuesday despite Baghdad's orders to compete as Iraqis.

Kuwait entered 43 athletes in the Asian Games, remnants of a delegation that originally numbered about 330.

''We believe that in the near future we can entertain our Chinese friends in the state of Kuwait,'' said Sheikh Ahmad Fahad al Sabah, the new president of the Kuwait National Olympic Committee. He succeeded his father, slain during the assault by Iraqi troops into Kuwait Aug. 2.

The Olympic Council of Asia have scheduled a vote for Thursday in Beijing on a proposal to bar Iraq from the games.

An Iraqi newspaper reported that senior Iraqi Revolution Command Council member Saadoun Shaker, 51, a childhood friend of Saddam Hussein and a former interior minister, resigned his post ''for health reasons at his own request.''

The government-run daily Al Waqaie al Iraqia (Iraqi facts) gave no other details, but one Western diplomat said he was forced out for opposing the Iraqi leader's policy on Kuwait. The resignation was the first from the ranks of Saddam's senior aides since the invasion.

In Cairo, an Egyptian Foreign Ministry source familiar with Iraqi politics said there were divisions over policy toward Kuwait among Saddam's other key aides including Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, son-in-law Hussein Kamel and Taha Yassin Ramadan, deputy premier and head of the powerful militia of the ruling Baathist Party and Izzat Ibrahim, the council's deputy chairman.

Cairo Radio reported Iraqi troops with tanks had set up new camps near a number of foreign diplomatic premises in Kuwait, including the U.S. Embassy, which is among a handful of countries refusing to shut down its diplomatic representation.

The French navy announced the United States, Australia, France, Britain, the Netherlands and Italy have agreed to divide the Persian Gulf region into separate areas of patrol to better enforce the U.N. trade embargo against Iraq.

The navy said agreement among Western nations to divide into spheres of influence the Gulf of Oman, the Strait of Hormuz and the western Persian Gulf waters was hammered out at a meeting of officers from the four West European countries aboard the French frigate Dupleix in the Strait of Hormuz Friday.

A separate meeting of U.S. and Australian naval commanders reserved other sectors of the region for their vessels, the statement said.

France had been pressing for such a formal agreement for some time because of considerable duplication of efforts by different navies checking on ships that might be trying to break the embargo. Sometimes the same cargo ship would be questioned as many as 15 times, French Defense Ministry sources said.

In a memorandum quoted by the official Saudi Press Agency, Kuwait's exiled government complained to the Arab League that Iraqi authorities decided a week ago to tighten their grip on Kuwaitis ''through inhuman ill-treatment and more repressive measures,'' with the aim of driving them from their homeland.

The Kuwaiti memorandum said Iraqis arrested a large number of Kuwaitis for refusing to cooperate with them, subjecting them to torture and ''all sorts of humiliation.'' It said Iraq had also carried out ''barbaric'' public executions.

It cited the example of a man who was shot dead for refusing to switch a portrait of the toppled Kuwaiti emir in his shop with a picture of Saddam.

In addition, the memorandum said all those leaving Kuwait were being asked to surrender their official documents.

''This seems to be aimed at obliterating the Kuwaiti identity and resettling Iraqi families or families of pro-Iraqi nationalities in the Kuwaiti homes,'' it said.

The exodus of Kuwaitis slowed as Saudi officials made painstaking identity checks to screen out Iraqi infiltrators. But Saudi officials said Tuesday an estimated 8,000 Kuwaitis had fled across the border since Iraq opened the crossing Saturday.

#90262u0505 09/19/1990 ~United Press International
(SEPT. 18) UPI - With an ace missing from their lineup, the Boston Red Sox have let another lead slip away.

The Red Sox, known to break fans' hearts with late-season failings, held a 6 1-2 game lead over the Toronto Blue Jays in the American League East two weeks ago. But then Roger Clemens was sidelined with a shoulder problem.

Boston went on to lose nine of 14 games without the 20-game winner, including Tuesday's 4-1 loss to the Baltimore Orioles that dropped the Red Sox into a tie with Toronto, a 3-2 winner over the New York Yankees.

''You never know what would've happened (had Clemens stayed healthy), '' Red Sox Manager Joe Morgan said. ''You figure we'd have one or two more victories with him.''

The Red Sox last won the World Series in 1918, making them the AL franchise that has gone the longest without winning a World Series. Boston has lost four Series since 1918, the most painful coming in 1986 against the New York Mets.

Clemens is scheduled to return to the rotation Sunday.

Cal Ripken Jr.'s seventh-inning single broke up a no-hit bid by Red Sox left-hander Tom Bolton, who failed to finish the inning. One out later, Chris Hoiles singled and Mike Devereaux singled in Ripken to tie the score 1-1. David Segui then smashed a line-drive home run to left, his second of the season, to give the Orioles a 4-1 lead.

''You never feel a guy's going to throw a no-hitter against you,'' Devereaux said. ''That inning just got away from him.''

''I was sailing along, gave up a hit, then we missed a chance for the double play,'' Bolton said. ''A ball sneaks through the infield, home run ... bad time for it to happen.''

Orioles starter Jose Mesa, 2-2, lasted seven innings. Gregg Olson pitched the ninth for his 32nd save.

In other AL games, Toronto edged New York 3-2, Cleveland defeated Milwaukee 8-3, Minnesota routed Kansas City 10-4, Chicago outscored Oakland 8-2, Seattle beat Texas 7-3 and Detroit edged California 3-2.

In the National League, it was: San Francisco 5, Cincinnati 3; Los Angeles 6, Atlanta 2; Montreal 4, New York 3; Chicago 8, Pittsburgh 5; Philadelphia 6, St. Louis 3, and San Diego 8, Houston 1.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Blue Jays 3, Yankees 2

At Toronto, pinch-hitter Rance Mulliniks singled home Kelly Gruber from third base with two outs in the ninth. Bud Black, 12-10, acquired Monday in a trade with Cleveland, allowed one run and one hit over two innings in his first relief appearance. Lee Guetterman fell to 10-7.

Indians 8, Brewers 3

At Cleveland, Charles Nagy scattered nine hits over 7 1-3 innings to earn his first major-league victory and Jerry Browne and Sandy Alomar added two RBI each. Nagy, 1-4, earned the victory in his sixth big- league start. Doug Jones earned his 37th save. Reliever Don August fell to 0-3.

Twins 10, Royals 4

At Minneapolis, Kent Hrbek collected three RBI, including one during a six-run fifth inning, to lead Minnesota. The Twins collared losing pitcher Tom Gordon, 11-11, and reliever Andy McGaffigan for eight hits in the inning, a season high for the club. Scott Erickson improved to 6- 4.

White Sox 8, Athletics 2

At Oakland, Calif., Ivan Calderon smacked a two-run homer and rookie Alex Fernandez won his fourth game of the year, leading Chicago to their sixth consecutive victory. Sammy Sosa and Scott Fletcher added solo homers as Chicago collected 13 hits, eight off A's starter Mike Moore, 12-13. Fernandez, 4-3, allowed eight hits over seven innings.

Mariners 7, Rangers 3

At Seattle, Alvin Davis hit his eighth career grand slam to cap a seven-run seventh inning and rookie Rich Delucia, 1-0, allowed seven hits over eight innings. Mike Jeffcoat, 4-6, the second of four Texas pitchers in the seventh, took the loss.

Tigers 3, Angels 2

At Anaheim, Calif., Jack Morris and Mike Henneman combined on a three-hitter and rookie Milt Cuyler drove in two runs. Morris, 12-18, yielded two runs and three hits over seven innings. Henneman finished for his 21st save. Chuck Finley, 18-7, allowed only one earned run in pitching his seventh complete game.

MACON, GA (SEPT. 19) UPI - Mail bomb suspect Walter Leroy Moody Jr. was ordered to undergo psychiatric tests to determine if he is competent to stand trial in November on federal charges of perjury, bribery and obstruction of justice.

U.S. District Judge Wilbur D. Owens directed Tuesday that Moody be examined within 30 days, and he set a trial date of Nov. 26.

Prosecutors said that Moody's mental health history from 1967 to 1988 indicates ''there may be reasonable cause to believe'' that Moody currently suffers from a mental disease.

Moody, 56, and his wife, Susan, are charged in a 13-count federal indictment with perjury, bribery and obstruction of justice. The charges stem from Moody's unsuccessful attempt to overturn a 1972 bomb possession conviction.

Authorities said Moody, who lives in the Atlanta suburb of Rex, is the chief suspect in the mail bombings last December that killed federal Judge Robert Vance in Birmingham, Ala., and civil rights lawyer Robert Robinson in Savannah. No charges have been filed in the bombing investigation.

Officials said mental illness could make it impossible for Moody to understand the obstruction charges against him or to assist in his defense, making him legally incompetent to stand trial.

Testing Moody's mental status also will resolve whether he can use mental incomptency as a defense at his trial, as the government's motion indicated he might try to do.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Samuel A. Wilson Jr., in his motion, said Moody received ''voluntary psychiatric treatment'' as late as May 1988 from Dr. Dave M. Davis, an Atlanta forensic psychiatrist.

Davis declined comment on the motion, citing patient confidentiality.

Moody is being held in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (SEPT. 19) UPI - A small bomb exploded early Wednesday on the campus of the American University of Beirut in Moslem west Beirut, causing slight damage and no injuries, a university official said.

The official, who requested anonymity, said the homemade bomb went off near the residence of university Deputy President Ibrahim Salti ''who was out of campus when the explosion occurred.''

He said the explosion caused only slight material damage. He added school security guards found another small bomb, but refused to elaborate.

The AUB's Board of Trustees has recently decided to close down the university's Off Campus Program in Christian east Beirut, a move widely criticized by Christian leaders.

The program was introduced in the early days of the civil war that erupted in 1975 and divided the capital on sectarian lines.

AUB, on a sloping hillside campus overlooking the Mediterranean Sea, has become a frequent target of terrorism in recent years. Several Western staff members have been abducted by extremist groups and the university's president, Malcolm Kerr, was assassinated by a gunman in his College Hall office Jan. 18, 1984.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - A former Salvadoran death squad member who sought asylum in the United States and implicated his government in peasant murders has been convicted of illegally entering the country, a published report said Wednesday.

Cesar Vielman Joya-Martinez was convicted in U.S. District Court in Alexandria Va., of re-entering the United States illegally after he was deported in 1983 The Washington Post reported.

''He fled because he was informed he was going to be killed next and made a scapegoat'' for murders committed by the death squads, the Post quoted his lawyer, Daniel S. Alcorn, as saying after the verdict.

He faces a maximum two-year prison term at his sentencing, set for Nov. 30.

Joya-Martinez, 27, claims he took part in the murder of peasants as a member of the Salvadoran Army's elite First Brigade in his government's decade-old civil war against the leftist rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN.

He has further claimed U.S. military officers were involved in his army's interrogation of prisoners who later died under circumstances of torture. While he has never accused any U.S. military officers of involvement in the actual torture of prisoners, he has claimed they were aware of the First Brigade's methods of interrogation and of countless interrogations of individual prisoners.

In the last several years of his illegal residence in the United States, Joya-Martinez has sought out members of Congress to alert them to his claims in hopes of curtailing U.S. financial and military aid to El Salvador.

Since the early 1980s, El Salvador has received more than $4 billion in economic and military aid - 25 percent of it military - from the United States and currently receives about $1.5 million a day to prop up its government and armed forces.

More than 72,000 people have been killed in El Salvador's decade-old civil war - most of them civilians, many thousands at the hands of right-wing ''death squads.

BANGKOK, Thailand (SEPT. 19) UPI - The first meeting of a ''Supreme National Council'' meant to bring peace to Cambodia collapsed Wednesday in a squabble over the chairmanship of the council, officials said.

''Our regret is that for three days we have not been able to reach any agreement,'' said Hun Sen, prime minister of the Vietnamese-backed government of Cambodia.

The adjournment of the meeting among the four battling Cambodian factions damaged the chances of implementing a U.N. peace plan designed to end the nation's 11-year conflict, and opened the way for an escalation of the fighting inside Cambodia.

Hun Sen told reporters the meeting bogged down on the question of the chairmanship of the council, which is supposed to represent Cambodia under the peace plan worked out by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

Although both sides agreed that Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the top resistance leader and former monarch, would be chairman, they differed on whether he would join as 12th or 13th member.

Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan said the resistance wanted Sihanouk to join as the 13th member of the council in accordance with a tentative agreement outlined in Jakarta earlier this month.

Hun Sen, however, said the Jakarta agreement stipulated that there had to be consensus on the additional member. He said the government could not agree to Sihanouk as chairman unless representation on the council remained evenly divided.

The majority would mean little for the operation of the council since all decisions have to be unanimous, but it appeared to be of symbolic importance to the factions.

Khieu Samphan, who heads the most powerful of the three resistance groups, said Hun Sen's refusal to accept Sihanouk was an ''attempt to kill'' the U.N. peace plan and prolong the fighting inside Cambodia.

A Khmer Rouge official, who asked not to be identified, said the collapse of the talks would signal intensified guerrilla attacks against the government.

Khmer Rouge radio, in a broadcast Wednesday morning, said the government offensive began Sept. 6 using Vietnamese soldiers in an attempt to recapture the district town of Pailin. The nearly deserted town has been under Khmer Rouge control since last October.

The radio said the offensive was timed to put pressure on the resistance during the current talks and during the U.N. General Assembly session that began in New York Tuesday.

''The goal of this plan is to gain the military advantage on the battlefield in order to thwart and defeat the resolutions of the U.N. Security Council's five permanent members,'' the radio said.

Hun Sen said the adjournment of the meeting did not mean the end of the council.

''After consultation, if there is some agreement, I think we should reconvene the meeting here,'' he said.

Khieu Samphan proposed that the next meeting of the council be held inside Cambodia, suggesting the ancient temples at Angkor Wat or Khmer Rouge-controlled areas near the Thai border.

But he said ''the next urgent step'' should be to convene a 19-nation conference on Cambodia to work out the details of implementing and guaranteeing the U.N. peace plan.

Hun Sen said that even though there was no agreement on the chairman of the council, it should go on to consider other questions including the selection of Cambodia's delegation to the U.N. General Assembly.

He denied reports from resistance sources that he had demanded to be leader of the council's delegation to the United Nations.

He said he had proposed three formulas for the delegation - all based on equal representation and none including his name.

Khieu Samphan said the resistance coalition would continue to hold Cambodia's U.N. seat, but in deference to the U.N. peace plan, would not send a delegation to the U.N. General Assembly until a delegation was named to represent the Supreme National Council.

KHARTOUM, Sudan (SEPT. 19) UPI - Political steering committees in Sudan joined Iraq and Iran's religious leadership in calling for a ''Holy War'' against non-Islamic troops stationed in the Persian Gulf region, the official Sudan News Agency reported Wednesday.

''We call for the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all foreign troops from the region,'' representatives of the east African nation's Popular Committees said in a statement issued jointly with a visiting Iraqi delegation late Tuesday.

The joint statement - the strongest to date from Sudan - called for ''Holy War and solidarity among Arabs and Moslems wherever they are to protect the Arab and Islamic holy places.''

Sudan's military government has increasingly supported Iraq's position since President Saddam Hussein sent his troops into Kuwait Aug. 2.

In recent weeks it has repeatedly condemned the build-up of U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, taking the fundamentalist Islamic view that the presence of Westerners violates the sanctity of Moslem shrines at Mecca and Medina.

Sudan's Popular Committees are organs of regional political control set up in 1989 by Gen. Omar al Bashir shortly after he seized power in a bloodless coup.

The Iraqi delegation, led by Saif-ul Din Mohamed, member of the ruling Iraq National Council, expressed its gratitude to Sudan for its show of solidarity with Iraq, SUNA reported.

The joint statement condemned the U.N.-approved economic blockade of Iraq, saying: ''The hunger policy will never dismay the Arab nation, and if a war breaks out we shall achieve martyrdom.''

Iran's religious leadership last week similarly called for Holy War against the west in the gulf, despite Tehran's political leadership's strong condemnation of the annexation of Kuwait.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (SEPT. 19) UPI - The European Community's top agriculture official gave an unenthusiastic response to a revised U.S. proposal on farm subsidies, U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said Wednesday.

''I didn't discern a lot of enthusiasm, but I think he listened to what I said

'' Hills said of a Tuesday night meeting with EC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry.

The EC executive Commission was expected to approve Wednesday a new proposal by MacSharry, which calls for far lower cuts in farm subsidies than those sought by the United States.

Less than three months remain in the current round of 105-nation trade-liberalization talks in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The 12-nation EC and the United States remain far apart on the EC's large levels of export subsidies for farmers.

The United States this week announced it would make a new farm subsidy proposal by Oct. 1 at the GATT talks.

The plan, said Hills, would call for cuts of up to 70 percent in domestic supports and market barriers such as tariffs, and cuts somewhat above 70 percent in export subsidies over 10 years.

''He (MacSharry) did not like the specific commitments in the three areas. He said there was not enthusiasm among European farmers for those sorts of reforms at this particular time,'' Hills told a news conference before addressing the European Parliament.

The new EC proposal would reduce farm subsidies by 30 percent over a 10-year period, beginning with 1986 as the base year.

Hills said that would amount to only a 10 percent reduction from current levels, because EC farm supports in 1986 were very high.

The current round of GATT talks are known as the Uruguay Round after the country in which they began four years ago. The round is slated to conclude in Brussels during the first week in December.

''The economic costs of a failed round will be staggering,'' Hills said in her speech to the European Parliament. ''Across the board, the cost of competition will increase. Together, we will lose $300 billion in increased output we expect to gain from more liberal access to foreign markets.''

GATT currently covers only merchandise, and not services or agriculture.

Developing nations which produce farm products cheaply seek an open world market in agriculture, while the West seeks free-trade rules on services and intellectual property, such as copyright.

Without meaningful reduction of farm supports, Hills says, some 50 to 60 countries will ''walk'' from the table, ''and the Uruguay Round will fail for lack of critical participation.''

The EC says its millions of small farmers need continued agricultural supports to protect Europe's heritage and rural way of life.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - High interest rates pushed stock prices lower Wednesday on the Tokyo Stock Exchange for its fifth consecutive session, but the rate of the market's slide eased.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selective issue, which plunged 480.78 points Tuesday, fell another 158.65 points to 23,726.17 - its lowest close of the year.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major listed shares lost 16.61 points to 1,799.72, also its low for the year. TOPIX lost 43.86 points Tuesday.

Volume dropped slightly as an estimated 360 million shares changed hands, compared with 402 million shares Tuesday.

Declines outnumbered advances 565 to 358, while 170 issues remained unchanged.

The market opened with a brief rally, fueled by positive indicators in the futures market, analysts said.

But continuing weakness in the Japanese bond market snuffed out all buying enthusiasm for stocks.

The yield on the bellwether Japanese government bond ended at 8.55 percent, after touching a new high of 8.6 percent during the day, analysts said.

The bonds were hurt by predictions of a rise in the long-term interest rate and by short-term rates of as much as 8.4 percent.

''We can not justify even even these levels (of stock prices) as long as rate interest rates stay so high,'' said Brad Bauer, a broker with Barclay's de Zoete Wedd.

Under such circumstances, there was a complete lack of conviction in the stock market, with no one willing to take a sustained buying position, Bauer said.

Other brokers said bargain-hunting was hampered by semiannual book closing by dealers.

Selling cut across most sectors, with interest-rate-sensitive stocks falling especially hard.

Bank and securities house issues were especially hard-hit.

Elsewhere in Asia, stocks closed lower for the fifth consecutive session in extremely light trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange as wary investors await signals from the Middle East.

The benchmark Hang Seng Index, which fell 23.21 points Tuesday, lost 15.71 points to 2,980.95.

Amonmg the narrower indexes, utilities lost 8.88 points, financials fell 12.92 industrials shed 14.53, and properties dropped 34.98 points.

Volume remained light as an estimated 385 million shares changed hands, compared with 558 million shares Tuesday.

''There was little action today because people are sitting around waiting for things to change in the Gulf,'' said Herman Lam of First Pacific Securities. ''Unless something changes, you can expect the market to go sideways.''

In Singapore, stock prices continued to drift lower in quiet, featureless trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange as investors remained amid worries over climbing oil prices and the Middle East crisis.

The Straits Times Industrial Index, which fell 17.72 points Tuesday, slipped 6.53 points to 1,172.48. The broader-based All Singapore Index, which eased 3.57 points Tuesday, fell 1.35 points to 333.43.

Volume continued at its recent slow pace as an estimated 31.2 million shares changed hands, compared with 46.6 million shares Tuesday.

Analysts said lack of confidence in the market combined with Tokyo's poor performance and worries over oil prices, sent most investors to the sidelines.

On the trading floor, Jurong Shipyard paced the advancing issues followed by Paramount and Central Properties.

Asia Pacific Brewery led the declining issues followed by Development Bank of Singapore foreign shares and Shangri-la Hotel.

In Bangkok, stock prices drifted lower for the third consecutive day in light trading on the Thailand Stock Exchange.

The Stock Exchange of Thailand (SET) Index slipped 1.30 points to 686.89.

Volume remained light as an estimated 1.5 billion shares changed hands, almost unchanged from Tuesday's volume of 1.6 billion shares.

Declines edged out advances 78 to 67. The best-performing shares were in banking and finance sectors.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Housing starts fell 1.7 percent in August for the seventh straight monthly decline and the lowest level since the recession of 1982, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

The latest drop, generally in line with analysts' forecasts, follows a revised decline of 3.5 percent in July and a revised decrease of 1.4 percent in June, according to the department's Census Bureau.

New building permits, an indicator of future construction activity, tumbled 4.3 percent in August after slipping 2.3 percent in July and gaining about 4 percent in June, the government said.

The figures were adjusted for seasonal factors.

A Commerce Department spokesman said August's 1.13 million housing starts, calculated at an annual rate, was the lowest since 1.05 million in August 1982.

Housing permits also hit the lowest level since August 1982, he said.

The last time housing starts scored seven consecutive monthly declines was from May to November 1981, the spokesman said.

Construction of new single-family homes dropped 3.2 percent in August after falling a revised 2.4 percent in July - to the lowest level since October 1982 the department said.

In the apartment sector, construction of dwellings with two, three and four units recovered 6.7 percent in August after diving a revised 28.6 percent in July, the Commerce Department said.

Construction of apartment buildings with five or more units, meanwhile, increased 2.4 percent in August after sliding a revised 3.5 percent during July, the department said.

By region, housing starts gained 8.2 percent in the Northeast in August after a 2.7 percent drop in July, increased 4.9 percent in the Midwest after slumping 7.5 percent, collapsed 10.7 percent in the South after a 7.5 percent drop, and advanced 4 percent in the West after a 6.7 percent gain.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - Coast Guard ships are searching off Massachusetts for two crewmembers missing from a fishing vessel that rolled over and sank while being escorted to harbor 30 miles east of Nantucket Island. A Coast Guard spokesman says nine men on deck were tossed into the water.

Published reports say New York City officials want to go back to putting homeless people in run-down welfare hotels. The report quotes papers filed in Manhattan court showing about 22-hundred families seeking homes came to welfare offices in July and August, up 27 percent from the same time last year. The Legal Aid Society last March went to court to stop homeless people from being placed in welfare hotels.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Philippines and the United States began Wednesday discussions on a broad range of subjects from health to trade that negotiators hoped would lead to a new agreement that will take effect at the expiration of U.S. basing rights next year.

After the opening ceremonies on Tuesday in which chief U.S. negotiator Richard Armitage officially announced U.S. preparedness to reduce its military presence in the country, the two panels spent the first day of formal talks Wednesday addressing largely Philippine concerns.

Briefing reporters after the daylong meeting, Philippine spokesman Rafael Alunan said Philippine experts were presented to discuss issues covering veterans affairs, science and technology, trade, health and social problems.

Defense matters were scheduled to be taken up Thursday, Alunan said.

U.S. spokesman Stanley Schrager said during Wednesday's meeting, Armitage recapped the highlights of his opening remarks Tuesday.

Schrager said this included ''respect for the sovereignty of the Philippines, our willingness to restructure our defense relationship, characterized by a phase down and transition period, the length of which still has to be determined.''

''We want this transition and reduction to be implemented with minimal discomfort and with maximum benefits for both countries,'' Schrager said.

Asked to elaborate on what he meant by phase down, he said ''this will become more clear in the next several days.'' He repeated Armitage's statement Tuesday that ''the days of the full-blown security presence are over.''

The Philippines hosts six U.S. facilities, including the huge Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Station. Manned by 14,500 troops, the bases are the oldest and largest outside continental United States.

The 1947 treaty covering the bases is due to expire in September 1991.

President Corazon Aquino on Monday said she expected an ''orderly withdrawal'' of U.S forces at the end of the bases pact, but did not spell out how long this period will take.

U.S. officials have indicated the withdrawal could take from 10 to 20 years and Armitage hinted as much Tuesday when he said voters of the 21st century should decide on the future of the facilities.

During exploratory talks in May, Armitage said the United States was willing to withdraw from the Philippines if Filipinos decided its presence was no longer needed.

The current talks have elicited little excitement in Manila. Demonstrations held so far were relatively small compared with those in previous years.

Wednesday, a moderate group of 300 marched to the U.S. embassy and the seafront Central Bank where the talks were being and held an anti- bases rally under intermittent rains.

The National Democratic Front, in a statement Wednesday, reiterated its previous stand the communist New Peoples Army would call a unilateral cease-fire if Aquino declared the bases will go at the expiration of the bases pact.

The front is the political arm of the 19,000-member NPA, which has been battling the Manila government for 21 years.

Aquino has ignored previous offers on the subject by the front.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 19) UPI - Andrei Kovalenko scored one minute into overtime Tuesday night to give the Central Army sports club a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Canadiens,leaving the NHL team with a 2-2 split in its four-game exhibition tour of the Soviet Union.

Mark Pederson started the scoring for the Canadians with a goal at five minutes, but the Soviet club drew even two minutes later with a goal by Pavel Bure.

Sylvain Lefebvre put the Canadiens ahead again six minutes into the second period before and Sergei Zubov scored for the Central Army seven minutes later.

A crowd of 11,000 watched the match.

The Canadiens ended their Soviet tour with two wins and two losses. The Minnesota North Stars, also touring the Soviet Union, have lost twice and won once.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - Iraq may be preparing to confiscate property of foreign governments that is on its territory. Iraq's news agency says the Baghdad government has passed a law saying Iraq is NO longer responsible for property in Iraq and occupied Kuwait belonging to governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets in their countries. BEIJING (SEPT. 19) UPI - Courts in a southern Chinese city executed 65 criminals in what is believed to be the largest single-day execution tally since a nationwide anti-crime crackdown began six months ago, an official newspaper said Wednesday.

The executions were carried out Tuesday morning just one week after the human rights group Amnesty International protested the estimated 500 death sentences carried out this year in China.

Coincidentally, Tuesday's editions of the Communist Party's flagship People's Daily carried a strident editorial attack on those who apply ''bourgeois'' Western standards to assess human rights in China.

In socialist countries, the editorial said, only a Marxist point of view is acceptable for reviewing human rights. The editorial appeared to be a rebuttal to Amnesty International's criticisms.

The executions were carried out immediately after the defendants were sentenced in municipal courts in Guangzhou, the city's Yangcheng Evening News reported.

The 65 reported executions were believed to be the largest number carried out in a single day in China since the continuing anti-crime campaign was launched last spring.

Fifteen of the defendants were executed for murder, including one convicted of killing a police officer, the report said. Others were convicted of burglarly, robbery, gun trafficking and the loosely defined crime of ''hooliganism.''

Defendants typically are executed by a single bullet fired into the base of the neck.

The newspaper said 5,000 people attended a post-execution rally and said the nationwide crackdown had received a warm welcome from Guangzhou residents.

Vice Mayor Shi Anhai told the city-organized rally that the campaign had been effective but that society is still far from safe.

''We must achieve a total victory in this campaign against crime,'' Shi said. ''The crackdown has had a stabilizing effect, but the public security situation is still severe.

''You cannot achieve victory with just one campaign,'' Shi added. ''You must conduct a long-term operation.''

The Amnesty International report, which Beijing bitterly denounced last week, said more than 1,100 Chinese had been executed in the past year and expressed concern about what it called a ''dramatic increase'' in executions in China.

The London organization said it was particularly concerned ''because China's trial system falls far below international standards.''

China's hard-line government has lauded the ongoing campaign as crucial for achieving ''social stability'' in advance of this month's Beijing Asian Games and in the wake of last year's pro-democracy movement, which was brutally suppressed on June 4.

The nationwide democracy movement was the broadest challenge to the Communist Party's absolute authority in the 41-year history of the People's Republic.

LIBREVILLE, GABON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Gabonese political opposition parties, citing widespread fraud in last week's parliamentary elections, Wednesday demanded the government resign and new polls under international supervision.

The newly legalized opposition parties said the partial voting results, which gave the ruling Gabonese Democratic Party 37 of the 59 legislative seats decided in the first round of balloting Sunday, were unacceptable because of a combination of administrative incompetence and fraud and should be held again in the presence of foreign observers.

Speaking for six opposition groups, Agondjo-Okawe, leader of the Gabonese Progress Party, proposed at a news conference that new elections be held between December and March of 1991.

He also called for the creation of an interim government representing the principal tendencies of the major opposition parties.

For his part, Paul Mba Abessole, leader of the National Reform Party which won 12 seats in the new 120-member National Assembly, second only to the Democratic Party, said the new balloting should be held under U.N. supervision.

The government of Prime Minister Oye Mba, which saw more than half of its 28 Cabinet members defeated in the first round, did not officially respond to the opposition demands.

In addition to the National Reform Party's 12 seats, the Gabonese Progress Party won five constituencies while the Association for Socialism in Gabon won four seats in the new Parliament. The original National Reform Party was credited with winning one seat.

Sunday's election, the first multi-party vote since Gabon achieved independence from France in 1960, saw 520 candidates representing 38 political parties running for office.

The election was widely seen by African specialists and Western diplomats as a crucial first step towards establishing new, multi-party governments in the former French colonies of West Africa, most of which have been under one-man rule since gaining independence.

But the Gabonese election was marred by poor organization, stuffed ballot boxes, and sporadic acts of violence.

In the most serious incident, a commando of some 20 persons attacked the polling station inside the city hall in the capital of Libreville, forcing authorities to close the facility.

The widespread cheating led the government to annul 32 first round elections, 17 of them in Libreville and its surrounding suburbs. All four races in the economic center of Port Gentil, where widespread rioting last spring that forced a temporary halt in oil extraction and production, were also annulled.

Under the Gabonese electoral system, which is based on the French model, a candidate must obtain at least 50 percent of the vote in order to be elected in the first round, with the second election contested by the two candidates who received the highest number of votes in each election district.

Among the elections annuled was the one in the city of Ntoum, 24 miles east of Libreville, where the prime minister lost his national assembly seat.

Political analysts in Libreville said that despite the ruling Gabonese Democratic Party's clear victory in the first round it was unlikely that President Omar Bongo's political group, until now the only legal party in the West African country, would be able to win an absolute majority in the new legislature.

The analysts pointed out that 17 of the 37 seats won by the ruling party came from Bongo's home province of Haut-Ogooue, where it faced little opposition.

The elections were called by Bongo in response to growing democracy movements across French speaking West Africa largely inspired by last years's democratic revolutions in Eastern Europe.

JACKSON, MS (SEPT. 19) UPI - To defense attorneys the minister was a snitch, a man out to line his pockets with gold. But to the FBI, the Rev. John Burgess stood up for what is right.

Burgess tipped the FBI to widespread corruption in local government that resulted in charges against 57 supervisors in 26 counties and brought about sweeping changes in the way county government operates.

The Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI announced Tuesday it would present its 1990 Louis E. Peters Memorial Award to Burgess on Oct. 27 in Honolulu. The award includes a three-day stay in Hawaii.

Each year, the society gives the award to citizens ''who, at great personal sacrifice, gave unselfishly of themselves to serve their community and nation.'' The award is named after a California car dealer, who was honored in 1981 for his work in exposing organized crime figures who wanted to buy his business. He died of cancer later that year.

''The whole basis of the award is to emphasize the fact that each of us can make a difference,'' said Wayne R. Taylor, special agent in charge of the FBI in Mississippi. ''Each of the recipients identified a ''

Defense attorney Al Binder of Jackson, who represented several supervisors convicted on corruption charges, didn't agree with Taylor. He criticized Burgess for accepting $40,000 from the FBI over the two- year life of ''Operation Pretense.''

''He did it for money,'' Binder said. ''He tried to imply that his motive was pure and that he was doing this for America. But he did it to line his pockets with gold.''

Burgess, 64, pastor of the Pentecostal Church in Carthage, was surprised when notified of the honor.

''You're surprised when you do what you think is your duty and then you get awarded,'' he said. ''Of course, it's a pleasant surprise.''

Burgess said he didn't know what a kickback was in mid-1982, but he soon learned after he invested in a concrete pipe manufacturing company. He learned that the only way to stay in business was to pay a 10 percent kickback to win county contracts. While he refused to accept kickbacks, company salesmen did.

He soon left the business, and by early 1984 he was telling the FBI what he knew. At the FBI's request, Burgess opened Mid State Pipe Co. at Carthage, as a front.

From the business, undercover FBI agents posed as salesmen. Burgess even even wore a hidden microphone and made kickbacks to about 12 people, including supervisors, to gather evidence.

Undercover agents called on customers, made sales and paid kickbacks to supervisors in exchange for contracts. The agents worked a year gathering information then closed Mid State in July 1986.

Of the supervisors charged statewide, 46 pleaded guilty in federal court, while two others entered similar pleas in state court. Six supervisors were tried and convicted. One was acquitted, one was declared mentally incompetent to stand trial, and one died shortly after being indicted.

Taylor said previous efforts to end decades-long corruption failed because they were done piecemeal.

''What Burgess enabled us to do was have an impact.'' Taylor said. ''He didn't do it for the FBI; he did it for everybody.''

During a special legislative session in 1988, legislators passed a law requireing all counties to centralize purchasing and receiving and inventory control. The law consolidated the day-to-day operations of county government and placed it in the hands of a professional manager or administrator.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 19) UPI - A joint committee has been formed by the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange to address common goals and competitive challenges, officials said Wednesday.

The governing boards of the exchanges Tuesday approved creation of the Futures Exchanges Common Goals Committee.

The committee will be co-chaired by Leo Melamed, who will retire at year's end as chairman of the CME Executive Committee, and William F. O'Connor, chairman of the CBOT.

Serving on the committee will be John Geldermann, chairman of the CME Board of Governors, William Brodsky, president and chief executive of the CME, and Thomas Donovan, president and chief executive of the CBOT.

Additional representatives will be appointed by the chairmen of the two exchanges.

The committee will be unlimited in scope and will be charged with exploring ways the exchanges can unify their functions. Specifically, the committee will investigate methods of achieving cost savings and increased efficiency in international marketing, systems development, operations and clearing.

''The goal is of a monumental nature,'' Melamed said. ''Its achievement will be to the benefit of all our members, the clearing members and the public.''

O'Connor said the high cost to both exchanges of meeting the competitive challenges makes it imperative to look for ways of cost- sharing and co-venturing.

The CBOT and CME traded 250 million futures and options contracts in 1989, which was more than one-half of the volume on all of the world's futures and options exchanges.

Earlier this year, the two exchanges agreed in principle to become partners in GLOBEX, the automated after-hours trading system being developed in conjunction with Reuters Holdings PLC.

The CBOT and CME also are sharing the costs of developing AUDIT, a hand-held computer terminal for recording trades, and have traditionally addressed regulatory matters from a common viewpoint.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board said Wednesday the recent jump in oil prices resulting from the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait is threatening to push the U.S. economy into recession - but stopped short of saying an economic downturn has begun.

In prepared testimony before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, Alan Greenspan also did not indicate whether the Fed is inclined to fight the ongoing economic slowdown by lowering interest rates.

Whether the Fed ''would seek higher, lower, or unchanged interest rates will depend on the specifics of the situation, which are shifting day by day,'' Greenspan said. One aspect of the interest-rate question is whether a budget deficit reduction pact can be reached, he said.

Greenspan warned, however, there is little the Fed can do to prevent higher petroleum prices from taking a large bite out of the U.S. economy. ''We must not lose sight of the fact that there is no policy initiative that can in the end prevent the transfer of wealth, and cut in our standard of living, that stems from higher prices for imported oil.''

Oil prices have soared from about $18 a barrel before the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait to as high as $33 a barrel. If projected over one year, the additional costs for oil consequently would add about $85 billion to U.S. energy costs.

Evidence of higher inflation resulting from what Greenspan called the ''1990 oil shock'' came Tuesday when the Labor Department reported consumer prices rose 0.8 percent in August, double the July rate, with half of the increase blamed on energy costs.

Greenspan noted that U.S. economic growth was slowing before the Middle East crisis. ''It is difficult to distinguish the effects of higher oil prices from developments that would have occurred anyway,'' he said. But taking everything into account, Greenspan noted, including economic data and anecdotal reports, ''We are not - at least as yet - witnessing a cumulative unwinding of economic activity,'' or, in other words, a recession.

Nevertheless, Greenspan said ''it would be surprising if the recent developments did not give rise to some pull-back by consumers and businesses.''

If Congress and President Bush succeed in enacting a five-year plan to cut the federal budget deficit by $500 billion, Greenspan said, the Fed could be expected to reduce short-term interest rates. In turn, if the budget agreement is credible, long-term and enforceable, ''I would expect long-term interest rates to decline,'' he said.

BOMBAY, INDIA (SEPT. 19) UPI - An Indian couple allegedly beat to death their 7-year-old niece because they were unhappy about the way she treated their infant son while babysitting him, police said Wednesday.

The couple, identified as Bhagwan and Sharda Patil, both in their 50s, had their first child in January and had brought their 7-year-old niece, Chhaya Borke, from a nearby village to help care for the 9-month- old infant, the police said.

The couple, angry because they felt the girl was not doing a good enough job, allegedly beat the baby sitter to death Tuesday and then became panicky and tried to dispose of the body, they said.

The Patils called a taxi and allegedly took the body to a nearby beach to dump it in the ocean, the police said. When the taxi driver became suspicious, the Patils changed their minds and took the body to a government hospital.

The couple told the doctors the girl had been run down by a taxi, but the physician examining the girl did not believe them. Meanwhile the taxi driver had summoned the police, authorities said.

Police arrested the couple and charged both with murder.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) UPI - It will be harder in the future for particular sports to earn a role in the Summer Olympics.

The International Olympic Committee Wednesday approved tougher criteria in an attempt to cap the number of athletes and sports which are overloading the Games.

Starting in the year 2,000, sports for men will have to be played in 75 countries and four continents before being on the Olympic program. The figure for women is 40 countries and three continents.

Previously, male sports had to be played in 50 countries and three continents, while the comparative figures for women was 35 and three.

The rule will not apply to the 1992 and 1996 Summer Olympics. There has been no change for the Winter Games.

The IOC already has limited the 1992 Barcelona Summer Olympics to 10, 000 athletes in 25 sports.

BONN, WEST GERMAN (SEPT. 19) UPI - The last of seven rail convoys of U.S. chemical munitions arrived Wednesday in the West German port of Nordenham, clearing the way for the final removal this week of all chemical weapons from West Germany, officials said.

The entire U.S. military stocks of 400 tons of chemical weapons is to be shipped by Thursday morning from Nordenham to be incinerated on the Johnston Atoll in the Pacific islands.

Once the weapons have been shipped out of Germany, there will be no more chemical weapons officially stored in Europe.

Officials observing the removal codenamed ''Operation Dragon'' said that a bomb scare and the replacement of a soldier who fell ill caused minor delays in the final train's arrival.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, General Crosbie E. Saint, commander of the U.S. Army in Europe, and West German Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg will officially bring the removal operation to a close Friday at a public celebration in Clausen, where the weapons had been stored for nearly 30 years.

The United States agreed to remove the chemical weapons from West Germany at the 1986 economic summit in Tokyo.

The cost of the operation has been estimated at $46 million and involved more than 10,000 soldiers and West German policemen since the first train left Clausen last Wednesday.

West Germany was the only European country to store U.S. chemical weapons.

Both East and West Germany have committed themselves to ban any production of atomic, biological and chemical weapons on German soil.

The two Germanys are scheduled to be reunited next month.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 19) UPI - Rumeal Robinson, former University of Michigan guard who was the 10th pick in the first round of the last NBA draft, has signed a four-year contract with the Atlanta Hawks for $1.1 million a year.

Robinson, according to his agent, David Falk, is only the third of the top 14 1990 picks to have signed. The others are No. 4 Dennis Scott of Georgia Tech who signed with Orlando and No. 14 Travis Mays of Texas who signed with Sacramento.

Robinson, 6-foot-2, 195, hit two free throws with three seconds remaining in overtime against Seton Hall to give Michigan the 1989 NCAA basketball championship.

To make room for Robinson under their salary cap, the Hawks renounced the rights to free agents Cliff Levingston and John Long, both unrestricted free agents, and waived restricted free agent Duane Ferrell.

Levingston, 30, is an eight-year NBA veteran who spent two years with Detroit before joining Atlanta in 1984. Long and Ferrell both joined the Hawks last season.

JERUSALEM (SEPT. 19) UPI - Ushering in the Jewish New Year Wednesday, President Chaim Herzog told Israelis they were witnessing a miracle with the influx of new immigrants and Prime Minister Yitzhak warned the nation must be ready to confront dangers in the region.

In extensive New Year interviews and greetings on Israel Radio and in newspapers, Israeli politicians addressed the Persian Gulf crisis triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, and their hopes a resolution would be achieved without bloodshed.

But they emphasized that if a war erupted and Israel was pulled into the conflict, the country would be able to defend itself.

''A situation could arise in which we face Saddam Hussein alone and then we have to give an answer as to how to overcome this giant-size evil,'' Shamir said in a Rosh Hashana interview with the newspaper Yediot Ahronot. Asked if Israel had the ability to face Saddam, Shamir answer, ''Our will is our strength.''

''The gravity of the crisis leads us to wonder whether once and for all the world has realized that the central problem of the Middle East is not the Israel-Arab dispute,'' Herzog said in his message to the Israeli people, broadcast on radio and published in newspapers.

''Rather it is the persistent instability of the Arab world, particularly of those states rich in natural resources and controlling the fuel that is the lifeblood of the industrialized nations.''

Millions of Jews in Israel and around the world ushered in Jewish New Year 5751 at sundown by attending religious services or joining in festive meals. The two-day festival, which leads into the Jewish Sabbath, also provided a long holiday for Israelis who were expected to pack beaches and resort areas.

As the holiday start neared, the streets of Jerusalem were quiet in comparison to the hustle earlier in the day when Israelis rushed about town for last-minute shopping and street vendors hawked flowers.

The ''shofar,'' a ram's horn is traditionally blown on Rosh Hashana as a symbol of calling the masses to gather for the holiday, which begins a 10-day period of reflection and repentence that culminates with fasting on Yom Kippur the day of atonement.

In his New Year message, Herzog touched on the gulf crisis, the peace process, immigration, economic problems, the 1990 fall of the government and the political turmoil in creating a new coalition. He also discussed the consistently high number of traffic fatalities, a frequent theme in his speeches.

On immigration, Herzog sounded an upbeat note. Since the start of 1990, an estimated 100,000 new immigrants have arrived, including more than 92,000 from the Soviet Union. By the end of 1992, 1 million Soviet Jews are expected to have come to Israel, immigration officials predicted.

Despite religious prohibitions observed by Orthodox Jews against travel on Rosh Hashana, an estimated 2,000 new immigrants were expected to arrive during the festival because their flights could not be postponed.

''It is the miracle of the Return to Zion that we are witnessing with our own eyes,'' Herzog said. ''Those among us who doubt (our) ability to absorb the tens of thousands arriving, must remember and remind others of the difficult days at the end of the 40s' and beginning of the 50s' when Israel stood on the brink of disaster and nevertheless absorbed great waves'' of immigrants.

The Israeli government, despite economic difficulties, is working to integrate the newcomers and if Israel is successful, ''we will discover that the human wealth we are absorbing has advanced us toward a period of economic growth and prosperity,'' Herzog said.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - Stock prices continued to slide in light trading Wednesday on major global markets as worries over inflation and the recent jump in oil prices dampened investor enthusiam.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan painted a pessimistic picture on the outlook for U.S. inflation in remarks prepared for delivery before the Congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Greenspan said the recent jump in oil prices resulting from the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait is threatening to push the U.S. economy into recession - but stopped short of saying an economic downturn has begun.

''Despite the general sluggishness in business activity this year, the underlying trend in inflation has not improved,'' he said.

Whether the Fed ''would seek higher, lower, or unchanged interest rates will depend on the specifics of the situation, which are shifting day by day,'' Greenspan said. One aspect of the interest-rate question is whether a budget deficit reduction pact can be reached, he said.

Greenspan warned, however, there is little the Fed can do to prevent higher petroleum prices from taking a large bite out of the U.S. economy.

The higher oil prices will produce negative growth in the fourth quarter gross national product, say Kidder, Peabody & Co. economists.

In the firm's latest 'Capital Market Report,' the economists say ''oil prices are expected to remain above $30 a barrel for at least the next two months.''

''With oil prices above the crucial $30 level and with the growing likelihood of a Mideast conflict and spot shortages of petroleum products, our forecast of a recession is now a likely scenario,'' the economists said.

Investors reacted to the Greenspan comments by sending stocks lower in New York, London and across Europe.

Earlier, high interest rates worries sent stock prices lower in light trading on the Tokyo Stock Exchange for the fifth consecutive session. The Nikkei Average of 225 selective issue, which plunged 480.78 points Tuesday, fell another 158.65 points to 23,726.17 - its lowest close of the year.

Analysts in Tokyo said continuing weakness in the Japanese bond market snuffed out all buying enthusiasm for stocks.

The yield on the bellwether Japanese government bond ended at 8.55 percent, after touching a new high of 8.6 percent during the day. The bonds were hurt by predictions of a rise in the long-term interest rate and by short-term rates of as high as 8.4 percent, analysts said.

Stocks fell to their lowest level in nearly two years on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange as wary investors extending their losing streak to the fifth consecutive session. The benchmark Hang Seng Index, which fell 23.21 points Tuesday, lost another 15.71 points to 2,980.95.

''There was little action today because people are sitting around waiting for things to change in the Gulf,'' said Herman Lam of First Pacific Securities. ''Unless something changes, you can expect the market to go sideways.''

Stocks continued to ease on the Singapore Stock Exchange in extremely lethargic trading as investors remained sidelined amid worries over oil prices and the Middle East crisis.

The Straits Times Industrial Index, which fell 17.72 points Tuesday, slipped 6.53 points to 1,172.48.

In Bangkok, stocks eased for the third consecutive day on the Thailand Stock Exchange. The Stock Exchange of Thailand Index slipped 1.30 points to 686.89.

''The market was depressed because there is only negative sentiment,'' said Vicharat Vichit-Vadakan, a Managing Director of Phatanasin Co., Ltd in Thailand said.

In Taipei, stocks plummeted 4 percent in extremely light trading on the Taiwan Stock Exchange amid worries of higher oil prices and their impact on the local economy. The Taipei Weighted Index plunged 132.38 points to 3,159.27.

In Australia, stocks fell to their lowest level since May on the Sydney Sharemarket. The All Ordinaries Index, which lost 5.0 points Tuesday, tumbled 20.6 points - or 1.4 percent - to 1,451.7.

NANTUCKET, MA (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Coast Guard searched Wednesday for two crewmembers who were scrambling to escape a fishing vessel as it rolled over and sank Tuesday night 30 miles east of Nantucket Island.

The Coast Guard said nine men on deck at the time were tossed into the water but were rescued. The two men who were trying to get out of the engine room when the scalloper sank were missing, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The Coast Guard said the 87-foot Aristocrat, based at Cape May, N.J., began taking on water Sunday afternoon about 150 miles southeast of Nantucket. A Coast Guard helicopter dropped pumps to the stricken vessel Monday, and it was being escorted toward Buzzards Bay Tuesday night when further problems were discovered.

Coast Guardsmen aboard the escorting cutter Tamaroa noticed the Aristocrat riding low in the water and suggested the vessel be checked for further leaks. Flooding was then discovered in a large stern compartment.

''It rolled over and sank two minutes after the flooding was discovered,'' said Coast Guard spokesman Steve Aitkins. ''It probably sank to the bottom quite quickly after that.'' The ocean is about 170 feet deep at that point, he said.

Aitkins said the nine men on deck at the time were wearing lifejackets. They were thrown into the water as the vessel rolled but a small boat from the Tamaroa rescued all of them.

Survivors told the Coast Guard the two missing crewmen were trying to get out of the engine room when the vessel sank. Both were from New Bedford, Mass. They were identified as Gary Shannon, 26, and Andrew Parisi, 35.

The Cutter Point Francis was taking the survivors to New Bedford and were expected to dock about 6 p.m.

Two helicopters and the Tamaroa were searching for the missing men. Five fishing vessels were also helping in the search, the Coast Guard said.

Aitkins said a lot of debris floated to the surface from the Aristocrat, which is owned by Aristocrat Inc. of Marion, Pa.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 19) UPI - Grain and soybean futures extended their opening losses at midmorning Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Some of the strength in corn and soybeans on Tuesday was based on the likelihood of frost in northern areas of the Midwest early next week. By early Wednesday, forecasters had reduced the chances of a damaging frost, which resulted in most of the early selling activity.

Losses in corn and beans were limited by the rain and cool weather across the major production areas, along with a pick-up in export business.

Taiwan bought 54,000 tons of soybean overnight, Pakistan reportedly bought soybean oil and South Korea was in the market for corn.

Wheat was lower across the board. Light commercial selling was countered by light professional buying.

Light country movement and steady basis levels kept a floor under the market.

The midmorning prices:

Corn Sep 2.33 off 4; Dec 2.23 1/4 off 2 3/4; Mar 2.33 off 3.

Soybeans Sep 6.13 off 9 1/2; Nov 6.24 off 9 1/4; Jan 6.38 1/2 off 9 1/2; Mar 6.51 1/2 off 8 3/4.

Wheat Sep 2.57 off 2 1/2; Dec 2.72 1/2 off 2 1/2; Mar 2.87 1/4 off 2 1/4.

BOSTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - A large study has provided further evidence that an inhaled drug that AIDS patients once had to get on the black market can prevent deadly AIDS-related pneumonia, researchers said Wednesday.

Only eight of 139 people infected with the AIDS virus who received high doses of aerosol pentamidine developed Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, or PCP, during the 18-month study. That compares with 22 cases of PCP among 135 AIDS-infected patients given much smaller doses of the drug, said Dr. Gifford Leoung of the University of California-San Francisco.

PCP is extremely rare among people whose immune systems have not been weakened by factors like the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, but it is the leading cause of death among people with HIV, the study noted.

Aerosol pentamidine, which is inhaled, has been widely used for several years by AIDS patients who obtained it on the black market. It generally is used in people whose levels of key immune cells called T-4 helpers drop below 200 cells per cubic millimeter of blood. A normal level is about 800 cells.

Last year, the Food and Drug Administration approved use of aerosol pentamidine to prevent PCP and it is now widely prescribed. However, the new study is the largest controlled study to date of the drug's effectiveness and safety, Leoung and colleagues said in The New England Journal of Medicine.

The study involved 408 HIV patients, including 139 who inhaled a 300-milligram dose of aerosol pentamidine every four weeks and 135 who received a 30-milligram dose every two weeks. A third group of 134 people received an intermediate 150-milligram dose of the drug every two weeks.

At the study's end, eight people receiving the largest dose had experienced an episode of PCP, versus 16 receiving the intermediate dose and 22 the smallest dose, the researchers said. Five people in the large dose group died from PCP, six in the intermediate group and five in the low-dose group.

''There is a clear trend here that more (pentamidine) is better, at least in these dosages. And a higher dose every four weeks is better than a lower one every two weeks,'' Leoung said.

The most common side effect attributed to pentamidine was a cough, but only 2 percent of patients stop using the drug because of it.

In a separate study appearing in the journal, another group of San Francisco researchers reported a combination of the microbe-fighting drugs trimethoprim and dapsone is as effective in fighting first episodes of PCP in AIDS patients as the standard drug timethoprim- sulfamethoxazole, but causes fewer adverse side effects.

JERUSALEM (SEPT. 19) UPI - Defense Minister Moshe Arens returned to Israel Wednesday after Israeli sources said he secured a U.S. leasing agreement for F-15 jets and Patriot missiles amid the Persian Gulf crisis and a proposed $20 billion U.S. arms sale to Saudi Arabia.

The deal came out of Arens' meetings in Washington this week with U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, during which the Israeli defense minister told U.S. officials his country needed $1 billion in emergency military aid and an additional $750 million in annual defense funds.

Israel sources told The Jerusalem Post newspaper that Cheney and Arens agreed on the leasing of 15 F-15A and F-15B warplanes, two Patriot anti-aircraft and anti-missile batteries and 10 CH-3 cargo helicopters.

Upon his return to Israel before the start of the Jewish New Year, Arens said he was generally satisfied with his U.S. trip, but said more work needed to be done. He declined to comment on the specifics of the deal.

Arens said it was not clear when the United States would respond to Israel's request for more military aid, but he hoped the deal was an indication Israel would ultimately receive what it requested.

Israeli officials, awaiting a briefing from Arens, said they believed the deal would be the first such U.S.-Israeli lease agreement.

''It certainly would be considered as a step in the right direction,'' said Avi Pazner, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's media adviser. ''Israel's defense needs have now increased many folds and (the deal) is not a complete answer to all our needs.''

Israel has consistently maintained it must not lose its qualitative military edge in the region and Israeli officials said they have received assurances from Washington. Last week, Saudi Arabia informally notified the U.S. Congress of its intent to purchase about $20 billion in sophisticated aircraft, advanced armored vehicles and missiles.

The Saudi shopping list included 24 F-15s, C and F models, in addition to 24 already ordered by the Saudis in a package sent to Congress Sept. 4, 385 M-1 tanks, and between 20 to 28 Patriot missiles, which can intercept incoming ballistic missiles and aircraft.

''Israel is in need of instruments that are vital for her defense, and she has to receive it not in the frame of the regular defense assistance, meaning in exchange for payment,'' Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told Army Radio.

Israel receives $3 billion in U.S. economic and military assistance, of which an estimated $1.8 billion is in military aid.

''The U.S. is committed to maintaining Israel's technological superiorty,'' Assistant U.S. Secretary of Defense Henry Rowen told The Jerusalem Post. ''We've had an intense series of meetings the last couple of days. I hope (Arens) feels pretty good about it.''

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Sri Lankan government Wednesday denounced an Amnesty International report on its alleged human rights abuses as ''wild'' and ''one-sided.''

The government reaction came amid reports of continuing violence in the eastern part of the country, where security forces clashed with the Libertion Tigers of Tamil Eelam, leaving at least 17 rebels dead.

A senior military official said the encounter occurred when security forces surprised Tiger rebels as they were laying land mines Tuesday near Chavalakadai, a town near the eastern city of Amparai, 135 miles east of Colombo.

The Tigers are fighting for an independent homeland for the nation's minority Tamils in the north and east of the country.

Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, released a report alleging the Sri Lankan government licensed terror tactics by its security forces.

The report said the government forces are responsible for thousands of killings, disappearances, arbitrary attacks and roundups in a campaign to supress armed opposition.

The report, which covered the years 1987-1990, charged that thousands of people have ''disappeared'' or been killed by security forces in recent years in the south of Sri Lanka and that hundreds more have fallen victim to violence in the latest wave of repression in the northeast.

The government had no official reaction as of Wednesday afternoon, but a senior official of the government's information department hinted that one might be forthcoming.

''The AI's charges are an annual feature,'' the official said. ''We don't have to rush in to react to the wild, one-sided allegations. We will respond at the appropriate time. We are not preparing any statements now.''

A Cabinet minister, who asked not to be identified, said the government might discuss the issue at the weekly Cabinet meeting later Wednesday and release an official reaction Thursday.

Allegations of human rights violations apparently is a touchy subject with the Sri Lankan government. On Sept. 12, a lawmaker carrying documents alleging human rights violations by security forces was detained by authorities before he could board a plane bound for Geneva to hand over the files to a human rights group.

Police seized the documents but later released Mahinda Rajapakse, a member of the opposition Sri Lanka Freedom Party, and allowed him to continue on to Geneva. Authorities apparently confiscated the potentially damaging material under emergency security regulations.

A state of emergency is in force in Sri Lanka due to the ongoing war between the government and the Tamil separatists in the north and east.

Amnesty International and other such groups have frequently accused the Sri Lankan government of large-scale human rights violations.

LONDON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Politicians, writers and human rights supporters Wednesday urged the Iranian government to drop its death sentence against Salman Rushdie, whose novel ''The Satanic Verses'' was deemed blasphemous by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

''We urge the government of Iran to act in a positive, generous and tolerant spirit to revoke the edict against Mr. Rushdie's life and the offer of bounty money, and so speedly bring this unhappy chapter to a close,'' the group wrote in a letter to Iranian President Akbar Hashemi- Rafsanjani.

Khomeini, Iran's spiritual leader, ordered the execution of Rushdie on Feb. 14 1989, four months before his own death. Businessmen and government agencies offered a bounty to whoever killed him.

Rushdie, a British citizen of Indian origin, has been in hiding ever since.

The letter was circulated on behalf of the signatories by Article 19, a London-based organization that supports freedom of press and speech, and the International Committee for the Defense of Salman Rushdie and his Publishers.

Among those who signed the letter were Czechoslovakian President Vaclav Havel and Soviet, German, French and Polish officials as well as American, Palestinian, Indian professors and writers.

The appeal said since the edict was announced ''one of the world's most distinguished authors has been obliged to live secretly and in fear of assassination. The consequences have extended to the disruption of the lives of his family.

''An end to this disturbing and unacceptable situation must now be found,'' the letter said. ''However, we believe that no resolution to the affair can be achieved while the threat of murder continues to hang over Mr. Rushdie's head.''

It said the present Gulf crisis underlines the urgency to solve the problem and welcomed Iran's readiness to resume diplomatic ties with Britain, which were severed following Khomeini's death order.

Britain has said revoking the threat against Rushdie is a precondition to resuming relations.

The government recently reiterated its respect for Islam, saying it did not intend to insult Moslems in condemning the death threat. Tehran welcomed the conciliatory gesture.

AUSTIN, TX (SEPT. 19) UPI - Police expanded their investigation Wednesday into fraternity hazing incidents at the University of Texas after a student said three assailants used a knife to carve Greek letters on his face.

Brent Baresh, 24, an inactive member of the Sigma Chi fraternity, told police he was attacked early Monday while jogging near the campus.

The attack on Baresh prompted the second investigation into fraternity-related violence at the university this week.

''I definitely thought I was going to die,'' Baresh said.

He told investigators the attackers pinned him to the ground and one of them cut the letters of the fraternity onto his cheeks.

''I smelled alcohol on his breath and didn't know what would happen next,'' Baresh said of the man who straddled him and slashed his face. ''If somone had the nerve to pull a knife and cut you, you don't know what they're going to do.''

The man cut an S on his left cheek and an X, the Greek letter for chi, on his other cheek. Baresh, a transfer student from the University of Houston, also suffered cuts on the forehead, chin and arm.

''He pulled out a knife and said, 'Let me show you how sharp it is,''' Baresh said. ''He said, 'Let me show you how to spell Sigma Chi.'''

Police said they had no suspects or leads in the case, which is also being investigated by the Interfraternity Council and the university.

Travis County Attorney Ken Oden called for stronger enforcement of hazing laws Tuesday following an incident where a Texas student was found blindfolded, bound and gagged behind a fraternity house.

Two 18-year-old men were arrested in that incident, which occurred about 2 a.m. Monday at the Pi Kappa Alpha house.

''I'm not going to compare them to street gangs right now and say that all fraternities are engaged in his kind of behavior, because they're not,'' Oden said. ''I think there are some fraternities that have not gotten the message that being in a fraternity does not give you any special exemptions under the law.''

Hazing incidents at Texas have led to the deaths of two students in recent years - Mark Seeberger in 1986 and Gregg Scott Phillips in 1988.

Seeberger died of alcohol poisoing and Phillips fell off a cliff while running from two fraternity members who had been trying to throw him in the pool of a sorority house.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (SEPT. 19) UPI - Bulgaria's revamped Communist Party will retain complete control of the government under a new Cabinet that is expected to be unveiled within 24 hours, party leaders said Wednesday.

The prospect of continued one-party rule in Bulgaria became a virtual certainty after the major opposition parties refused to enter into a coalition with the ruling Bulgarian Socialist Party, as the communists now call themselves.

Party leaders said acting Prime Minister Andrei Loukanov was expected to name a new all-Socialist Cabinet on Wednesday. They expressed hope that the new government and its program, to be announced later, would receive wide support in the Parliament so much-needed economic reforms could be implemented.

The Socialists have been unable to form a government more than three months after winning a majority in parliament in the country's first democratic elections in 44 years.

The opposition, led by the Union of Democratic Forces, has refused to join a coalition government unless the Socialists agree to a program of radical economic reforms.

Socialist leader Alexander Lilov, in an interview with the party newspaper Douma, said the opposition had rejected a proposal by President Zhelyu Zhelev for a ''program government,'' in which a bi- partisan Cabinet would be appointed to administer a program of reforms.

Earlier this week, about 30,000 Bulgarians attended a rally in Sofia in what the opposition umbrella organization Union of Democratic Forces called the meeting ''a demonstration for parliamentary democracy.''

Georgi Spassov, a member of the group's coordinating council, said the opposition ''says no to the iron fist of neo-communism, no to violence and yes -loudly and firmly - to democracy.''

MIAMI (SEPT. 19) UPI - The 11th tropical depression of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season followed a westward path Wednesday through the mid- Atlantic Ocean, and some strengthening was expected.

At noon EDT, the depression was centered near latitude 15.7 north, longitude 49.7 west, or about 780 miles east of the Leeward Islands, the National Hurricane Center said.

The system was moving west at 10 mph and was expected to continue that motion for the next 24 hours. Maximum sustained winds were near 35 mph, just 4 mph shy of tropical storm strength.

Forecasters predicted the system would strengthen into the season's 10th tropical storm, which would be named Josephine, late Wednesday or early Thursday.

Four storms - Bertha, Diana, Gustav and Isidore - have developed into hurricanes with winds of more than 74 mph so far this season. But none caused significant damage to land.

The hurricane season runs June 1 to Nov. 30.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - An unexpected rise in U.S. gasoline inventories drove world oil prices down in early trading Wednesday with relative quiet prevailing in the Persian Gulf crisis.

Unleaded gasoline for October delivery had fallen 2.31 cents from Tuesday's close to 89.30 cents a gallon after opening at 88.5 cents a gallon and trading as low as 88 cents a gallon in morning trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

October heating oil had fallen 0.63 cent to 85.80 cents a gallon.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery was down 86 cents to $32.55 a barrel.

Late Tuesday, the oil industry's American Petroleum Institute reported gasoline inventories last week rose 5.9 million barrels from the prior week to 217 million barrels, close to year-ago levels of 218.6 million barrels.

The API also reported that heating oil supplies rose 1.6 million barrels to 131.7 milion barrels, more than 10 million barrels above last year, while crude oil stocks dropped 4.5 million barrels.

''It's the disappointing API statistics report, particularly gasoline,'' said Kirk Kinnear, a trader with the Phibro Division of Salomon Brothers in Greenwich, Conn.

He said the market had been expecting ''a breakeven or a drawdown in gasoline stocks.''

The unanticipated rise in gasoline inventories was ''a big number, one of the biggest I can remember,'' the trader said.

With the Sept.3 Labor Day holiday weekend ending the summer heavy- driving season, the API statistics also indicated daily demand for U.S. gasoline dropped 600,000 barrels - or 8 percent - to 6.8 million barrels, said Tom Bentz, trading director at New York's United Energy Inc.

The United States accounts for about 25 percent of the world's oil consumption.

''The pullback in the products weighed on crude prices,'' Bentz said. ''Profit taking in the European market is also putting pressure on us,'' he added.

On the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent was down $1.40 at midday to $34.70 a barrel.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai Light, the key Middle East crude shipped mainly to the Far East, had lost $1.25 to $28 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, WTI for prompt delivery had declined $1 from Tuesday's close to $32.40 a barrel.

Wednesday was one of the few days since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait that the Middle East crisis didn't dominate oil markets.

''There was no news in the market,'' Bentz said.

Iraq passed a law allowing it to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad and declared it was no longer responsible for the safety of foreign property in occupied Kuwait and Iraq.

That move came as the U.N. Security Council prepared to discuss an air embargo against Iraq to tighten enforcement of economic sanctions imposed after the invasion of Kuwait.

WARSAW, POLAND (SEPT. 19) UPI - President Wojciech Jaruzelski has offered to step down in November if Parliament agrees to move up presidential elections scheduled for next year to this fall, a senior Solidarity official said.

The Sejm, the lower house of Parliament, was scheduled to meet Thursday and Friday to discuss an amendment to the Constitution which would allow an early general election to choose a new president.

It is widely believed the Sejm will approve the amendment.

Pressure has been mounting on Jaruzelski to resign and various political groups have collected sigantures on petitions urging the general, the sole remaining senior official of Poland's former communist government, to step down.

Bronislaw Geremek, chairman of the Solidarity caucus in parliament, said at a news conference that Jaruzelski filed a letter with the Sejm asking it to shorten his term in office.

Jaruzelski's spokesman confirmed the letter, saying the president acted to ''prevent unnecessary social emotions'' - a reference to the public demand for him to go.

''The presidential office term would expire two months after the amendment to the Constitution came into effect,'' Geremek said disclosing the contents of Jaruzelski's letter and hinting he will resign in the second half of November.

''The parliamentary elections can be held in early spring next year,'' said Geremek.

Earlier, police hauled off demonstrators who blockaded the gate of Jaruzelski's home to demand he resign.

About 15 demonstrators from the right-wing Confederation of Independent Poland sat down at the gate and vowed to stay as long as Jaruzelski held his job. An official in the residence said Jaruzelski was inside.

''Jaruzelski has been in office 13 months too long,'' said demonstrator Henryk Kozakiewicz, referring to the time Jaruzelski has held office since formation of Poland's Solidarity government.

The demonstrators chanted ''Jaruzelski must go'' and ''Soviet servants'' as 30 police officers hauled them into police vehicles. Police also took down a poster from the gate demanding Jaruzelski's resignation.

The Confederation of Independent Poland, one of the right-wing parties, said Tuesday Jaruzelski, who supressed Solidarity with the imposition of martial law in 1981, should step down immediately.

Jaruzelski was elected president last year for five years as the result of the historic round-table talks between the former communist regime and Solidarity.

Solidarity was allowed to install its government with Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki and Jaruzelski got the presidential job despite the fact that the Communist Party he led for many years collapsed.

Jaruzelski's spokesman released the statement following the meeting between Jaruzelski, Mazowiecki, Solidarity founder Walesa and other leaders of major political parties held in the residence of Catholic Cardinal Jozef Glemp Tuesday.

The meeting failed to resolve a controversial issue between Walesa, who declared Monday he would run for president, and Mazowiecki on whether the presidential election should be held ahead of parliamentary elections this fall or next year.

Walesa supports the earlier option.

The Sejm meets in session Thursday and Jaruzelski's letter may pave the way for the final parliamentary decision dealing with the political timetable of further transformations.

DALLAS (SEPT. 19) UPI - A black county official warned of open warfare if the city hires a ''good old boy'' police chief who would be insensitive to minorities, The Dallas Morning News said Wednesday.

''If you try to bring in a 'good old boy' in this system, we're going to be in the streets,'' Dallas County Commissioner John Wiley Price said. ''Physically, literally, shooting folks. We're not going to tolerate it.''

Price said in a telephone call to the newspaper later Tuesday he would advocate violence against police only if police were violent against civilians. He confirmed Wednesday his remarks were serious.

''If they want a war zone, let them pick one of those good old boys,'' he said in the Morning News interview. ''We will call to arms, real simple. And then we will stand by whatever we do.''

The city is searching for a chief to succeed Mack Vines, who was fired last week after a county grand jury indicted him on one count of misdemeanor perjury. Vines was popular with some minority groups.

Price made his latest comments when asked if he was serious about similar remarks made in a taped interview last Friday.

The outspoken county official said he was serious. ''M-16s and all, we will take to the (expletive) streets,'' he said.

Price cited the case of Etta Collins, a 70-year-old woman who was shot by a Dallas policeman on her front porch in October 1986. He said anti-police violence would only be the beginning if a similar incident happened.

''Not only shoot at police, we're going to take this whole city,'' he said. ''And, you know, were going to take it into our own hands because it's our city.''

Vines, City Manager Jan Hart and Mayor Annette Strauss had little to say about Price's comments.

Hart would only say that Price ''has made it clear he prefers an outside police chief.'' Price said he considers ''an old boy'' someone who would be appointed from within the department.

Police Cpl. James Allen, president of the predominately black Texas Peace Officers Association, said citizens would not follow Price's ''call to arms.''

''I can understand the frustration he (Price) is trying to vent,'' Allen said. ''But to say that we as a people should call for citizens to take up arms, absolutely not.''

Deputy Mayor Diane Ragsdale, one of two black City Council members, would not comment directly but said Price's remarks reflect the frustration felt by a large part of the minority community.

''It's obvious he's extremely angry, and legitimately so, because of the gross injustices that continue to exist in this city,'' Ragsdale said. ''I join him in his anger. I'm very angry and frustrated myself.''

CAIRO (SEPT. 19) UPI - Egypt raised the price of its crude oil Wednesday by $2 a barrel to $34.30, the highest price in more than eight years, a government official said.

The latest hike - the second in three days - was taken ''in light of the developments in the world market,'' Hammad Ayoub, deputy chairman of the state-owned Petroleum Corp., told the semi-official Middle East News Agency.

Since the Persian Gulf crisis erupted Aug. 2, when Iraq invaded the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait, the price of oil has rocketed on world markets.

Prior to the invasion and the U.N. embargo on 4 million barrels in exports from Kuwait and Iraq, prices had been at their lowest ebb in four years, suffering from a glut estimated by oil experts at more than 1 million barrels a day.

BY DANIEL DROSDOFF - UPI

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (SEPT. 19) UPI - President Carlos Menem has risked a temporary setback in popularity at home by sending ships to join the naval blockade against Iraq, but he expects international dividends as compensation.

Argentina's decision, announced Tuesday night, to become the first Latin American nation to send warships to the Persian Gulf to help enforce the blockade is a sharp departure from that nation's historic policy of non-alignment.

Argentina was neutral during World War I, prospering by selling grain and beef to the warring armies.

In stayed neutral for nearly all of World War II, declaring war on the Axis, under heavy international pressure, just days before the fall of Berlin.

Public opinion polls are showing that between 60 and 70 percent of Argentines oppose Menem's decision to send two destroyers to enforce the multinational blockade against Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Congressional sentiment also appears mostly hostile, but Menem sidestepped Congress with semantics, saying the Argentine warships were a ''peace force'' not intended to engage in combat.

Since the mission was non-belligerent, Menem argued, it did not need approval by Congress as required by the constitution in cases of war.

However, Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo said Wednesday at a news conference to foreign correspondents that the Argentine warships ''would obviously defend themselves'' in case they were attacked.

He said the task force was designed to help put teeth into U.N. sanctions and were authorized to ''use proportionate force as stipulated by the United Nations,'' meaning minimum force.

Menem is after bigger stakes than showing the Argentine flag in the Middle East.

His real goal is to build a better relationship with the United States and other Western countries that in the past have been suspicious of his Peronist Party, founded in the 1940's with a distinct nationalist and anti-U.S. tint.

The party founder, the late three-time President Juan Domingo Peron, was aligned with a pro-Axis group of army officers before he took power, and he invented the term ''Third Position,'' which eventually evolved into Argentina's identification with the Third World.

Now Argentina badly needs help from the West.

It has not had enough money to service its foreign debt of $70 billion since 1988, and it counts on influence of the United States and other friendly Western states to help gain credits from the International Monetary Fund and World Bank despite an overall poor payment record.

Argentina is also hoping to gain a bigger market for its agricultural and industrial products in the United States as part of President Bush's Latin American initiative, announced last June, to construct a free trade zone from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego, a large island on Argentina's southern tip.

By bettering Argentina's image in the West, the Argentine leadership expects to lure more private investors.

Menem is counting on the private investment in industries such as petroleum, airlines, railroads, telephones and electricity to bail out state operations that have been inefficient and are now being sold off.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - The House vote to effectively shut down the federally subsidized crop insurance program at the end of this month is being challenged by a powerful Senate panel.

The future of crop insurance has been in doubt since the start of this year when the Bush administration proposed termination of the program, with the successor to be a stand-by system of disaster-relief payments.

Farm-state congressmen prefer the idea of reforming crop insurance, which has swallowed an average annual subsidy of $500 million during the past decade, but have been unable to agree on how to do it.

The House voted this summer to give the Federal Crop Insurance Corp. only enough money in fiscal 1991 to cover policies sold by Sept. 30. Under that plan, no other policies would be sold until the program was reformed.

However, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted Wednesday to supply full funding to the FCIC - a total of $325.8 million, or $224 million more than the House allotted. It also earmarked $174 million more than the House to pay the cost of subsidizing the premiums paid by farmers who buy crop insurance.

''I do not believe this is any time to leave farmers, their suppliers and dealers in the lurch,'' said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, pointing to recent sizable increases in participation.

As part of providing money for crop insurance, the committee approved a $51.16 billion agriculture appropriations bill for fiscal 1991. The bill is $815 million more than the approved by the House but still is $1.5 billion below the administration proposal.

Congress appropriated $45.2 billion for the Agriculture Department and related agencies for this fiscal year.

The administration has said it will continue to operate the crop insurance program as usual unless Congress decides to terminate it or change it. As part of work on the new farm policy law, the Senate adopted a package that calls for more realistic insurance rates, offering coverage over a broader area and requiring private insurance companies to bear more of the risk on policies.

Despite recent upturns in enrollment, farmer participation has been lower than expected. The White House has argued the government cannot afford to offer crop insurance and the special disaster-relief programs enacted after widespread crop failures.

The appropriations bill approved by the Senate panel would remove the limit on spending under the Export Enhancement Program - the major U.S. export subsidy program - and the Targeted Export Assistance program. The House has voted for a $500 million limit on the EEP in fiscal 1991 and a $200 million lid on the TEA.

The Senate bill agrees with the House in trying to eliminate funding for agricultural trade missions. Congress appropriated $197,000 for that purpose this year.

Each bill devotes more than half of its spending to public feeding programs, such as food stamps, the Women, Infants and Children program and school lunches. The Senate bill would allot $17.25 billion for food stamps, up $2.48 billion from this year, and $2.35 billion for WIC, up $224 million.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (SEPT. 19) UPI - The head of the West German central bank said Wednesday that Europe should not rush into implementing a monetary union.

Karl Otto Poehl said the powerful Bundesbank will only agree to leave the Deutsche mark, the strongest currency in Europe, in the hands of a European central bank if the future monetary system is as good as the one that currently exists.

The Bundesbank, which has a high degree of autonomy, is widely considered a model central bank and has managed over the years to keep a tight grip on inflation rates.

''It would be a major mistake to give up the functioning system for one that is worse,'' Poehl said.

He said he was not speaking merely in the interests of West Germany but of all European partners.

Bundesbank policies and the ''strength'' of the Deutsche mark have made a ''significant contribution'' and illustrate that the European Monetary System ''has functioned relatively well,'' Poehl said.

He said economic growth and budget policies have to be adjusted between the European states before a monetary union can be achieved.

Poehl cited the currency reform in East Germany as an example for what a heavy burden a swift monetary change can put on a country. The strong West mark replaced the weak East mark July 1 in East Germany in a first phase of economic unification of the two nations.

But the East German economy has been crippled since then by rising unemployment and falling productivity.

Poehl said the East German currency union had to be put into effect to stop the flood of East German refugees into West Germany. Europe is under no such pressure, he added.

He said that the West German government supported his position but that some politicians disagreed on the date when European monetary union should occur. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has called for swift completion of European integration, but Finance Minister Theo Waigel has agreed with the Bundesbank position, urging a go-slow approach.

Before the drive to Oct. 3 German unification started, the Bonn government was one of the staunchest supporters of European economic integration.

The 12 European Community member states will meet three months from now to start negotiations on political and economic union in advance of the 1992 European market.

OTTAWA (SEPT. 19) UPI - The army said Wednesday it would display about 50 weapons seized from a Mohawk reserve south of Montreal during a search that provoked the most violent clash yet between troops and natives in a 2 1/2-month-old standoff over a land dispute.

Lt. Col. Greg Mitchell, batallion commander for the Canadian Army, said in an interview the weapons, including shotguns, rifles, and handguns as well as walkie-talkies and camouflage uniforms, were found in some ten caches on the Kahnawake reserve.

''They were hidden away in plastic or duffle bags, under trees. The intent for their use was obviously illegal,'' Mitchell said.

He said the army planned to publicly display the weapons later Wednesday in Montreal.

Police, soldiers and Mohawks at two Quebec reserves have been involved in a land dispute that began July 11 when Quebec officers stormed a barricade erected by natives around a proposed golf course they claimed was an ancient burial ground. One officer was killed in the raid at the Kanesatake reserve, south of Montreal.

A day later, Mohawks at Kahnawake erected barricades across highways and a bridge connecting the town of Chateauguay to Montreal. In August, the Quebec government ordered Canadian troops to replace the provincial police force at the barricades. Within days, Kahnawake Mohawks and soldiers agreed to jointly dismantle barricades around the one reserve.

Soldiers continue to be stationed around a treatment center on the Kanesatake reserve where about 50 militant Mohawks, women and children are maintaining a last stand against the army.

The search for weapons Tuesday at Kahnawake led to the worst clash yet between soldiers and Mohawks. In the resulting riot that lasted nearly seven hours, soldiers used three rounds of tear gas to restrain the crowd of about 300 natives who tried to stop the search.

Although the natives were equipped with only rocks, clubs and sticks, they almost overpowered the soldiers. According to Mitchell, 19 soldiers required medical treatment, including one with a broken hand, another with severe head lacerations and a third who had half his ear torn off.

At one point, Mohawks wrestled a young soldiers to the ground and were trying to strangle him with the cord of his binoculars. Mitchell said the army fired shots into the air to still the soldier's captors so ''we could save his life.''

Mitchell also rejected comments by Mohawk leaders that the army had planted the weapons to discredit the natives.

''That charge is absolutely ludicrous,'' he said, adding that the army invited members of the Mohawk peacekeeping force to join the search and native leaders were present when the weapons were found.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 19) UPI - People with a good sense of smell or a tendency toward high blood pressure might want to avoid four-star restaurants, the author of a study of top chefs said Wednesday.

Dr. Alan R. Hirsch, neurological director of the Smell & Taste Treatment and Research Foundation, said a study of Chicago's top chefs found three in 10 had a reduced ability to smell and seven in 10 had a reduced ability to taste, especially salt.

Hirsch said the study, published Wednesday in Food Technology magazine, is the first of its kind of chefs.

''We were not expecting this at all. We thought chefs would actually have a better sense of smell than you or I because they use it all the time,'' Hirsch said.

None of the chefs could recognize the scents of wintergreen, coconut or chicken soup and 20 percent could not recognize the scents of green apple or peppermint.

The reason why the chefs had a reduced ability to smell and taste prompted several theories that were discarded.

''The theory we finally came up with has to do with who eats at these restaurants,'' said Hirsch. Successful businesspeople tend to be older men, who generally have a poorer sense of smell than women (and) who further reduce their ability to smell if they smoke or drink alcohol.

''They come to this restaurant and their sense of smell isn't very good. Say if the chefs had a good sense of smell, they would have flavored the food very lightly. They bring it out to this man. He tastes it and says, 'This food is bland. Get rid of the chef.'

''What's happening is the chefs at these top, four-star restaurants were actually cooking for their audience. They became chefs maybe because they had a heavier hand in their use of flavorings.''

The study also found ''these chefs tended not to adapt to smells. They always smelled them no matter what,'' said Hirsch. The general population can tune out smells. ''If you put on perfume, 10 minutes later you can't tell you have it on. You'll go somewhere and someone will say how strong your perfume is.''

Another finding Hirsch said ''has tremendous medical implications'' had to do with how the brain processes smell.

''Those of us who are right-handed, we think logically on the left side of our brain,'' said Hirsch. ''As a novice, we think smell on the right side, emotional side, of the brain. They (chefs) think smell on the left side of their brains. The entire way they understand and think smell is different than you and I do.''

The study of the 10 male chefs was scientifically conducted, said Hirsch. At the time, there were no female chefs at the top restaurants in the area. Each of the men eliminated outside factors, like having no caffeine for 72 hours.

''We know a lot of salt increases the risk of hypertension. If you have a tendency toward hypertension, you might not want to eat at these four-star restaurants,'' Hirsch said.

''I don't want to condemn four-star chefs. It's an art that's involved in cooking that may be independent of their absolute ability to smell and taste. Beethoven was deaf when he composed some of his last symphonies but he knew how things should sound. These chefs know how it should taste. They have an internal memory of how things should be and that may be how they compensate.''

MILFORD, CT (SEPT. 19) UPI - A couple who chucked their careers to sell teddy bears have little hope police will find $60,000 worth of their stuffed animals that were stolen and traced to a blighted housing project.

Police said there were no leads Wednesday in locating the burgled bears, which were painstakingly obtained from craftsmen, retail stores, antique shops, dealers and other collectors and sold mail-order and at shows.

''It's the saddest thing I've ever come into in my life,'' said Larry Idema. ''I've had my ups and downs but in one fell swoop, when (thieves) wipe you out it's sickening.''

Idema, 49, and his wife, Ellen, 36, of Grand Haven, Mich., were staying at a motel in Milford earlier this week and parked their pickup truck and trailer full of collectible antique bears outside.

When they awoke Monday morning, the truck, trailer and 300 bears were gone, including a 1905 German Steiff brand bear worth about $5,000.

Hours laters, police in nearby Bridgeport found the truck, trailer and one muddy little bear in the Father Panik Village public housing complex, one of the most crime-ridden projects in the country.

Police in Bridgeport - where 44 homicides have been reported so far this year and the latest seizure of cocaine totaled 150 pounds - said they would keep an eye out for the bears but were not making any promises.

''I didn't hear any APBs (all points bulletins) on the bears,'' said police Sgt. Albert Fedorek.

Milford police have not ruled out the possibility of another collector being involved in the theft, since the truck was not stripped and credit cards were left inside the vehicle.

The Idemas, who gave up careers in data processing two months ago to peddle the bears, feared they could be in a dumpster, or for sale on a street corner for a few dollars each.

''I can't imagine that people know what they have there,'' said Ellen Idema, whose hobby of collecting bears led to the husband-and-wife business. ''We can't just pick up a phone and order them because they're one of a kind.''

About half the bears were the Steiff brand, the world's most elite. Most of the valuable bears have movable arms and legs, mohair fur and buttons in their ears.

The collection was only partially covered by insurance and without their stock the Idemas, who stopped in Milford after attending a teddy bear show in Baltimore, will have to shut down for a while.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (SEPT. 19) UPI - Horse-racing enthusiast Randall Hubbard, who holds nearly 10 percent of the companies that own and operate Hollywood Park race track, will try to oust chariman Marjorie Everett, a filing with Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed.

Hubbard, who owns Ruidoso Downs in Ruidoso, N.M., and Woodlands Race Track in Kansas City, said in a letter to the companies' directors that he should succeed the 68-year-old Everett before the next shareholders meeting, the SEC filing said Tuesday.

Hubbard, who is also the chairman of glassmaking concern AFG Industries of Dallas, said when he acquired his stake last month that he wanted to gain representation on the board of the companies - Hollywood Park Realty Enterprises Inc., which owns the track and 347 acres of surrounding land, and Hollywood Park Operating Co., which operates the track.

The companies' stocks are paired for trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

''It is my intention to devote substantial personal time and effort toward the revitalization of Hollywood Park,'' Hubbard said in the letter.

He also said that he hopes to avoid a proxy contest. A spokeswoman for Everett said she had no comment on the letter.

Hollywood Park has reported three consecutive years of losses totalling more than $27 million, stemming largely from its ill-fated attempt to expand into real estate development at the Los Alamitos race track in Cypress, Calif. It eventually sold the property to a group that includes Hubbard.

However, the companies have earned $3.3 million during the first six months of this year.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Federal Reserve, in its regular ''beige book'' analysis of the economy, reported Wednesday weak and declining activity in many parts of the United States although some regions experienced modest growth.

''Weakness is most apparent in the northeastern and mid-Atlantic districts,'' the Fed said. ''Although patterns of consumer spending vary widely among districts, rates of increase are generally slowing.''

The data in the report is compiled by economists at the Federal Reserve's 12 district banks.

''The districts' assessments of manufacturing activity range from moderate expansion to absolute declines,'' the Fed said. ''Signs of a construction downturn are widespread, but not universal.

''The recent increase in oil prices has not affected domestic oil and gas drilling,'' the report added.

The economy-at-a-glace over the last several weeks as reported by Federal Reserve district:

BOSTON - Economic activity continued to slow. Most manufacturers are finding 1990 ''tougher than expected,'' and three-fourths have cut their employment levels. No improvement expected for six to 12 months.

NEW YORK - Unemployment rate below national average. Pace of office leasing considered healthy, but retail stores reported disappointing sales. Home builders saw no improvement in market conditions.

PHILADELPHIA - Economy slowing across the board. Factories trimming payrolls. Bankers reported decline in commercial and real estate lending. Businesses pessimistic despite outcome of Middle East crisis.

CLEVELAND - Economy expected to grow despite effects of oil shock. Manufacturers cautious about short-term prospects. Lending activity at banks and thrifts has slowed.

RICHMOND - Retail, tourist and manufacturing industries reported softening of business conditions. Higher oil prices pushed up costs for finished goods.

Demand for consumer loans fell slightly.

ATLANTA - Slower growth and cautious consumers caused retailers to reduce inventory orders. Auto sales remained soft. Consumer and real estate lending was weak, but a shortage of skilled workers was reported.

CHICAGO - More slow growth while consumer spending generally slowed. But construction and real estate activity remained healthier in the Midwest than in the rest of the country.

ST. LOUIS - Indications are the growth rate ''borders on zero.'' Employment has fallen, and retail sales were flat to up moderately. Manufacturing, construction and real estate have all weakened.

MINNEAPOLIS - Moderately good conditions reported. Tourist spending has been strong. Resource-related industries have been doing well, and in general the Iraq crisis has yet to hurt the region.

KANSAS CITY - Slow growth reported. Auto deals have slumped as some potential buyers find it difficult to finance purchases. Farm economy continues to improve and a bumper crop is expected in the autumn.

DALLAS - Higher oil prices stimulating increased production from existing wells, but there has been little new drilling. Rains have improved farm conditions. Auto sales improved slightly since early August.

SAN FRANCISCO - Economy growing at modest pace. Inflation remains in 5 percent range. Retail sales appeared to have softened. Real estate and construction cooling in coastal areas but strong inland.

AMMAN, JORDAN (SEPT. 19) UPI - Jordan needs at least $1.5 billion in grants, soft loans and development aid this year to cope with the impact of the Persian Gulf crisis and the U.N.-imposed sanctions on Iraq, Finance Minister Basel Jardaneh said Wednesday.

Jardaneh also said Jordan would like ''more understanding'' towards the kingdom's foreign debts and help through debt reduction, in a reference to Jordan's $8.4 billion foreign debt.

''We feel debt rescheduling or debt refinancing is not suitable for us in the current circumstances,'' the minister said at a news conference.

He also warned Jordan had to receive a minimum of $1.5 billion in aid before the end of October or face serious economic damage amid the gulf crisis triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

''We would like to see this amount coming in the form of grants - part of them to the budget, the other part to finance projects that would help overcome the difficulties that the private sector is facing,'' Jardaneh said. ''Another part can come in the form of soft loans, and the third part should come in the form of development loans.''

In a memorandum submitted to the United Nations last month, Jordan said it stood to lose as much as $4.1 billion as a result of the Persian Gulf crisisand the imposition of sanctions on Iraq - Jordan's main trading partner.

Jardaneh said, however, this amount did not include the private sector losses which he did not quantify.

The minister said there were good indications Japan, Germany and the European Community would provide immediate assistance to Jordan, but he did not cite any figures, saying it was too premature to discuss specifics.

Jardaneh said Jordan will continue to get Iraqi oil as an interim arrangement in the absense of suitable alternatives, saying it was not embargo busting.

He said Jordan had informed the U.N. of its intention to continue to get Iraqi oil, partly because the oil shipments trucked to Jordan represent Iraqi debt repayments and partly because Jordan had a special arrangement guaranteeing a price of not more than $16.4 per barrel.

The minister said there was no formal disapproval from the U.N.

TORONTO (SEPT. 19) UPI - Canadian Autoworkers and Ford Motor Co. of Canada negotiators continued Wednesday talks on the company's lastest offer, as thousands of striking workers entered their fifth day on the picket line.

Ford Canada spokesman Jim Hartford said although there was a lot of activity at the bargaining table, economic differences between the two sides still exist.

Hartford said the company and union remained ''apart on many issues'' and characterized the talks as ''tough negotiating''.

CAW spokeswoman Peggy Nash said she didn't sense any bracing for a settlement by Thursday that could lead to ratification votes on the weekend and a return to work Monday.

Nash said the two sides had met Wednesday morning to work on non- economic issues, including health and safety, but the pace of the talks now depended on committees examining local issues.

On Tuesday, CAW president Bob White said outstanding local issues, dealing with work practices at specific plants, could delay any deal reached at the main bargaining table.

White also said if a deal was not reached by Thursday to permit time for ratification votes this weekend, the strike could drag into next week.

Ford Canada's second monetary offer - presented Tuesday - was touted by its top negotiator Don McKenzie as a ''significant improvement'' over the first, but White only rated it a 4-1/2 out of 10.

White said the offer was ''short in every area'' and that ultimately a third offer would be needed before a settlement could be reached.

Almost 13,000 CAW members, who walked off their jobs at midnight last Friday, remained on the picket line.

The strike has closed nine Ford Canada plants in Ontario, affecting car and truck assembly plants in Oakville and St. Thomas and engine and castings plants in Windsor.

Ford's U.S. operations - principally assembly plants in Michigan, Chicago and Atlanta that depend on V-6 engines made in Windsor - could start to feel the effects of a strike by next week.

Ford Motor Co. spokesman Dick Routh said in a telephone interview from Dearborn, Mich. that, ''We have not notified any employees of layoffs as a result of the Canadian strike yet, but the clock is ticking.''

Routh said there were many variables to consider and wouldn't speculate on the strike's impact on any particular U.S. plant.

The union has focused on security against contracting work out and against technological changes, income security, better protection against plant closings and shorter work time. The CAW, which broke away from the United Auto Workers in 1986, also represents 36,500 General Motors Canada workers and 11,300 Chrysler Canada workers at various assembly and parts plants in Ontario and Quebec.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - The State Department said Wednesday that most Americans who can get out of Iraq and Kuwait have already left and the last evacuation flight of American women and children from Kuwait will leave Saturday.

One chartered plane was reported to be on the ground at Baghdad Wednesday with about 300 American women and children aboard, preparing to go to London, where the passengers were to spend the night.

They are then to be taken to to the Raleigh-Durham (N.C.) airport, arriving Thursday.

One more flight is tentatively scheduled to leave Kuwait Saturday, said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler. With that flight, she said, the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait believes that every American who is able to leave and wants to leave will have been taken care of and there will be no more evacuation charter flights.

The State Department is putting out hourly messages over the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp. urging American women to immediately contact the embassy if they wish to leave on the final evacuation charter flight.

So far, about 1,700 Americans, mainly women and children, have been airlifted out of Kuwait and Iraq since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi forces.

Tutwiler said that some women who are American citizens have decided to remain in Kuwait with their husbands.

According to State Department estimates, some 1,200 Americans remain in Kuwait and another 120 in Iraq, including diplomatic personnel in the embassies in Kuwait and Baghdad.

''Iraq's barbaric hostage-holding continues. Men from numerous countries are not being allowed to depart and obviously are being held there against their will. We and the rest of the international community will continue to press for the right of departure of all foreigners and for the release of those who the Iraqis detain,'' Tutwiler said.

It is estimated that 82 Americans are being held by Iraqi authorities, reportedly as human shields around military and industrial installations that might be targets of U.S. forces in case of an outbreak of hostility.

U.S. Embassy officials have had no access to any of the detainees for more than a week.

Tutwiler said the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait remains in business, although conditions are getting more difficult.

''We'll continue to be there as long as we can,'' she said.

CAMP LEJEUNE, NC (SEPT. 19) UPI - Marines attacked a nameless town of freshly painted block buildings on the sandy coastal plain and the political message of the training battle was clear: It could have been Kuwait City or even Baghdad.

The Marine Corps, with a numbingly loud mock battle to liberate the town from rebels and evacuate civilians, baptized its newest urban warfare training center Tuesday. A senior defense planner who watched said it may become the premier training facility for all the services as attention shifts from the Cold War to Third World flare-ups like the Gulf crisis.

The battle, a carefully choreographed display of firepower and teamwork among riflemen, pilots, artillery teams and armored vehicle squads, was conducted before an audience of Pentagon leaders including the Marine Corps commandant, Gen. Alfred Gray, White House and National Security Council staffers, congressional aides, members of other branches of the armed forces and reporters.

And although the town of 31 buildings spread over 17 acres has no name other than its official Corps designation as the ''Military Operations in Urban Terrain'' training facility, it was clear the skills being taught young Marines could be used to attack or evacuate Kuwait City or even take the fight to Baghdad.

The skills, which Marines are taught in a three-week tour at the mock city, also are applicable in the coastal cities Marines would come upon after storming a beach or being dropped ashore elsewhere.

The city has office buildings, a three-story hotel, apartments that look like seaside condominiums, a school and gymnasium, a sports field, shopping mall, gas stations, a church and single family homes. It is loosely patterned after European cities with narrow streets, but it could be any town.

''Urban warfare is violent, difficult, slow and very intensive with respect to manpower and logistical support,'' Lt. Col. Bruce Gombar, commander of the 1st Battalion, 8th Marines, said before the facility was dedicated.

''This is going to make an enormous contribution,'' he said, toward preparing Marines for urban combat. ''We would like to avoid this kind of conflict ... bypass around these institutions, cities, towns, but you can't always do that. ... Our people simply must be second to none in dealing with this kind of environment.''

''We teach our warriors there is really no such thing as a permissive environment,'' he said.

While it may have no name, Marine planners were not without a sense of humor. The main drag is ''Mayberry Drive'' and the bridge leading over the ''river'' by the town is the ''Bea Taylor Memorial Bridge,'' fitting names in a state that was the locale of the ''Mayberry RFD'' and ''Andy of Mayberry'' television shows.

Inside the city, with visitors watching from atop the hotel, Alpha and Charlie companies attacked the resistance forces dug into the smouldering buildings in the town, surging forward on Gombar's command to ''launch the attack.''

As 155mm artillery shells screamed past to strike behind the enemy force, small arms fire opened and a solitary Marine scaled a corner drainpipe on a municipal building to drop lines for riflemen to climb to the roof. They then dropped down the lines to burst through windows into offices, eliminate the rebels and free civilians for evacuation by amored personnel carrier.

Within minutes, two enemy soldiers lay sprawled dead on the square before the church, told by their laser tagging devices they had been mortally wounded. Three more were hurled from their machine gun bunker atop the shopping mall by a well-placed grenade. But attacking Marines also took casualties, and the cries of several wounded brought armored vehicles racing to carry them away.

A CH-46 helicopter swooped in and more Marines slid down lines to land on the roof of the school. Overhead, AV-8B Harrier jets, A-4 bombers, OV-10 Broncos observation planes and Cobra helicopter gunships made strafing or bombing runs scouted enemy positions and relayed firing data to artillery crews.

When the fight was over, the civilians flown to safety and the prisoners marched off to a holding area, Sam Routson, mission activities director for the Pentagon's special operations office, said the Marine Corps could ''lead the way'' in urban warfare training.

He forecast that in time the other services, federal agencies such as the Drug Enforcement Administration and the FBI, and even foreign countries, would be lined up asking to use the $7.9 million city and six associated live fire assault courses for their own training.

DALLAS (SEPT. 19) UPI - Electronic Data Systems Corp. Wednesday announced an alliance with Australia's Minicom to pursue information technology business in the mining, utility and petroleum industries.

The agreement provides for joint marketing activities and cooperation in development, implementation and customer training.

EDS will provide its systems integration and global communications infrastructure to the alliance, while Mincom will offer a range of software products to meet the needs of businesses in mining, utility and petroleum.

The two may also offer their services to other companies in those industries.

''Through this relationship, energy companies, which often have remote operations, will have easy access to information tehnology applications designed specifically for their industry,'' said Gordon Jardine, Mincom's chief operating officer.

EDS Energy Division President Ken Scott said the alliance will add to his company's expertise and broaden its services.

Mincom specializes in integrated business applications for capital- intensive industries.

SALT LAKE CITY (SEPT. 19) UPI - Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson, the 91-year-old spiritual leader of the world's 7.5 million Mormons, was undergoing surgery Wednesday to relieve a buildup of blood in his brain, officials said.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said Benson ''has been diagnosed as having a subdural hematoma,'' and was going into surgery at 1 p.m. EDT. Benson was admitted to LDS Hospital Tuesday afternoon.

Neurosurgeon Bruce Sorensen was performing the operation, expected to take 2 1/2 hours, LeFevre said. The surgery generally is not considered dangerous, but doctors said Benson's age poses additional risks.

Mormons view their president as a prophet of God.

Benson served for eight years as agriculture secretary in the Eisenhower administration, the first Mormon to serve in a presidential cabinet and the first clergyman in 100 years.

As president of the Council of Twelve Apostles, Benson became the 13th leader of the Mormon Church on Nov. 10, 1985, following the death of 90-year-old Spencer W. Kimball.

Benson's family has been active and prominent in the Mormon Church since its founding. His great-grandfather, Apostle Ezra T. Benson, was one of the original Mormon pioneers who entered the Salt Lake Valley with Brigham Young in 1847.

Benson's parents were among the early settlers of southern Idaho, where he was born in the small town of Whitney on Aug.4, 1899.

Benson's most recent hospital stay lasted four days in June for treatment of a bacterial infection.

In January 1986, two months after he assumed leadership of the church, Benson suffered dizzy spells and was hospitalized. In November 1986, he received a heart pacemaker.

TOKYO (SEPT. 19) UPI - Atlanta's selection to stage the centennial Olympics in 1996 has triggered talk of a $1 billion television bonanza.

While the International Olympic Committee got down to more mundane matters following Tuesday night's vote, ringside interest Wednesday focused on dollars and cents.

Richard Pound, the IOC vice president from Canada and the driving force behind raising revenues, predicted exclusive U.S. rights would show a 50 percent hike on the $401 million NBC paid for the 1992 Barcelona Olympics.

In light of inflation and ''hype'' that can be expected in the United States, ''$600 million is not unthinkable,'' he said.

Ted Turner's Cable News Network, playing on its Atlanta home ground, will be heavily involved in the U.S. battle against ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox.

NBC has replaced ABC as the summer Olympics' flagbearer. ABC, which paid $225 million for the 1984 Los Angeles Summer Games, had a virtual monopoly until it pulled back, licking its wounds after being burned for around $60 million on its $309 million investment on the 1988 Calgary Winter Games.

NBC took the initiative, paying $301 million for the 1988 Seoul Olympics and then winning the battle for Barcelona.

Barcelona has already signed other TV contracts worth more than $200 million to add to the NBC pot.

The Olympics' share of television revenue is matched by marketing money, so Atlanta's potential contribution will add considerably to the $1.84 billion it expects to amass by the end of 1992 for the preceding four years.

While Atlanta celebrated, there was gloom and some recriminations in the camps of the five losing candidates - Athens, Greece; Belgrade, Yugoslavia;Manchester, England; Melbourne, Australia; and Toronto.

Athens, beaten by 51 votes to 35 by Atlanta in the fifth-round final ballot, hoped to sway IOC members with the attraction of holding the 100th anniversary of the Olympics in the city where the first modern Games was staged in 1896.

But despite promising to solve pollution problems and rebuild crumbling infrastructure, IOC members thought the risks outweighed historical arguments.

Two other factors tipped the scales against the Greek capital. Possible terrorism revived memories of the 1972 Munich massacre, and political instability threatened to derail preparations.

Greek opposition leader George Papandreou, a member of the Athens bidding committee, said: ''We're really disappointed. Our bid had more than sentiment behind it. We felt we had an extremely strong case.''

Melbourne also had that morning-after feeling. The Olympics have not been staged in the Southern Hemisphere since Melbourne hosted the 1956 Olympics. But Melbourne's battle cry of ''Time for another continent'' went unanswered, and the Australians went out in the third round, leaving Atlanta, Athens and Toronto to slug it out.

''This showed the geographical argument of spreading the Olympics around the world is a lost cause,'' said Melbourne delegate Jean Walsh. ''The Olympics is a North American event. Our bid was just as good, if not better, than Atlanta's.''

The IOC's Pound confirmed a North American coalition first eliminated Melbourne, then Athens. Seventeen of Toronto's 22 votes went to Atlanta after the Canadians exited in the fourth round.

''If Toronto had still been in there for the final round against Athens, we would have seen the same result,'' Pound said. ''One of the North Americans had to knock off Athens.''

Australian Kevan Gosper, a member of the IOC executive board, was stunned by the fluctation of the Melbourne vote, which polled 12 in the first round, 21 in the next and only 16 in the third.

But none of the losers denied the merit of Atlanta's bid.

Georgia's capital, which estimates it will cost $1.01 billion to stage the Games, has most of the facilities in place and has earmarked $418.4 million for other venues, including an 80,000-seat Olympic Stadium expected to cost $145.2 million to build.

Atlanta has estimated $587 million for U.S. television rights and is predicting a surplus of $157.1 million - 10 percent of which will go to the U.S. Olympic Committee, with the rest evenly split between the IOC and the organizing committee.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - President Bush has nominated Adm. Charles Larson to be commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific Command in Hawaii, the Pentagon announced Wednesday.

He will replace Adm. Huntington Hardisty, whose future assignment has not been announced.

Larson, 53, born in Sioux Falls, S.D., is now serving in Hawaii as commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet.

The Pentagon said Bush has nominated Vice Adm. Robert Kelly, 52, to take Larson's place as commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet. He will be promoted to full admiral.

Kelly is presently the senior Navy member of the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations and deputy chief of naval operations for plans, policy and operations.

In a third assignment announcement, the Pentagon said Bush has nominated Vice Adm. William Smith to be the U.S. military representative to NATO.

Smith, 57, will be promoted to admiral. He also is a deputy chief of naval operations, for planning.

BONN (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Social Democratic Party predicted Wednesday that the 1991 all-German budget will show a deficit of almost $100 billion, raising the total government debt to $774 billion.

Ingrid Matthaeus-Maier, the SPD's financial expert, said in a statement that the budget deficit of $96.7 billion will be six times higher than the 1989 deficit.

So far, West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel has only planned for a $64.5 billion deficit in 1991, leaving a $32.2 billion hole, she said.

Waigel has said he will release his 1991 budget plan soon after Oct. 3 German unification.

Matthaeus-Maier said West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative government will obviously have to borrow the additional $32.2 billion.

The 1991 deficit will increase Germany's total debt by $129 billion to $774 billion, she said.

She pointed out that Germany will pay an additional $7.7 billion toward the withdrawal of Soviet troops from East Germany and $2 billion to support U.S. military operations in the Persian Gulf and the blockade against Iraq.

The SPD, the main opposition party, has demanded that Kohl's government tell voters how much unification will cost them. But Kohl said this could only be done after a full assessment of East Germany's economy has been completed after unification.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (SEPT. 19) UPI - The crisis in the Persian Gulf and the skyrocketing price of oil are putting pressures on Czechoslovakia's free-market reforms as the country scrambles for hard currency to pay for imported fuel.

And staunch support for U.N. sanctions has prevented Czechoslovakia from collecting close to $1 billion owed it by Iraq.

''The more cash the Czechoslovaks use up to pay their oil bill, the less they'll have to pay their foreign debts, or to invest in their economy,'' Paris economist Khashayar Mahdavi says.

''With the oil price going up, these East European countries will really be in bad shape,'' says Mahdavi, a specialist on world debt with the international bank of Lazard Freres.

Czecholsovakia's economic problems have several causes. The Soviet Union, the country's sole oil supplier, has failed to ship more than over one-eighth of the oil it had contracted to deliver. This has forced the Czechoslovaks to buy oil for hard currency on the world market, and raise prices at home to cut consumption.

Effective Jan. 1, trade with the Soviet Union will have to be settled in hard currency, not in barter or soft East European currencies.

The rising price of oil means that for each dollar increase per barrel the country will need to generate $110 million in hard currency. This translates to close to $2 billion, according to senior Finance Ministry official Miroslav Zamecnik.

But the most immediate impact on Czechoslovakia is the $1 billion owed it by Iraq for construction projects, oil pumping stations and other trade contracts. Czechoslovakia's total foreign debt is $7.4 billion.

Some of Iraq's debt may be due on the 100 BMP-1 and BMP-2 armored personnel carriers and other military equipment Czechoslovakia's previous Communist government sold to Iraq.

Czechoslovakia has turned down an Iraqi offer to pay back the debt in crude oil, rather than break the United Nations embargo. On Wednesday, Foreign Minister Jiri Dienstbier asked the European Community for economic aid to offset the problems caused by the Gulf crisis.

Czechoslvakia had contracted with the Soviets last year for 16.6 million tons of crude per year.

Czechoslvakia will need at least 14 million tons of oil in 1991. Trading sugar refineries and breweries to Mexico will offset some of demand for hard currency, but other oil producing countries, like Venezuela and Iran want cash.

And if the Soviet Union devalues the ruble under its new reform plan, Czechoslovakia's outstanding Soviet debt, worth almost 5 billion convertible rubles, will decline in value.

''One solution is to cut consumption and thus our import bill,'' says Zamecnik. ''The second solution is to increase exports of what we can sell to the western markets. Devaluation can help us here.''

The free-market reforms, scheduled to begin Jan. 1, could result in lower living standards. The country is looking at what economist Karel Kriz of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences calls an ''optimistic'' figure of a 5 percent real shrinkage in the economy in 1991, after years of stagnation and zero real growth.

The shrinkage is expected to weed out unprofitable enterprises, but if oil prices continue to soar it could go too far. The results: closing factories, worsening unemployment and inflation.

Mahdavi agrees that the Gulf crisis will not cripple Czecholsovakia and other emerging East European democracies.

''Western countries will realize that if they want to avoid a recession in Europe they will have to extend credit,'' to the East, he says. ''They are counting on East Europe to be their growth motor in the coming decade, and they want to avoid social unrest in the emerging democracies.''

PITTSBURGH (SEPT. 19) UPI - A Butler County toddler, dragged from a porch and mauled by six Rottweiler dogs, was in critical condition Wednesday at Allegheny General Hospital in Pittsburgh after 12 1/2 hours of surgery.

A hospital spokeswoman said 2-year-old Steven Selfridge of Saxonburg suffered ''multiple injuries'' in the attack and physicians were concerned about battling infection. The surgery began at midnight and ended at about 12:30 p.m.

The boy survived the attack partly because of quick-thinking by his 11-year-old aunt, Jamie Ross, who frantically tried to stop the pack of dogs by spreading her body across her unconscious nephew.

''She's the hero here,'' said Chris Jones, a paramedic with Butler Ambulance Service, the first rescuer on the scene.

''At one point, she tried to cover the little boy with her body,'' Jones said. ''When she saw that wasn't going to work, she ran into the house and called 911.''

The girl was treated at Butler Memorial Hospital for a fractured wrist, cuts and bruises.

Jones' supervisor credited the paramedic with using ingenuity to separate the dogs. He donned protective gear, climbed a four-foot chain- link fence and blasted the dogs with a carbon dioxide fire extinguisher.

Authorities said the two children were unattended at the Butler Township home of Steven's grandmother when the attack occurred just before 7 p.m. Tuesday. Their mothers were visiting the grandmother, who was hospitalized after an earlier heart attack.

Police said one of the Rottweilers dragged Steven from the back porch, then the other dogs joined in. Police considered shooting the dogs to disperse them but could not get clear line of fire.

The dogs, owned by an aunt of the victim and being cared for by the grandmother, were placed under a 15-day quarantine and would be transferred to an animal control shelter, Police Chief Gary Garman said.

Garman said police were investigating possible zoning law violations for the number of dogs kept in the backyard pens but family concerns could preclude the filing of charges.

''It's all in the family and that creates a problem,'' Garman said. ''You can't go stepping on too many toes right now because everybody's concerned and they're all at the hospital.

''The biggest thing now is the 2-year-old - to do what they can for him. The other part is the grandmother,'' he said. ''We can handle this (investigation) anywhere down the line as long as we retain custody of the dogs.''

(SEPT. 19) UPI - The Senate Agriculture Committee voted today to supply full funding for fiscal 1991 to the federally subsidized crop insurance program. The action challenges an earlier House vote to only give enough money to cover policies sold by September 30th. That, in effect, would have shut down the program.

DAMASCUS, Syria (SEPT. 19) UPI - A British Airways airliner crossed Syrian air space Wednesday for the first time since London broke off diplomatic relations with Damascus nearly four years ago, government sources said.

The airliner was carrying a shipment of food and medicine to refugees stranded in Jordan after they fled Iraq and Kuwait following the Aug. 2 invasion of the emirate.

Diplomatic sources said the decision to allow the British airliner to cross into Syria was a signal that relations between the two countries are improving. Syria has strongly denounced the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and has sent troops to the Gulf to serve with Western forces.

''The airliner was allowed to cross the Syrian air space out of humanitarian considerations,'' a Syrian official told United Press International.

He said the decision was made after British Airways contacted the Syrian Foreign Ministry.

The action came a day after British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd signalled that London may consider renewing its ties with Damascus.

''I would like to get back to reasonable relations with Syria,'' Hurd said during a news conference in Paris Tuesday.

Hurd also said he would endorse an agreement under which the European Community would give financial assistance to Syria. The EC considered the plan at one of its meetings last week.

Hurd's statements appeared to be another sign that relations could be restored although he hinted that Syria would need to change its stance on one major issue.

''There is an obstacle in the way that has nothing to do with the gulf conflict, and so the obstacle is there, but if we can find a way round it, a way through it, a way of overcoming it, well and good,'' Hurd said.

The obstacle to which Hurd was referring was believed to be Syria's refusal to formally declare that it will distance itself from what Britain regards as international terrorist groups, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported.

The BBC said Syrians, however, want London to make the first move toward restoring ties.

Britain broke diplomatic ties with Syria and closed its embassy in Damascus Oct. 31, 1986 after an attempt to bomb an El Al jet in London and allegations Syria was promoting acts of international terrorism. The European Community also imposed limited sanctions at the time.

Nezar Hindawi, now 35, a Jordanian, was convicted of trying to plant a bomb on an El Al jumbo jet with 375 people aboard at London's Heathrow airport on April 17, 1986. He was sentenced to 45 years in prison for giving his pregnant Irish girlfriend, Anne-Marie Murphy, a bag rigged with a bomb.

As Murphy was about to board the Boeing 747 when the bomb containing 3 1/4 pounds of Semtex plastic explosive was discovered by an El Al security guard.

Hindawi, who had told Murphy he would meet her in Israel where they would be married, denied the charges and said he was a victim of an Israeli conspiracy to discredit Syria. He said he thought the bag contained drugs not explosives.

Prosecutors said Hindawi was a member of the Jordanian Revolutionary Movement recruited by Syrian military intelligence to carry out an attack against an Israeli target.

Britain had said there was conclusive evidence of official Syrian involvement in the plot. In a show of support, the United States and Canada withdrew their ambassadors from Damascus.

MIAMI BEACH, FL (SEPT. 19) UPI - Victor Posner, the reclusive financier ordered in 1988 to help the homeless as part of his sentence on tax evasion charges, committed another one of his companies to the cause Wednesday.

Posner, who controls a number of businesses through his holding companies, told reporters gathered at his beachfront offices that he has directed Arby's Inc. of Atlanta to join the effort begun last year by Royal Crown Cola Co.

The multimillionaire controls both companies.

''There must be a united effort against this problem in America,'' Posner said. ''We remain committed to the leadership role we have taken in this effort.''

Posner read from a prepared statement before presenting a check for $607,000 to Mindy Kaufman of the Shelter Partnership in Los Angeles.

The money will benefit the National Coalition for the Homeless and 10 Los Angeles shelters, Kaufman said.

Posner, who refused to take questions from assembled reporters, said the money was raised by ticket sales and broadcast rights to the Roy Orbison Tribute Concert staged in February in Los Angeles.

Royal Crown Cola sponsored the concert at a cost of $3.5 million.

Royal Crown Cola has raised $1.2 million to help the homeless since Posner first announced the program in February 1989. The company and 14 of its largest bottlers previously donated $614,000 to the cause.

Royal Crown Cola spokesman Phil Dudek said the company is working to expand that program to 214 bottlers. The expanded program and the effort by Arby's will begin in 1991, he said.

The companies' effort are independent of Posner's sentence on tax charges.

In February 1988, U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman sentenced Posner to five years probation on tax fraud charges, and directed the multimillionaire to spend at least $3 million and 5,000 hours of his time to help the homeless.

Posner pleaded no contest to 10 counts of tax fraud, after being charged with cheating the government out of taxes on land he donated to Miami Christian College.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (SEPT. 19) UPI - U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills rejected Wednesday as insufficient a new proposal to reduce farm subsidies being considered by the European Community.

Agriculture supports are the crucial issue in the current round of trade-liberalization talks in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The proposal debated Wednesday night by the EC executive commission would cut farm subsidies by 30 percent over a 10-year period beginning in 1986. The concept was recently floated by EC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry.

Hills rejected the MacSharry proposal as a ''very, very small'' cut in agriculture supports, of only 10 percent from current levels, because farm subisidies in 1986 were at a ''very high level.''

The United States will propose to GATT later this month a proposal to cut domestic supports and tarriffs by up to 70 percent, and to slash export subsidies by somewhat more than 70 percent over a 10-year period.

The visit by Hills to Brussels, where she addressed the European Parliament, highlighted the huge gap separating the U.S. and EC positions.

Hills and MacSharry met on Tuesday night and discussed the new U.S. proposal.

''I didn't discern a lot of enthusiasm, but I think he listened to what I said '' Hills said. ''He did not like the specific commitments in the three areas. He said there was not enthusiasm among European farmers for those sorts of reforms at this particular time.''

The current round of GATT talks are known as the Uruguay Round after the country in which they began four years ago. The round is slated to conclude in Brussels in December, but the United States is concerned the entire proceedings could collapse over the agriculture issue and set off an international trade free-for-all.

''The economic costs of a failed round will be staggering,'' Hills said in her speech to the European Parliament. ''Across the board, the cost of competition will increase. Together, we will lose $300 billion in increased output we expect to gain from more liberal access to foreign markets.''

GATT currently covers only merchandise, and not services or agriculture.

Developing nations which produce farm products cheaply seek an open world market in agriculture, while the West seeks free-trade rules on services and intellectual property, such as copyright.

Without meaningful reduction of farm supports, Hills says, some 50 to 60 countries would walk away from the table, ''and the Uruguay Round will fail for lack of critical participation.''

The EC says its millions of small farmers need continued agricultural supports to protect Europe's heritage and rural way of life.

BOSTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - High doses of a synthetic form of vitamin A appear effective in reducing the number of tumors in people with cancers of the head and neck, researchers said Wednesday.

The results of a study involving use of isotretinoin, or retinoic acid, in people who had been treated for cancers of the mouth, larynx and pharynx suggest that the substance may prove effective in preventing cancer among certain high-risk groups, such as smokers, said Dr. Waun Ki Hong of the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston.

Of 49 people who had undergone treatment for tumors in the head and neck area and received daily oral doses of retinoic acid during a one- year period, only two - or 4 percent - experienced so-called secondary tumors, Hong and co-researchers reported in The New England Journal of Medicine.

By contrast, they said 12 people - 24 percent - of 51 members of a comparison group who were given a worthless substitute had secondary tumors.

''This is a very early study that provides some promising new leads in cancer research and opens up the possibility of new approaches in the prevention of primary and secondary cancers,'' said Hong.

However, he emphasized that retinoic acid, which is also used to treat a type of severe acne, did not prevent the recurrence of the original tumors in those studied and in high doses caused toxic side effects such as skin dryness and conjunctivitis.

''The next step is to see whether retinoic acid can be part of a strategy for preventing primary cancer. We also want to know whether low doses can be effective, so patients can take it on a long-term basis,'' Hong said.

Researchers do not know why retinoic acid has an anti-cancer effect, but they think it may it may in some way regulate cell proliferation in epithelial, or skin surface, tissue in some areas of the body such as the mouth, he said.

There are an estimated 43,000 new cases of head and neck cancers in the United States annually and more than 12,000 deaths. Tobacco use is a factor in most cases, Hong said, and 90 percent of those in the study were smokers or former smokers.

Even after successful radiation or surgical treatment of tumors in those with head and neck cancer, up to 50 percent experience a recurrence and between 10 percent and 40 percent develop secondary tumors, the study noted.

The cancer patients included in the new study ranged in age from 31 to 73.

There were 78 men and 22 women. Fifteen of the 49 people given retinoic acid experienced a recurrence of their original cancers as opposed to 17 of the 51 given the substitute.

Those who received the retinoic acid initially were given 100 milligrams per square meter of body surface daily, but because of the high frequency of side effects, the dose was cut in half partway through the study, he said.

In another study appearing in the journal, Dr. E. Robert Greenberg of Dartmouth University Medical School in Hanover, N.H., and co-researchers said daily doses of beta carotene, another form of vitamin A, appeared ineffective in preventing new occurrences of non-melanoma skin cancers in people who had undergone skin cancer treatment.

The scientists said there was no significant difference in the rate of new skin cancers among 913 people who received beta carotene during a five-year period and 892 people given an inactive substitute.

In an editorial accompanying the two studies, Dr. Frank Meyskens Jr. of the University of California-Irvine said an explanation for the differing results may lie in the fact that animal studies suggest that ''beta carotene is a weak anti-carcinogen, whereas isotretinoin is a potent inhibitor of cancer formation.''

However, Meyskens added that because other recent research found that beta carotene apparently could in some cases reverse a precancerous condition in humans, other explanations also should be sought.

Meyskens noted there are currently 12 large studies underway in the United States and five in other countries testing beta carotene, retinoic acid and other compounds in more 100,000 people at high risk for cancers of the skin, colon, cervix, breast and lungs.

''If even a few provide positive results, the manner in which we view the management of cancer is likely to undergo a fundamental change,'' he said.

PORTLAND, OR (SEPT. 19) UPI - The House approved legislation Wednesday authored by Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., requiring new safety measures for high-level nuclear waste tanks at Washington's Hanford Nuclear Reservation, the lawmaker said.

Safety experts fear the storage tanks hold potentially explosive combinations of radioactive chemicals, Wyden said.

The legislation, added to a Defense Department authorization bill, requires the Energy Department to identify within 90 days which tanks have a ''serious potential'' for explosive accidents that could release radiation. Adding waste to problem tanks would be banned unless no safer alternative exists.

The amendment also requires that the department draw up emergency contingency plans dealing with tank safety.

The legislation follows recent revelations about the Hanford tank farms. In a July letter to the secretary of energy, the department's safety advisory committee called the waste tanks a ''serious problem'' and warned that ''the possibility of an explosion ... must be taken seriously because of the magnitude of the radioactive inventory available for disposal.''

The measure would require a report to Congress within six months on new tank safety measures, including a timetable for solving waste- handling problems.

MEXICO CITY (SEPT. 19) UPI - A senior free trade negotiator, outlining Mexican goals in upcoming free trade accord talks with the United States, said Wednesday oil matters will be non-negotiable and the sticky issue of illegal labor movement is not planned for the agenda.

''It is not going to be immigration negotiations. We are not looking for an agreement that would allow free movement of workers across the border,'' said Jaime Zabludovsky, coordinator general of the free trade accord (FTA) department of the Mexican Commerce Ministry.

U.S. officials have said Mexico would like to include labor as service during the upcoming free trade negotiations and that Washington's response to that would be negative. Over 1 million Mexicans work in the United States illegally.

''Mexico does not want to export workers, but wants to export goods ... We want to provide them the opportunity to work here. We would not put on the table the idea that the FTA should lift all immigration barriers,'' Zabludovsky said.

He said Mexico will pursue three main objectives in the free trade negotiations - greater access to U.S. markets, ''the fullest elimination'' of tariff and non-tariff barriers and the establishment of a mechanism to resolve bilateral trade disputes.

''We are looking forward to a full phased-out elimination of tariffs in bilateral trade,'' Zabludovsky told United Press International in an interview. ''There are still sectors that are protected in the United States.''

He said such sectors include agriculture, steel, textile, apparel and glass, among others.

Zabludovsky said that although Mexico and the United States - whose bilateral trade exceeds $50 billion a year - have very close economic ties, the United States imposes import quotas on several goods, such as textile.

In addition, there are many Mexican agricultural products that cannot be exported to the United States because of sanitary and other conditions imposed by the U.S. government, Zabludovsky said.

''We will try to negotiate a mechanism to solve bilateral trade disputes and disagreements,'' Zabludovsky said. ''Because of the huge (bilateral) trade, it is natural to expect daily problems.''

The formal free trade negotiations are expected to start around June and will include trade barriers, tariffs, investments, goods, services, copyrights and trademarks.

Zabludovsky said Mexico would not negotiate petroleum in the free trade talks.

''Obviously, oil and energy is an important and worrisome issue in the United States,'' Zabludovsky said. ''But there are some sectors that are exclusively reserved for the state by the Constitution,'' and they cannot be negotiated. He said oil, other hydrocarbons and basic petrochemicals are reserved for the Mexican state.

''Mexico has been a reliable supplier of oil to the United States and perhaps that will be stressed during the negotiations,'' Zabludovsky said.

Mexico, the world's seventh largest oil producer, exports about 1.3 million barrels of oil daily. About 60 percent of that amount is shipped to the United States.

''The FTA is a logical step ahead in structural economic changes and adjustments being made in the Mexican economy,'' Zabludovsky said, referring to current liberalization and opening of the economy to foreign goods and investment.

''There has been a demand for free trade negotiations by Mexican producers ''Zabludovsky said. ''We feel that Mexico should take advantage of its geographical location.''

Mexico, which shares a 1,933-mile-long border with its northern neighbor, is the third largest trading partner of the United States.

It might take between three and four years for the FTA to go into effect, Zabludovsky said, adding that such an accord will benefit both economies.

He said after Mexico and the United States sign the free trade agreement, it may be possible to establish a North American free trade zone that would include Canada, Mexico, and the United States.

Canada has already signed a free trade agreement with the United States.

FREETOWN, SIERRA LEONE (SEPT. 19) UPI - The commanding general of the five-nation West African peacekeeping force is to be replaced after his troops failed to protect the late Liberian President Samuel Doe, diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

Major Gen. Arnold Quainoo, the Ghanaian who took the peacekeeping force sponsored by the Economic Community of West African States into the Liberian capital of Monrovia in August, is expected to be replaced by a Nigerian, Col. Benjamin Adekunle.

Col. Adekunle conducted the government forces during Nigeria's bitter Biafra war in 1967-8.

The replacement of Quainoo is believed to have been decided after the general's failure to prevent Liberian rebel leader Prince Johnson from attacking the ECOWAS forces headquarters in Monrovia last week and arresting Doe.

ECOWAS troops are said to have stood and watched while Doe and his entourage were attacked by Johnson's forces. Doe was taken to Johnson's camp where he later died from his wounds. Peacekeeping forces in Liberia let rebel troops arrest refugees from the dead president's tribe as they tried to flee the county, refugees who managed to escape said Wednesday.

More than 1,080 members of Doe's Krahn tribe were in Monrovia port Tuesday when rebel forces led by Johnson arrived accompanied by Ghanaian soldiers from the West African peacekeeping force and took over 108 away in trucks, the refugees who arrived in Freetown said.

The Krahn refugees had been escorted from the presidential mansion by ECOWAS troops to the port last week.

Among those taken away were the former Deputy Police Director Peter Thomas, the Customs and Excise Director Sam Tody, and the late President Doe's interpreter Thomas Koryeyon. The three are all members of Doe's Krahn tribe.

The Krahn have become the victims of rebel slaughter by both Johnson's troops and forces loyal to the rebel leader Charles Taylor.

The rebel killings are in revenge for the government slaying of hundreds of members of the Gio and Mano tribes, over 600 of whom were massacred in a Monrovia church in August.

ECOWAS forces from five West African countries stood and watched as Johnson's men walked through the crowd at the port, accused over 100 men of being soldiers or government officials, then took them to Johnson's base on the outskirts of Monrovia.

One refugee who escaped Johnson's men and made his way to Freetown described the what happened.

''I was selected by Prince Johnson's men and was taken outside. When I got outside the warehouse where we were being kept, more of Prince Johnson's men were outside. I walked up to one of them and took him by the hand and asked if I could go back inside the warehouse where the other people were, and he said I could. That was how I managed to escape being taken away,'' said James Youbouty, age 27.

''Prince Johnson didn't want any of the people to leave Monrovia on the ECOWAS boat which was in the port. But eventually 32 of us just managed to sneak onto the boat before it left on Tuesday. That was how we got away, but our departure was secret and we left over 900 people behind.

''ECOWAS is supposed to be protecting us, but they didn't do anything about preventing Prince Johnson from taking those people away. And Prince Johnson wants to hold the people hostage. He doesn't want anybody to live,'' he said.

BY LEE STOKES - UPI

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 19) UPI - Syrian President Hafez Assad's first trip to Tehran since the Iranian revolution was expected to set new ground rules for their shaky alliance in the wake of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

The ground rules were expected to have repercussions on U.S. policy in the region as well as for the future of the pro-Kuwaiti Arab camp.

Assad was expected to test the waters in Tehran about a permanent Syrian role in the Persian Gulf to replace U.S.-led multinational '' theecause the Iranians are an important party to the whole process,'' he added. ''The Iranians don't want to leap on a pro-Western bandwagon and they don't want to see the Gulf become a U.S. protectorate.''

Arab news reports said Assad would also ask Iran to send troops to Saudi Arabia.

Saudi Arabia has not rejected the idea of troops from Iran - a country with which the kingdom broke off diplomatic relations - joining the multinational force, and has also asked the Soviet Union to send ground troops to the region.

Syria has sent thousands of troops to help defend Saudi Arabia against Iraqi aggression, thus creating for itself instant popularity in the United States, Saudi Arabia and Egypt - despite its record of assisting radical Arab groups.

Although the United States has put Damascus on its list of states supporting terrorism, during a recent visit to the Syrian capital, Secretary of State James Baker made it clear that Syria had a key role to play in the crisis stemming from Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

''I don't think anything heightens more the isolation of Saddam Hussein in the Arab world than Syrian involvement,'' Baker said during the visit.

Syrian government officials dismiss Western charges of supporting terrorism and remain coy about the agenda of Assad's talks in Tehran, simply making the point that it was pragmatist President Ali-Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani and not the Iraq-leaning spiritual leader Ayatollah Khamenei who invited Assad.

Khamenei has recently called for a holy war against U.S. forces in the gulf region.

But analysts say Syria is worried that a new Iran-Iraq axis will hurt it.

''The Syrians are very frightened of Iraq,'' said David Butter, news editor of the London-based specialist weekly Middle East Economic Digest. ''(Assad) may seek reassurances (in Tehran) that Iran is not teaming up with Iraq.''

During the early years of the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war, Syria and Iran shared a mutual hatred of Saddam Hussein and developed a close economic and political relationship. But the end of that war and Iraq's capitulation last month to Iran's terms for a comprehensive peace settlement have deprived Syria and Iran of a good reason for their shaky alliance.

''The Syrians realized their relationship with a non-Arab country such as Persian Iran was flawed from the beginning and that both sides shared different interests,'' said Ian Jones, a Cairo-based writer on Middle East affairs.

Assad's visit comes at a time when his economic relationship with Iran has reached an all-time low.

''The Iranian-Syrian economic agreement flourished for the first four years of a 10-year agreement signed in 1982, but then deteriorated sharply over disagreements on Lebanon,'' Butter said. ''Also, world oil prices fell making the price Iran was charging Syria for oil less attractive.''

Butter said trade between the two countries slumped in 1988, the last year for which figures are available, to $140 million compared to more than $1 billion in 1985.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (SEPT. 19) UPI - A team of independent NASA engineers began gathering Wednesday at the Kennedy Space Center for exhaustive tests to pin down the source of a crippling fuel leak that has indefinitely grounded the shuttle Columbia.

So far this summer, Columbia's repeated launch delays and a series of fueling tests with both Columbia and the shuttle Atlantis have cost NASA more than $3.8 million and wrecked the space agency's launch schedule, raising questions about the program's ability to meet a productive flight rate.

More important, perhaps, is the potential impact of the delays on the credibility of NASA management, which has repeatedly promised success but has failed to deliver.

Yet another fueling test for Columbia, using television cameras and other sensors in the shuttle's engine room to sniff out the leak once and for all likely will be delayed to at least the middle of next week because of work to replace an apparently faulty valve and part of a fuel line, engineers said.

In the meantime, engineers are pressing on with plans to launch the shuttle Discovery Oct. 5 from nearby pad 39B to carry the Ulysses solar probe into space. Because NASA managers do not believe they are faced with a generic problem, it is unlikely Discovery will be subjected to a fueling test.

Once the Ulysses mission is away, Columbia is expected to be moved from pad 39A to Discovery's pad so the shuttle Atlantis can be hauled out to pad 39A for launch later this fall on a military mission that was grounded in July by yet another hydrogen leak.

At a loss to pinpoint the leaks grounding Columbia, NASA managers have set up a team of agency engineers to study the problem at the Kennedy Space Center, independent of the normal shuttle program chain of command. Panel chairman Robert Schinghamer arrived at the launch site Wednesday.

The leaks only show up in the presence of supercold liquid hydrogen rocket fuel at minus 423 degrees and the first item on the agenda for the leak team is to conduct another fueling test.

This time around, television cameras and other sensors will be mounted in Columbia's engine compartment in the most exhaustive attempt yet to sniff out leaking hydrogen so Columbia can be repaired and launched on an astronomy mission originally scheduled for May 30.

NASA managers had hoped to conduct the fueling test as early as Sunday.

But the exercise is expected to be delayed until at least the middle of next week and possibly longer, engineers say, because of work to replace a main engine fuel valve and a vacuum-jacketed hydrogen line leading to one of three fuel recirculation pumps.

The faulty valve apparently remained stuck open for 10 minutes during fueling Monday night before finally accepting a ''close'' command. The problem did not cause the fuel leak, but the only other such valves currently available are installed aboard the new shuttle Endeavour.

Removing a valve from Endeavour and installing it aboard Columbia will take additional time and likely require a pre-tanking leak test using helium to make sure the replacement hardware is leak free prior to the test.

Columbia originally was scheduled for blastoff May 30, but the ship was grounded the night before during fuel loading when sensors detected explosive hydrogen gas leaking into the shuttle's engine room.

A subsequent tanking test June 6 led engineers to believe the leak involved a massive 17-inch-wide fuel line fitting. As a result, Columbia was hauled off the launch pad and back to its hangar for repairs.

NASA then proceeded with plans to launch Atlantis in July, but another hydrogen leak showed up during a tanking test June 29. Two additional tests were conducted before Atlantis was hauled of the pad and replaced Aug. 9 by Columbia, equipped with a new fuel line ''disconnect'' fitting.

PIQUA, OH (SEPT. 19) UPI - A Florida manufacturer Wednesday offered to replace the buckles on up to 3 million child safety seats that have popped up when improperly fastened.

Robert Potter, a lawyer for Evenflo Juvenile Furniture Co. of Tampa, said the company would replace buckles for car seats manufacturered between April 15, 1985, and April 22, 1990, at its Piqua, Ohio, plant and other locations.

The defective buckles do not meet federal ''partial engagement'' standards that require that an improperly closed buckle release with no more than five pounds of force, Potter said. Tests have shown that some Evenflo buckles require eight pounds of force to be released, he said.

The safeguard is aimed at making it readily apparent if a buckle is not closed Potter said.

Potter said the company does not feel any legal claims filed against the company are related to the buckles.

Consumers with child restraint seats with black buckles and red push buttons were asked to call 800-837-8926 to determine if the seat is affected by the recall, Potter said.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Romanian government has abandoned the idea of creating a mixed economy in favor of a more radical shift to a free market, a top financial official said Wednesday.

In a sharp break from the rhetoric of President Ion Iliescu's campaign speeches, which advocated a mixed economy and warned ''the market economy is not necessarily a good idea,'' Minister for Reform Adrian Severin told an international conference a ''mixed system is impossible to create.''

''There are only two systems for organizing the economy - a centralized one and a market one - which can't stand each other,'' Severin said. ''Our option has to be one or the other, and of course we've chosen the market system.''

Speaking to a conference of economic ministers from the Soviet Union, Bulgaria

Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Hungary, Severin said radical change was necessary, even though it may be unpopular.

''It's difficult for us to expect enthusiasm for reform from'' ordinary working men and women, Severin said. But he added: ''We want to avoid mistakes the others have already made.''

Severin refused to assign the label ''shock therapy'' to Romania's economic plan, but said market-oriented reforms would be applied to all levels of the economy.

But he added the government also was considering freezing the prices of about 80 key products in an attempt to soften the impact of the reforms.

Romania revolted against the hard-line Stalinist government last December. The new government, led by Iliescu, has advocated a mixture of free economic policies and social programs for the poor.

SAN JOSE, CA (SEPT. 19) UPI - Computer reseller Businessland Inc. said Tuesday it would lay off 370 workers, or about 10 percent of the company's work force, in a cost-cutting move aimed at reversing three straight quarters of losses.

The company said it would close money-losing retail subsidiary ComputerCraft and merge the unit's 16 stores into the Businessland chain, which sells computers primarily to large corporations.

David Norman, chairman and chief executive officer, said the layoffs would save an estimated $12 million a year, after a $1 million charge for severance costs to be taken against results for the company's fiscal 1991 first quarter.

It was the third reorganization this year at Businessland, which has been battered on Wall Street for its failure to stem mounting losses. In the year ended June 30, the company posted a loss of $23.1 million on sales of $1.35 billion.

In January, the company laid off about 200 people, representing then about 5 percent of the work force. In April, 18 workers were laid off in Britain and management of the ComputerCraft chain was reshuffled.

Businessland, which has been hurt in part by lower profit margins for computers, also said it would reduce inventories by $50 million, or about 18 percent, this quarter. Norman estimated the reduction would save Businessland about $5 million a year.

Norman would not estimate how long it would take to return the 8- year-old company to profitability.

''This is a very large tanker, and it is hard to turn it like a speedboat,'' he said. ''We've clearly grounded ourselves on a shoal and we're trying to get off it.''

The price of Businessland's stock was down 12.5 cents at $2.375 a share in early afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Norman, who has been criticized by some analysts for his management skills, said he was not considering appointing a chief operating officer to help in day-to-day operations.

Instead, he said the company would trim layers of management and place increased responsibilities in the hands of Michael Poehner, a former East Coast sales executive for Businessland who was promoted to senior vice president for sales and marketing.

''I think I've got a real solid management team here now,'' Norman said in a conference call to reporters and analysts. ''We're making the tough decisions to return to profitability.''

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) UPI - Bolstering his claim of a massive undercount, Mayor David Dinkins Wednesday released city review that found the Census Bureau overlooked more than 250,000 residences on nearly 12,000 city blocks.

Dinkins filed the freshly completed review conducted by the city Planning Department as a formal challenge with the Census Bureau.

He said the analysis showed the bureau's preliminary count issued last month, which found the city lost population in the last 10 years, had actually omitted more than one of every 13 housing units in the city.

The report added ammunition to the city's claim that up to 1 million residents were missed by the Census.

The Census Bureau's preliminary figures found the city's population to be 7.033 million, more than 30,000 lower than a decade ago. But Dinkins said the city's report showed the population was much closer to 7.8 million or 8 million.

''In the past I have referred to the less than complete and less than competent work of the Census Bureau in 1990 as a form of statistical grand larceny,'' Dinkins said.

''Our review of the bureau's preliminary 1990 estimate suggests just how grand with a capital G the bureau's larceny has been.''

In submitting his report to the Census Bureau, Dinkins asked it to review the more than 11,900 city blocks - approximately 43 percent of the city's more than 28,000 residential blocks - where it believes the bureau failed to count at least five or more housing units in each block.

Other big cities across the nation also have charged the census missed many of their residences as well.

Monday, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley reported the bureau may have undercounted the number of residences in his city by nearly 50,000.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Rising oil prices from the Persian Gulf crisis will weaken the world's economic output this year and heat inflation, but the oil shock is not expected to be as severe as that of the 1970s, the International Monetary Fund said Wednesday.

The IMF, in its world economic outlook, projected that growth of the world's economy will slow to about 2 percent this year, down from 3 percent in 1989.

''The global slowdown would reflect a moderation of growth in both industrial and developing countries and a contraction of output in Eastern Europe and in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics,'' the fund said.

The IMF said the lower level of economic activity, and the higher interest rates expected to result from higher oil prices and Middle East tensions, ''will tend to have adverse effects on the fiscal position in most industrial countries.''

In simple terms, this means that economic activity will be ''somewhat slower. There will be somewhat higher unemployments and somewhat higher prices and I emphasize the word 'somewhat,''' said Jacob Frenkel, the IMF's counselor and research director.

Frenkel said the oil shock should not be as severe to the economy as that of the 1970s for several reasons, including greater conservation efforts. He also said the weakened dollar makes U.S. exports more attractive, which in turn will boost the economy.

Frenkel said updated projections show the world's real growth in gross domestic product to averatge about 2 percent this year and 2.5 percent next year.

Economies of industrialized nations are forecast to grow at a rate of 2.5 percent both years while the economies of developing countries are projected to grow 2.25 percent this year and 4.25 percent in 1991.

Frenkel cautioned that the projections are based upon the assumption that oil will sell for an average of $26 a barrel for the remainder of this year and settle at $21 a barrel by the fourth quarter of 1991.

The IMF's economic forecasting staff also assumed that most of the shortfall in oil production, stemming from Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, would be offset gradually by other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

''These are busy times for economic forecasters,'' Frenkel said, adding that it is nearly impossible to forecast which direction oil prices will head.

''There is no doubt that the balance of risk toward a slowdown are tipping foreward with the increases in oil prices,'' he said.

Still, the fund warned against the use of monetary policy to offset any short-term economic problems resulting from rising oil prices.

''Attempts to mitigate the adverse short-run economic effects on output and employment by easing monetary policy would increase price pressures which would evolve into an inflationary process,'' the report said.

Although the overall gropwth of the global economy is expected to ease, especially from slowdowns in the United States and United Kingdom, the IMF said economic activity is forecast to remain ''relatively strong'' in Japan and Germany.

The IMF report appeared to differ from the economic picture painted by the Bush administration, which expects ''solid growth'' among the economies of the world's largest industrialized nations, despite the slowdown of the U.S. economy.

''We are concerned about growth and continuing global growth must be a priority,'' David Mulford, the Treasury Department's undersecretary for international affairs, told reporters at a briefing earlier this week.

The IMF said economic activity will remain sluggish in the United States and United Kingdom next year and inflation could stay relatively high.

MEXICO CITY (SEPT. 19) UPI - Mexico will not insist on opening the U.S. border to Mexican workers in upcoming talks on a free trade pact, a senior trade negotiator said Wednesday.

''It is not going to be immigration negotiations. We are not looking for an agreement that would allow free movement of workers across the border,'' said Jaime Zabludovsky, coordinator general of the Free Trade Accord department of the Mexican Commerce Ministry.

U.S. officials have said Mexico would like to include labor as a service during upcoming negotiations for a U.S.-Mexico free trade pact, effectively opening U.S. labor markets to Mexican workers - a move Washington would oppose. Over 1 million Mexicans work in the United States illegally.

''Mexico does not want to export workers, but wants to export goods ... We want to provide them the opportunity to work here. We would not put on the table the idea that the FTA should lift all immigration barriers,'' Zabludovsky said.

He said Mexico would pursue three main objectives in the free trade negotiations - greater access to U.S. markets, ''the fullest elimination'' of tariff and non-tariff barriers and the establishment of a mechanism to resolve bilateral trade disputes.

''We are looking forward to a full phased-out elimination of tariffs in bilateral trade,'' Zabludovsky told United Press International in an interview. ''There are still sectors that are protected in the United States.''

He said such sectors include agriculture, steel, textile, apparel and glass, among others.

Zabludovsky said that although Mexico and the United States - whose bilateral trade exceeds $50 billion a year - have very close economic ties, the United States imposes import quotas on several goods, such as textile.

In addition, there are many Mexican agricultural products that cannot be exported to the United States because of sanitary and other conditions imposed by the U.S. government, Zabludovsky said.

''We will try to negotiate a mechanism to solve bilateral trade disputes and disagreements,'' Zabludovsky said. ''Because of the huge (bilateral) trade, it is natural to expect daily problems.''

The formal free trade negotiations are expected to start around June and will include trade barriers, tariffs, investments, goods, services, copyrights and trademarks.

Zabludovsky said Mexico would not negotiate petroleum in the free trade talks.

''Obviously, oil and energy is an important and worrisome issue in the United States,'' Zabludovsky said. ''But there are some sectors that are exclusively reserved for the state by the Constitution,'' and they cannot be negotiated. He said oil, other hydrocarbons and basic petrochemicals are reserved for the Mexican state.

''Mexico has been a reliable supplier of oil to the United States and perhaps that will be stressed during the negotiations,'' Zabludovsky said.

Mexico, the world's seventh largest oil producer, exports about 1.3 million barrels of oil daily. About 60 percent of that amount is shipped to the United States.

''The FTA is a logical step ahead in structural economic changes and adjustments being made in the Mexican economy,'' Zabludovsky said, referring to current liberalization and opening of the economy to foreign goods and investment.

''There has been a demand for free trade negotiations by Mexican producers ''Zabludovsky said. ''We feel that Mexico should take advantage of its geographical location.''

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 19) UPI - It's politics almost as usual for President Bush. Riding a crest of approval for Operation Desert Shield, he campaigns for partisan gain in the midst of crisis marked to date by rare if fragile election-year unity.

The Persian Gulf crisis has come to center stage of Campaign '90.

Republican audiences like the ones Bush addressed Tuesday and Wednesday on a $2 million fund-raising swing for Pete Wilson, the Republican candidate for governor in California, still applaud his calls for lower deficits and death to drug kingpins. But it is his warnings to Saddam Hussein that rouse the crowds and are alter the dynamics of the 1990 election.

Politics and patriotism, not without a trace of jingoism.

Exhorting Republicans to ''stand up for America'' and ''show Saddam Hussein what this great nation is all about'' by voting on Election Day.

For the moment, that seems to be working in his favor. Preoccupation with the gulf crisis is not without its hidden risks, however, as Bush strives to protect a national consensus from anxiety and partisan division.

''Bipartisan foreign policy,'' Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, R-Mich., said 40 years ago, ''means a mutual effort under our indispensible two-party system to unite our official voice at the water's edge.''

Long regarded as an axiom of American politics, used and abused over the years by presidents and their critics in Congress, Vandenberg's observation has become Bush's battle cry against Democrats at a time when his actions in the Persian Gulf so demand their sustained support.

''On matters like these,'' he said Tuesday night in Los Angeles, ''we are called upon to put country before self, patriotism before party. So it's good that politics stop at the water's edge. But that still leaves a lot of America in between.''

In the face of a massive military buildup that he acknowledged Sunday had brought Iraq to ''the brink of war,'' Bush suggested it was not only proper but incumbent on Democrats and Republicans to ''vigorously campaign right up to the November election'' as forces of the United States and more than two dozen other countries sweat out the showdown with Saddam part way around the world.

''I am sure,'' Bush said, ''every Democrat agrees. We will not allow our political life to be held hostage to a crisis.''

No indeed. Not Bush or his newly emergent critics. Hours before he spoke those words, the first cracks appeared in the bipartisan consensus that has enabled him to act decisively and with a minimum of second guessing.

At a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing, Assistant Secretary of State John Kelly became the whipping boy for Democrats and some Republicans critical of the administration's failure to prevent the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and how it since has gone about assembling an unholy alliance of friends and enemies against Iraq.

The White House brushed off the ire from Capitol Hill. Only one day earlier, Bush acknowledged regret over how his administration had sought in the months and even days before the invasion to maintain decent relations with Iraq.

On balance, however, he noted approval of Operation Desert Shield was running high. Barring a sudden turn of events for better or worse, either of which could shake the foundation of his support, he is betting it will remain that way through Election Day.

Foreign policy was to have been Bush's strong suit from the start. As he plays each successive card in his high-stakes poker game with Saddam, he keeps the nation's attention riveted on the gulf and away from domestic problems he has tackled with less success or interest, the very issues Democrats had hoped only months ago to see dominate the fall campaign to their advantage.

The blend of it is a patriotic undercurrent that has obscured partisan distinctions and at times muddled the public debate that otherwise would be so much a part of the campaign.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Iraqi crisis has cut short U.S. companies' plans for expansion in the Persian Gulf, but many businesses are ready to weather the storm and prepare for the long haul, the MidEast Report said Wednesday.

''American companies were ready to cash in on a new period of industrial and infrastructure projects in the Middle East,'' said the authoritative newsletter in its latest issue. ''U.S. firms had set their sights on substantial work in the Gulf after the end of the eight-year Iran-Iraq war.''

Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 cut a lot of fresh corporate expectations short.

On that day, Atlanta-based Lockwood Greene International Inc. sent a proposal for the expansion of an industrial bakery in Kuwait City. The offer was never answered as Iraq proclaimed Kuwait a province.

In a bigger blow to the engineering company, an ongoing Lockwood project to equip Kuwait's Ministry of the Interior with a sophisticated security system ended abruptly.

Lockwood is owed an undisclosed amount of money by the Kuwaiti government, now in exile, but executives at the Atlanta headquarters took the philosophical view that its losses in Kuwait were part of doing business in the volatile Middle East.

''These companies will remain in the Middle East because they have been established there for decades, and they feel that, on the long- term, their presence in the Arabian Peninsula will pay off,'' said MidEast Report editor David Mizrahi. ''The Arabs will always remember who was on their side in dire predicaments and will tend to favor those companies who stayed there in difficult times.''

Emco Engineering Inc., based in Canton, Mass., is among the U.S. companies that know doing business in the Middle East takes a long time and does not go without patiently weathering a few storms.

''We still have an office in Baghdad, and we keep a low-key representation there for the time being,'' said an Emco spokeswoman. ''We do not have any U.S. representative there.''

Only three weeks before the invasion, Irvine, Calif.-based Fluor Corp. won a substantial share of a huge government contract to expand Saudi Arabia's oil and gas facilities, a long-term project which could span five to nine years and whose total cost could reach $45 billion, according to the MidEast Report.

Despite the Kuwait invasion, Saudi Arabia's state-owned Aramco, which controls about 97 percent of Saudi oil reserves, did not change its long-term plan nor its basic agreement with U.S. contractors.

Aramco itself has been faced with some serious staffing problems as about 600 employees resigned after the invasion, in fear of an escalation in the conflict, the MidEast Report said. But the Saudi oil company is still going ahead with its new projects.

Another participant in the multibillion-dollar Aramco contract is Parsons Corp., a Californian engineering company which, like Fluor, is moving ahead with its program.

However, Parsons and several subsidiaries are facing losses for all of their Kuwaiti operations, including construction of a power plant and a water-treatment station.

To some, business in the Middle East might even be on the bright side as soaring crude oil prices are bringing an unexpected windfall to several countries.

Saba, who has a long experience of making international business deals in the Middle East, warned that U.S. companies should keep a presence there so that they do not lose ground to competitors from Japan - a mild critic of the Iraqi invasion despite being one of the main victims of the U.N.-ordered embargo against oil exports from Kuwait and Iraq.

''The Japanese are already knocking at doors,'' Saba told the MidEast Report.

Although there are potential benefits for businesses that can afford to wait and see, Mizrahi warned that the current crisis was the worst to affect the Middle East.

''This crisis is more serious because it is the first time that an Arab country invades another Arab country,'' Mizrahi said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Growing demand for swordfish, a tasty seafood favored by the health-conscious, is decimating the species, fishery experts told Congress Wednesday in urging greater conservation efforts.

''The resource is clearly overfished,'' said William Fox, assistant administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The swordfish situation has become ''significantly worse'' during the past five years, Fox added.

A House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee, headed by Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., held a hearing about diminishing stocks of the popular Atlantic swordfish.

Studds said protecting swordfish stocks is complicated because the species ''is highly migratory and highly prized by both foreign and domestic fishermen.''

He said it was unfair to ask American fishermen to bear the full burden of swordfish conservation, but that the United States should take the lead and persuade other countries, particularly Spain, to join the effort.

Since 1985, the Commerce Department has rejected a series of swordfish conservation measures proposed by domestic fishery management councils.

Since then, swordfish fishing has increased. The average size of the fish has dropped significantly, and the number of adult fish also has declined, witnesses said.

Through international negotiations, other countries must share the burden of smaller swordfish catches, said Curtis Bostwick of the Coastal Conservation Commission.

''Do not place the burden of international management on the backs of U.S. fishermen without ensuring that there will be commensurate measures on other nations catching the same fish,'' Bostwick told the House subcommittee.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - House Speaker Thomas Foley does not appear inclined to put an auto fuel economy bill on the legislative fast track, a key House Democrat said Wednesday, a decision that probably would doom the measure for this year.

Rep. John Dingell, D-mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said Foley indicated to him in recent conversations that he would not schedule the bill for accelerated floor consideration by the House.

''The speaker appears to be of the opinion that we should proceed under the regular order,'' Dingell told reporters at a House hearing where he sharply questioned the technological feasibility of meeting the higher fuel efficiency requirements that would be set under the bill.

Under the ''regular order,'' the fuel economy bill would stay in Dingell's committee, where he could bottle it up for the remaining few weeks of the congressional session.

Dingell's remarks come as the Senate moves toward passage this fall of fuel economy legislation that would raise the average federal gasoline mileage standard for new cars from 27.5 miles per gallon to 40 mpg by 2001.

The bill has gained momentum since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, which has reduced the flow of oil from the Mideast and underlined the nation's record dependence on foreign oil. Imported oil now fulfills 50 percent of U.S. consumption.

Proponents of the fuel economy bill measure is the best way for the nation to demonstrate its commitment to energy conservation and reduced reliance on foreign oil.

But Dingell, chief congressional defender of his home-state automakers, has made it clear he sees no need to rush the bill through the House this year.

House supporters of the fuel economy bill asked Foley last week to route the measure directly to the House floor, skipping Dingell's committee, which normally would have jurisdiction over such legislation.

However, Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., a leading backer of the bill, appeared glum about the bill's prospects Wednesday, saying only that chances for a floor vote were ''fair'' and that Foley had not ruled it out.

A spokesman for Foley said the speaker had made no definitive statement on the issue, but noted that little time was left for Congress to address its already packed legislative schedule.

The spokesman said it was a good assumption that ''at this stage of the legislative calendar, the speaker would support the regular order.''

Backers of the bill say the nation cannot reduce its reliance on foreign oil without more efficient motor vehicles because they account for 43 percent of the nation's oil consumption.

But Dingell, automakers, the Bush administration and other critics charge it would provide little oil savings while forcing the production of smaller cars that would compromise highway safety and restrict customer choice at the car lot, hurting sales.

Supporters of the bill note automakers made the same arguments in the mid-1970s when Congress set the initial 27.5 mpg standard, but that the industry met that requirement with no major ''down-sizing'' of its fleets. Average fuel economy has risen from 14 mpg in 1974 to 28 mpg in 1988.

A bill to raise the fuel mileage standard to 40 mpg appears likely to pass the Senate, possibly by the end of this week. Supporters of the bill by Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., won a key preliminary battle last week, engineering a crushing 68-28 vote to bring the bill up for consideration. However, opponents have vowed further efforts to prevent action on the bill.

Amidst the Senate action, Miller and 12 other House backers of fuel economy legislation wrote Foley last week asking for a commitment that the House vote on the issue before the end of the current session.

''This legislation could save 2.8 million gallons of oil per day, nearly one-third of our daily consumption of imported oil,'' Miller told Foley.

''We believe it is crucial that the House have an opportunity to consider this important energy-saving legislation before the end of the session.''

Dingell responded with his own letter to Foley objecting to any end run around his committee.

RICHMOND, VA (UPI) - A federal appeals court Wednesday upheld sanctions against two Fort Bragg, N.C., employees who filed frivolous claims in the largest class action employment discrimination lawsuit in U.S. Army history.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals found the lower court did not abuse its discretion by imposing financial penalties against the civilians, who improperly claimed racial discrimination.

The three-judge panel also upheld sanctions against distinguished civil rights lawyer Julius Chambers, who represented them.

''This case is not one of a District Court sanctioning attorneys and their clients for forwarding novel legal claims,'' the panel said.

''Rather, it is a case in which a District Court imposed sanctions because the parties and counsel pressed on a massive scale insubstantial claims unsupported by any credible evidence.''

However, the appeals panel reduced the size of the penalties, finding U.S. District Judge James C. Fox in Fayetteville, N.C., erred by requiring payment of some court costs, and set aside several others.

The case began a decade ago when two civilian employees alleged discriminatory practices in virtually every area of civilian life at the military base.

After months of investigation and the introduction of an estimated 5 million documents, the District Court denied class action status but allowed 44 persons, including Sandra Blue and Beulah Mae Harris, to proceed with the case.

But as the trial progressed some of the plaintiffs withdrew certain claims and others sought to withdraw entirely from the lawsuit. While the Army acquiesced to the requests, government lawyers asked the court for financial penalties because they had wasted time preparing the case.

In March 1985, a settlement was reached on the remaining claims with the Army agreeing to pay the group $75,000. But that penalty was thrown out four months later when the court determined the claims were baseless.

Blue and Harris were not included in the final settlement, but two years later their charges also were found to be without merit.

''The court makes clear that this is a case in which plaintiffs Blue and Harris leveled widespread charges of racial discrimination without any regard for the truth of their allegations, abandoned frivolous claims without notice after the Army had spent significant amounts of time and money preparing to rebut them, and perjured themselves, all in order to harass and embarrass the personnel at Fort Bragg,'' the three- judge panel ruled.

Harris was ordered to pay $17,000, while Blue was fined $13,000 and Chambers was ordered to pay $30,000. Sanctions against Chambers' young associate in the case, Geraldine Sumter, reached $12,500 and for his law firm, $1,414.

The appeals panel set aside the judgment against Sumter, who had taken over the case only after Chambers became director-counsel for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, as well as Chambers' law firm.

The appeals court also reduced the amount of penalties for the others, finding they should not have to share in paying $38,000 in court costs.

The panel also found the lower court erred in reprimanding Chambers and Sumter for breach of professional ethics and should not have prohibited the NAACP Legal Defense from paying some of the penalties.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Growing demand for swordfish, a tasty seafood favored by the health-conscious, is decimating the species, fishery experts told Congress Wednesday in urging greater conservation efforts.

''The resource is clearly overfished,'' said William Fox, assistant administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The swordfish situation has become ''significantly worse'' during the past five years, Fox added.

A House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee, headed by Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., held a hearing about diminishing stocks of the popular Atlantic swordfish.

Studds said protecting swordfish stocks is complicated because the species ''is highly migratory and highly prized by both foreign and domestic fishermen.''

He said it was unfair to ask American fishermen to bear the full burden of swordfish conservation, but that the United States should take the lead and persuade other countries, particularly Spain, to join the effort.

Since 1985, the Commerce Department has rejected a series of swordfish conservation measures proposed by domestic fishery management councils.

Since then, swordfish fishing has increased. The average size of the fish has dropped significantly, and the number of adult fish also has declined, witnesses said.

Through international negotiations, other countries must share the burden of smaller swordfish catches, said Curtis Bostwick of the Coastal Conservation Commission.

''Do not place the burden of international management on the backs of U.S. fishermen without ensuring that there will be commensurate measures on other nations catching the same fish,'' Bostwick told the House subcommittee.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Drug addicts should receive tax-supported drug treatment on a ''timely'' basis if there is some prospect of success, said an Institute of Medicine report released Wednesday.

The report also said the war on drugs could be fought more effectively if higher quality public treatment services were provided, if public and private spending were better managed and if the government spent at least $3 billion more for drug treatment.

The report, ''Treating Drug Problems,'' was released by the Institute of Medicine, which is part of the National Academy of Sciences.

The government's general goal ''should be to provide adequate support for appropriate and timely admission, completion or maintenance of good- quality treatment for individuals who cannot pay for it whenever such individuals need ... seek ... or can be induced through acceptable means to pursue it, assuming there is some probability of positive response,'' the report said.

There are about 5.5 million people who ''clearly or probably'' need treatment, with about one-fifth of them in prison or on parole or probation, the report said.

The scientists urged the government to spend about $2.2 billion more than its 1989 funding level of $900 million for drug treatment, plus $1.1 billion in one-time spending to upgrade and expand treatment programs.

The federal government's 1990 anti-drug program totaled $9.5 billion, with about $1.3 billion earmarked for treatment.

While the Office of National Drug Control Policy expressed general satisfaction with the report, Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, said he expected more from scientists.

''I can't go to (National Drug Control Policy Director William) Bennett or (Health Secretary Louis) Sullivan, and I had hoped I could go to the national association of scientists to find out which are the best drug treatment programs,'' Rangel said in an interview.

''To say that we need more treatment is like saying cancer patients need more treatment. That's abundantly clear,'' he said.

Rangel was particularly critical of the report's assessment that of the four main treatment methods, ''methadone maintenance (for heroin addiction) ... has yielded the most positive results for those who seek it.''

Rangel noted a recent General Accounting Office report stating that many methadone patients return to heroin or other drugs or get hooked on methadone.

The other treatment methods are chemical dependency programs, residential drug programs and out-patient non-methadone programs.

An official with the Office of National Drug Control Policy, who did not want to be identified, said he was glad the report called for ''timely'' drug treatment, not treatment on demand.

''The problem with treatment on demand is that it places public policy at the whim and caprice of addicts. It says these people should be treated when the addict demands treatment,'' he said. ''Most often they demand treatment when they're coming off a drug high and may not want to complete the treatment later.''

Dean Gerstein, a co-editor of the report, said that, in general, addicts should be able to receive treatment, but he said many addicts lapse into old drug habits even after going through several treatment programs.

''People who repeatedly fail to respond may not be good candidates for treatment,'' Gerstein said in an interview. ''There is a point at which it is reasonable to say the treatment system can't help this person.'' (SEPT. 19) UPI - Iraq announced Wednesday it passed a law allowing it to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad and declared that it was no longer responsible for the safety of foreign property in occupied Kuwait and Iraq.

That move, likely to further exacerbate tensions with the West, came as the U.N. Security Council prepared to discuss an air embargo against Iraq to tighten enforcement of economic sanctions imposed after the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Yuliy Vorontsov of the Soviet Union, president of the Security Council this month, said the council would take up the issue of a possible air embargo Friday. Nine Western European nations have called for the air embargo to prevent supplies reaching Baghdad by air in violation of the U.N. embargo.

President Bush has said Washington would support extending the multinational embargo on trade to Iraq to include airplane flights.

France said two more French civilians were captured in Kuwait this week and taken to unknown destinations. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has been holding foreign men at vital installations against a possible attack by the U.S.-led multinational force in the Persian Gulf area.

U.S. and British officials said more than 400 foreigners held in Iraq and Kuwait, including up to 300 U.S. citizens and dependents, are scheduled to board a chartered Iraqi Airlines flight Wednesday bound for London from Bagdad.

The airlift is expected to follow the same pattern as previous flights, with the Americans spending the night at hotels outside London before boarding a flight bound for the United States sometime Thursday.

The Iraqi News Agency reported that Iraq's ruling Revolution Command Council passed a eight-part law giving Baghdad the go ahead to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad.

''The seventh article of the law provided for seizing all assets and their revenues belonging to the governments, institutions, companies and banks of the countries that had issued oppressive resolutions against Iraq,'' INA said in a dispatch.

The law also stated ''the Iraqi side would not be responsible for any direct or indirect damage'' to their property, equipment and machinery.

It was not immediately clear if the law passed late Tuesday and announced Wednesday meant Iraq would immediately seize the assets or whether it was reserving the option to do so.

''It could mean everything or nothing,'' said one Western diplomat in Cairo about the newest Iraqi measure. ''They could be setting up something, perhaps some sort of confiscation, but right now it is quite unclear.''

Diplomats in the area said they could not determine how much foreign assets in Iraq and Kuwait were worth, but said the amount was probably considerable.

Many major companies, especially in the construction and oil industries, did business in the oil-rich emirate and left behind offices and equipment in the rush to evacuate foreign nationals from the region.

Most governments have abandoned their embassies in Kuwait when Iraq ordered them closed and the diplomats relocated to Baghdad, and the remaining Western missions are guarded by only a handful of personnel.

The Iraqi news agency said the ruling council passed the latest law after declaring international freeze on Iraqi assets ''null and void'' and said it ''held banks abroad fully responsible in protecting Iraqi assets deposited with them and their due commercial interests and other profits and rights.''

Most governments moved to freeze Iraqi and Kuwaiti assets in retaliation for Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and subsequent annexation of Kuwait.

In other developments Wednesday:

-The House passed a $283 billion defense authorization bill that includes $1 billion for Operation Desert Shield items such as danger pay for military personnel stationed in Saudi Arabia. Adopted 256-155 on a largely party-line vote, the House bill still must be reconciled with a $289 billion version adopted by the Senate.

-Sudan joined Iraq in calling for a jihad, or holy war, against the non-Islamic Western forces, the official Sudan news agency said. A joint statement with Iraq, the strongest yet from Iraq's Moslem ally in East Africa, called for ''holy war and solidarity among Arabs and Moslems wherever they are to protect the Arab and Islamic holy places.''

Saddam Hussein has called for a holy war in an attempt to appeal to Islamic nationalism and pride. The attempt has succeeded in many nations, where Arabs have held frequent demonstrations against the U.S.- led military presence in the gulf region. Iran's religious leadership has similarly called for holy war against the Western forces in the Gulf.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Persian Gulf crisis is flooding the Middle East with a multibillion-dollar wave of highly sophisticated arms - the most lethal of them made in the U.S.A. - that is rocking the region's military balance of power.

The Bush administration has served informal notice it will soon propose selling Saudi Arabia some $20 billion in advanced fighter- interceptors and fighter-bombers, defensive and offensive missiles, and turbine-powered tanks with laser gun sights.

Israel, already possessing some of the equipment the Saudis hope to get, now wants more and better weapons from Washington to match the Saudi buildup. The United States, committed to maintaining Israel's qualitative military edge, has agreed.

Israel also asked for the same kind of financial consideration President Bush has proposed for Egypt - forgiveness of about $7 billion in debts for military purchases from the United States.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger says such financial largesse is not in the cards. The American reasoning is that Egypt is a unique case, an economic basket case that could not pay the debt anyway.

If the Israeli debt were written off, other nations - including Turkey, Pakistan and the Philippines - would be lining up at the cashier's window for the treatment, costing the United States billions of dollars.

Supporters of Israel in Congress appear to have given up hope of stopping the Saudi sale and have taken a fallback position: split the ''monster Saudi sale'' into two parts.

The first part, weapons needed in the current emergency, would sail right through Congress without even token opposition because of the pressing need of the Saudis facing the Iraqis. But opponents of the Saudi sale hope to stop longer-range items, or at least put restrictions on the use of the aircraft and tanks, making it more difficult for them to be turned against Israel.

The Saudis believe they have the support in the administration and Congress to get the whole package in one shot, and they want to do it now, while Saudi military needs are something Americans can easily grasp thanks to the tens of thousands of U.S. troops deployed in defense of the oil-rich kingdom.

One respected member of Congress, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, made a telling point. It is an argument, given the current fears of recession, that probably ensures Congress will not stop the sale, as it could with a majority vote in both the House and Senate.

Leach said the issue is not a question of stopping the Saudis from buying the arms; it is a question of whether they buy them from the United States or some other country.

By illustration, he said one part of the proposed Saudi sale is 10, 000 trucks. ''Would you want them to be Citroens, or Mercedes, or Hondas, or be made in Russia,'' he asked. ''I want the Saudis to buy American, from GM, or Chrysler or Ford.''

Henry Rowen, the assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, chimed in with supporting evidence. He said the last time Congress stopped the sale of F-15s to Saudi Arabia because of heavy lobbying from Israel, the Saudis turned to Britain for what may be the biggest arms deal of the century: two squadrons of Tornado fighter- bombers.

With training, spare parts and ground installations, Rowen said, the total package may have reached $30 billion - money that went to the British economy rather than the U.S. economy.

The Saudis have made a similar argument. The United States has been pressing them to recycle their petro-dollars into the American economy and Saudi Ambassador Prince Bandar bin Sultan says military sales are a form of such investment.

With the U.S. defense industry facing lean times as Cold War spending ends, that line of reasoning likely will be greeted thankfully by U.S. manufacturers.

PRETORIA, SOUTH AFRICA (SEPT. 19) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk announced additional measures Wednesday intended to curb a wave of urban black violence and save his government's racial reform program.

At the same time, the African National Congress' policy-making National Executive Committee annnounced it was extending a special meeting in Johannesburg on the violence for a third day Thursday.

De Klerk, who departs Saturday for Washington for talks with President Bush, said the Cabinet had ratified the measures taken by police over the weekend in ''Operation Iron Fist'' but also approved several additional steps.

The police actions included roadblocks to search for firearms, cordoning of township hostels and squatter camps, where fighting has erupted with razor wire, possible curfews and the arming of police mobile units with machineguns.

De Klerk pledged security force actions would be ''strict but controlled and impartial.'' His law and order minister, Adriaan Vlok, sought to allay concerns over mounting machineguns on armored personnel, saying they would not be used for crowd control.

The new measures included a crackdown on the illegal possession of weapons, creation of special units to investigate specific incidents that have occurred in recent weeks and the possible appointment of a special investigator to probe allegations of official abuse of power.

''I want to emphasize that the government has committed itself to the process of negotiation,'' De Klerk said. ''Nonetheless it would appear that there are still those bent on thwarting the process of negotiation by violence.''

More than 730 people have died in black townships surrounding Johannesburg since early August in clashes mainly between supporters of the ANC and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha in an unprecedented outbreak of urban violence.

ANCHORAGE, AK (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Soviet Union is considering proposals to open an arctic shipping route that would significantly reduce the distance freighters must travel carrying goods between Europe and the Far East, according to officials meeting this week at a Northern Regions Conference.

The icy sea route stretching beyond the northernmost reach of the Russian land mass is used by Soviet icebreakers traveling between Soviet Europe and the Soviet Far East, but shippers from Europe to America want the route opened for international cargo traffic.

''I believe that if the Northeast Passage can be opened, it will be the biggest thing to happen to the northern region in this century,'' said Ivar Ytreland, governor of Norway's Trondelag province.

''The Northeast Passage could become a new fantastic maritime route between Europe and the Far East,'' Ytreland said. ''For example, a sea- route between western Europe to Japan and Korea would be 10,000 kilometers (6,000 miles) shorter than the sea route via the Suez Canal.''

''It's a big proposal but we're determined to see it through,'' Paul Fuhs, mayor of Unalaska, site of a major Alaska fishing port at Dutch Harbor, said of proposals to open the arctic sea route.

Fuhs, claiming support from port directors in Alaska and Tacoma, Wash., said discussions on opening the arctic sea route were planned with Soviet shipping officials in Anchorage this week for the 11-nation Northern Regions Conference.

''Our government is considering the issue of opening the Northeast Passage,'' said Artur Chilingarov, deputy chairman of the Soviet state committee for hydrometerology and a top delegate at the conference. ''Results will be conveyed to all interested parties very soon.''

But Chilingarov hinted that, despite a warming in U.S.-Soviet relations, there may be some military defense obstacles to opening the waterway across the Soviet north.

Freighters carrying cargo between Europe and North Pacific ports in the Far East and the West Coast of North America now travel around continents and through the Suez and Panama Canals. This freight could take a more direct route through arctic waters north of Russia, Fuhs said.

The proposed arctic shipping channel is variously called the Northeast Passage the Northern Sea Route or the Arctic Great Circle Trade Route.

Under most scenarios, cargo from Asia and North America would leave Tokyo, Seoul and Tacoma on ships bound for Dutch Harbor, Alaska, to pick up fish and supplies and then head through the Bering Strait, across the arctic and into northern European ports. On the return trip, European goods and Alaska fish would be delivered to Tokyo, Seoul and Tacoma.

The journey would require Soviet nuclear icebreaker escorts and possibly the use of Soviet freighters with reinforced hulls. Ytreland said Soviet icebreaking capabilities could keep the passage open most of the year.

Norway and Alaska would serve as gateway ports on either end of the journey, Ytreland said.

Such an arrangement would benefit trade between northern Europe and the Pacific Rim, but Jostein Berg, a professor at the Norwegian Institute of Technology, said, ''The Soviets would benefit the most.''

Berg said opening the northern shipping route could mean business and goods entering Soviet ports. He said the Soviets could join the trade and earn western currency for becoming involved in the shipping.

Fuhs said the northern sea route would dramatically improve the marketability of forest, mineral and fisheries products and other goods benefiting from a shorter route.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) UPI - Oil stockpiling by wholesalers and consumers, especially of jet and industrial fuels, apparently has been taking place as prices have risen, the oil industry's American Petroleum Institute reported Wednesday.

The August output of gasoline and heating oil by the nation's refineries also reached the highest level in more than 10 years while refinery deliveries barely rose over a year ago, the API said, suggesting the possibility that some deliveries were held back until prices rose.

In its monthly report, the API said the total of petroleum products supplied domestically rose 3.1 percent in August to 17.9 million barrels a day.

Prior to the world crisis triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil- rich Kuwait and the U.N. embargo of exports from the two nations, the underlying trend in oil consumption was ''estimated to have been roughly flat to down slightly'' compared to last year, the report said.

''Apparently, ... part of August's deliveries represented an increase in secondary (wholesale) and tertiary (consumer) inventories rather than a rise in consumption,'' the API said.

Oil traders have attributed the rise in oil prices since the invasion at least partially to stockpiling.

The API said the stockpiling appeared to date from the increase in oil prices that began in late June rather than the Iraqi invasion. It said domestic petroleum deliveries rose 6 percent in July.

''If you're a buyer and you anticipate a rise in prices, you've got a certain incentive to buy now rather than later,'' an API executive said.

Prices of crude oil rose by more than 30 percent in the six weeks prior to the invasion as a result of Iraqi pressure on the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Countries to limit overproduction by Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

Prices have risen more than 50 percent since the Iraqi invasion.

The OPEC cartel pumps more than a third of the world's crude and attempts to support prices by limiting the output of its members.

The stockpiling appeared to be concentrated in the areas of airline jet fuel and so-called residual fuels for industrial uses such as electric power generation, the API said.

In August, kerosine jet deliveries rose 12.4 percent over a year ago to 1.4 million barrels daily and residual fuel deliveries shot up 13.9 percent to 1.27 million barrels daily.

The increase in jet fuel deliveries, which had been growing at a 5-6 percent rate, ''may also reflect unquantified increases in military jet- fuel use to support the U.S. airlift to Saudi Arabia,'' the report said.

August demand for electricity was up only about 5 percent over a year ago. Therefore, ''it is believed that, as with other products, changes in non-primary inventories contributed to a portion of the deliveries increase,'' it said.

The report said refinery output of gasoline and distillates, which include heating oil and diesel fuel, ''reached the highest levels for any August since the 1970s.''

It said the nation's refineries operated at 92.9 percent of reported capacity in August, an increase of 4 percent over a year ago.

Nevertheless, it said, ''Deliveries of gasoline in August were at about the same level as they were during August 1989,'' suggesting that some refiners may have been holding back on deliveries until prices rose.

An API executive said the disparity could possibly be accounted for by a year-to-year drop in imports.

API statistics showed that August gasoline imports dropped to an average of 350,000 barrels a day from August 1989's 372,000 barrels daily.

The report said the growth in gasoline deliveries from a year ago declined from July's 6 percent rise to an 0.7 percent increase in August.

''With some demand response to higher prices already taking place and an economy that has apparently continued to weaken, actual consumption in August most likely declined somewhat from a year ago,'' the API said.

It also said August distillate deliveries rose 2.8 percent over a year ago ''much less than July's double-digit rate, but still diverging from estimated previous consumption trends.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (SEPT. 19) UPI - Delays launching the shuttle Columbia and repeated tests to track down the source of elusive hydrogen leaks have cost NASA more than $3 million in lost fuel, overtime and travel expenses alone.

But agency officials said Wednesday the cost is minuscule compared to the overall price of a shuttle launch - more than $300 million - and the need to make absolutely sure no dangerous leaks are present at launch that could endanger a shuttle or its crew.

NASA originally intended to launch eight shuttle missions in fiscal year 1990. The agency's budget for space shuttle operations during that period totaled $2.5 billion, which works out to roughly $311 million per flight.

Determining the cost of not flying a mission, or delaying one indefinitely, is more difficult to calculate.

''There's no way to calculate (the cost) of a delay because when you put a budget together, you put it together to support X number of flights that fiscal year,'' said NASA spokesman Mark Hess. ''The real cost is we're not going to fly three or four flights this year.

''You don't spend that money flying, but you spend that money doing what we've been doing. It may turn out that we don't spend all the money we planned to spend because we're not flying.''

Columbia originally was scheduled for launch May 30, but the flight was put on hold after sensors detected hydrogen gas leaking into the ship's engine room. A subsequent fueling test appeared to traced the leak to a massive 17-inch-wide fuel line fitting.

Columbia then was hauled off the launch pad and replaced by the shuttle Atlantis. But a fueling test turned up yet another leak and two more such tests were conducted before Atlantis was taken back to its hangar for repairs.

In the meantime, Columbia was equipped with a new ''disconnect'' fitting and hauled back to launch pad 39A Aug. 9 for a launch attempt around Sept. 1.

But leaks showed up during two subsequent launch attempts and the flight now is on hold indefinitely.

NASA documents say a launch delay after fueling costs the space agency roughly $764,000, including travel for NASA engineers and managers, overtime and other factors. The cost of lost fuel alone runs about $377,000 per ''tanking.''

NASA fueled Columbia for launch three times - May 29, Sept. 5 and Sept. 17 - and conducted four other fueling tests, one with Columbia and three with Atlantis.

Excluding the cost of one launch fueling, which NASA would have spent anyway had the mission gotten off the ground, the space agency has spent more than $3 million for the aborted launch attempts and testing.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (SEPT. 19) UPI - Six year-old Claudia stands on a busy street corner in bare feet and a tattered dress, selling bags of apples and Coca-Cola in two-liter bottles.

For eight hours a day, cars whiz by within six inches of her as she darts from window to window peddling the Coke for about $2 a bottle.

Nicaraguans did not have the option of buying apples or Coke in the plastic bottles when a new government took over five months ago. But these and other consumer products now flow freely across the Honduran border, thanks to an easing of trade restrictions and a lifting of the U.S. trade embargo.

Since President Violeta Chamorro took office, Nicaragua also has seen its unemployment rate to at least 34 percent, while consumer prices have become the highest in Central America.

Now Chamorro is having trouble convincing the people that the hardship she has asked them to endure will not kill the economy before curing it.

''Things are difficult, but we have enough to eat,'' said Nidia Sanchez, 24, who works in a small shop selling Nicaraguan-made shoes. ''The only thing is that now people are out of work. Those who are working are fine. Those who are not are resorting to stealing.''

Despite the hardships, she said things are better because ''we now have the freedom to buy and sell as we please without government control.''

Coca Cola and numerous other Western products have been arriving in Nicaragua for the first time in years. Some are appearing for the first time ever. They now compete with local products and with black-market goods that continue to be smuggled in from Panama.

The new goods do not come in shiny tractor-trailers from wholesalers, and most of them are not sold in supermarkets. They cross the border in pick-upsand cattle trucks and are sold by people like Claudia and by vendors at the Eastern Market - a thriving mass of tiny shops and outdoor stands.

Nicaraguans buy the Coke as much for the novelty of the bottles as for the soft drink. After drinking the Coke, they refill the containers with fresh milk purchased from ranchers and freeze it for later use.

''People are not buying as much. They can't afford it,'' said Juan Carlos Lucas, who peddles black-market televisions and other electronic goods at the Eastern Market.

''I went to Honduras a week ago to check it out,'' Lucas said. ''Things are terrible there - the mayhem and the lines going back and forth across the border - and the prices are not much better than what I can get on the black market.''

The government acknowledged this week that 400,000 people are out of work, though some economists have put the figure at 500,000 or higher. No reliable figures exist for unemployment under the former Sandinista government, but most observers agree that it was much lower.

In an effort to reduce the fiscal deficit, running at about $220 million a year, Chamorro has fired thousands of state workers, virtually all of them Sandinistas and their sympathizers. She has also discharged or given permission to leave the ranks of the military to some 35,000 troops of the Sandinista Popular Army.

Another 20,000 former Contra rebels who fought against the Sandanistas during the 1980s have also entered the work force. Although many of them plan to farm the land they have been given free, others have been unsuccessfully searching for work to support their families.

To make matters worse, elimination of many government subsidies has contributed to skyrocketing prices.

''I thought Costa Rica was expensive,'' said Flori de Vilma, a Costa Rican visiting Managua. ''Things here are three times more expensive than in Costa Rica. It wasn't like this when I was here last November.''

According to Juan Medina, an independent economist, a family needs a minimum of $46 a week to survive, compared with about $27.50 a week when Chamorro took office. Using the constantly devaluating local currency, the minimum survival amount has risen 15 times in that period.

Salaries have not risen in proportion with the price increases, though the government has promised that prices will drop soon and salaries will go up once wages are paid in the new cordoba oro monetary unit, which has a fixed value at par with the dollar.

To arrive at a solution to the economic crisis, the government was to begin a ''national dialogue'' Thursday bringing together all sectors of the economy. Before it even started, however, the dialogue seemed prone to fail because the Sandinistas and their powerful labor unions said they would not attend.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 19) UPI - The judge who ordered former Lincoln Savings and Loan owner Charles H. Keating Jr. jailed on $5 million bail agreed Wednesday to consider a lower bond while Keating awaits trial on fraud charges.

Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner scheduled a hearing Thursday to hearing defense requests for lower bail for Keating and his three co- defendants, all former thrift executives, who are being held on $1 million bail each.

Defense attorneys told Klausner that the four, who were jailed Tuesday after a 42-count grand jury indictment against them was unsealed, should be released on their own recognizance. Keating, who made a fortune in Arizona real estate, has claimed he is broke.

Deputy District Attorney William Hodgeman, who is prosecuting the case, told Klausner that he would support cutting Keating's bail to $1 million. He also said he would back reducing bail for the other defendants to $50,000.

''The bail may be too low; it may be too high,'' Klausner said in granting the hearing. He said the bails had been set ''to guarantee'' the appearance of the defendants at future proceedings.

''This is not a punitive measure,'' Klausner said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - As the Senate Judiciary Committee wrapped up five days of confirmation hearings on Supreme Court nominee David Souter Wednesday, several prominent feminists demanded an apology from the panel for being treated as ''bad girls'' by committee Republicans.

The 14-member committee heard testimony from Souter, President Bush's nominee to replace Justice William Brennan on the high court, and more than 40 witnesses supporting and opposing the New Hampshire federal appeals court judge's inclusion on the Supreme Court during its hearings.

The panel's chairman, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said he is planning a committee vote for Sept. 27, meaning Souter could join the Supreme Court before the Oct. 1 start of court's fall term.

Souter's approval by the panel is considered a virtual certainty, as none of the eight Democratic and six Republican committee members has publicly opposed the nominee and many have predicted confirmation.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said he ''holds the fond hope that it might even be unanimous.''

The committee Wednesday heard from witnesses representing civil rights and homosexual organizations opposed to Souter's confirmation and several law enforcement officials supporting the nominee, as well as two former Harvard classmates of Souter who differed on the nominee's empathy for women and minorities.

Fallout continued from an acrimonious exchange Tuesday night between three Republican committee members and six prominent feminists who were testifying before the panel.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., refused to ask the witnesses a question, but remarked that they were ''lovely ladies.'' Simpson rebuked the women for ''casting a glance and shrug'' and wondering why ''boobs'' on the committee weren't paying attention, and said women's groups ''hung poor (1987 conservative court nominee) Robert Bork high up in the cottonwood tree.''

And Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who spoke on the Senate floor in favor of Souter Wednesday, four times explicitly described circumstances dealing with a rape while defending the nominee's ruling in a 1988 rape case.

''It trivializes our issues to treat us that way, like we are bad girls and we have to be chastised in public,'' said Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women. ''We want serious treatment for our issues. They don't do that to men. I would like the committee to apologize for the way we were treated.''

Eleanor Smeal, former NOW leader and current president of the Fund for a Feminist Majority, said the incident ''just speaks volumes about sexism right here in the Senate.''

''It's a patronizing, condescending attitude - that the only thing that matters is our looks,'' Smeal added. ''It's was a most childish way to put us in our place.''

Simpson said he met privately with Yard and Smeal Wednesday, but gave no apology.

''It's always strange to me how they love to dish it but they don't like to take it,'' said Simpson, who is pro-choice. ''I've seen Molly Yard and Eleanor Smeal dish it out in vigorous fashion, punching out the lights. Then you give a little bit of it back and suddenly you've got what all men most fear: tears.''

''If they are talking about an apology, I'd like to see them extend one to Senator Strom Thurmond (because) they rolled their eyes and choked and huffed and shrugged while he spoke for about 30 seconds,'' Simpson added.

Simpson called Thurmond ''a Southern gentleman,'' termed the women's behavior ''arrogant'' and blasted allegations they were treated differently than male witnesses.

''It is a true double standard,'' Simpson said. ''That (claiming unequal treatment) is a refuge when you have no argument.''

The women earlier testified that Souter would become the swing vote in overturning the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling that guaranteed abortion rights and that other privacy rights, such as the use of birth control, could be called into question.

Biden made reference to the the incident during Wednesday's hearing, telling different witnesses, ''We all have to be accustomed to odious descriptions as part of the Democratic process.''

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 19) UPI - Federal energy officials may pursue Nevada as a potential national radioactive waste dump site, despite the Nevada Legislature's opposition, a federal appeals court ruled Wednesday.

Nevada is the sole remaining state under consideration from among five states originally nominated for site review by the secretary of energy.

Nevada lawmakers have attempted to block any further consideration of the Yucca Mountain site, 100 miles northeast of Las Vegas, by withholding consent for environmental permits and passing joint resolutions in the Legislature in 1989 expressing ''adamant opposition to the placement of a high-level nuclear waste respository in the State of Nevada.''

The state also accused the secretary of energy and Congress of failing to adhere to legal procedures set out in the laws governing siting of nuclear waste dumps.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals unanimously ruled that the federal government has not violated constitutional mandates and may continue its review of the Nevada site.

Although Nevada was the only state selected for site study, the action does not constitute final selection. It merely allows federal authorities to proceed with scientific studies of the site's potential.

Harry Swainston, Nevada deputy attorney general, said, ''Nevada was selected as the only site to be characterized (for review). There are not five other sites at this point.''

Swainston said appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court and a request for reconsideration by the appeal court are options that remain available.

In 1987, the five nominated states - Nevada, Mississippi, Texas, Utah and Washington - were narrowed to Nevada, Hanford, Wash., and Deaf Smith, Texas.

The Texas and Washington sites were ''let off the hook'' in favor of Nevada, Swainston said.

Nevada maintains that it passed a valid veto of the proposed site and that the action was not preempted by federal law.

The Nuclear Waste Policy Act allows a state to submit a notice of disapproval of a site to Congress, which has 90 days to overrride the disapproval notice.

Nevada Attorney General Brian McKay vowed prior to arguments before the court in August to ''use every tool possible to block the proposed site.''

Nevada argued that allowing the 49 states, through Congress, to push the dump onto Nevada would ''destroy the economy or environment of (the republic's) politically weakest member.''

Judge Arthur Alarcon wrote that the secretary of energy properly pointed out that the ''10th Amendment does not protect a state from being outvoted in Congress.''

''Nevada's relative lack of political strength is a result of the 'Great Compromise' of the 1787 Constitutional Convention, in which each state was guaranteed equal representation in the Senate and proportionate representation in the House of Representatives,'' Alarcon wrote.

There is no likelihood of a nuclear site being created in the immediate future.

Site verification study by federal experts is expected to take six to 10 years according to Assistant U.S. Attorney General Richard Stewart, who argued the case before the appeal court.

Alarcon was joined in the decision by Judges J. Clifford Wallace and Charles Wiggins.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney approved imminent danger pay Wednesday for about 150,000 U.S. military personnel in Saudi Arabia and nearby waters, providing each serviceman and woman with an extra $110 per month.

''In recognition of the sacrifices our military men and women are making, I have directed the payment of this supplemental benefit to the troops on the front lines,'' Cheney said. ''This is an appropriate step given the risks they face and the harsh conditions in which they serve.''

The extra pay applies to soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines, regardless of rank, who are on the Arabian peninsula or on the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea, the Gulf of Oman, the Gulf of Aden and the northern Arabian Sea.

Defense officials said there are about 150,000 U.S. military personnel affected. Therefore, the extra $110 for each person will amount to an additional $16.5 million paid out a month.

The Pentagon has estimated that Operation Desert Shield will cost more than $1 billion a month.

The secretary of defense has the authority to grant the supplemental pay to members of the armed forces serving in specified high-risk areas.

UNITED NATIONS (SEPT. 19) UPI - The U.N. Security Council plans to approve a peace plan on Cambodia worked out by its five permanent members and call for the early resumption of an international conference on Cambodia, diplomats said Wednesday.

The diplomats said the council will meet Thursday to approve the peace framework and welcome the formation of the 12-member Supreme National Council named by the four Cambodian factions this month.

Also Thursday, the United States and Vietnam will hold their third round of talks in New York at the level of vice minister to discuss the U.N. peace plan on Cambodia. The United States has enlisted Vietnam's help to pursuade pro-Hanoi Prime Minister Hun Sen to go along with U.N.- organized elections.

Diplomatic sources said Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach will be in New York next week to attend the General Assembly in sign there has been some form of progress in the U.S.-Vietnam talks on Cambodia.

Vietnam has held hopes that the talks would lead to more serious discussions for the resumption of diplomatic relations with the United States.

Under the U.N. plan on Cambodia, the council represents Cambodia's ultimate authority to deal with the United Nations during the transition period leading to U.N.-organized general elections for a future Cambodian government.

The plan, agreed by the five powers in August after eight months of negotiations, called for setting up the council and gave the United Nations a major role in running part of the Cambodian administration and organizing general elections.

But the four Cambodian parties - the anti-Vietnam resistance headed by Prince Norodom Sihanouk and the Cambodian government - failed this week to elect a president of the council in meetings in Bangkok, Thailand.

Although both sides agreed that Sihanouk, the top resistance leader and former monarch, would be chairman, they differed on whether he would join as 12th or 13th member.

Diplomats said Hun Sen wanted Sihanouk to be among the 12 members of the council, not the 13th member as suggested by the U.N. plan. The resistance movement and Hun Sen equally share the 12-member council and a 13th member would tip the balance to the resistance's advantage.

The parties also failed to name a delegation to attend the U.N. General Assembly, which opened its 45th session Tuesday. Sihanouk supposedly was to head the delegation once he became council president.

Diplomats said Hun Sen wanted to be named the vice president of the council, practically creating a 14th member for the body. They said he also wanted to be deputy to Sihanouk in the U.N. delegation.

The present U.N. delegation represents a three-part rebel coalition headed by Sihanouk. It has had U.N. recognition since it was formed in 1982 to oppose the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia, which began with Hanoi's invasion in 1978 to oust a bloody regime of the communist Khmer Rouge.

The resolution on Cambodia to be adopted by the council calls on all Cambodian parties to the 11-year-old conflict to exercise maximum restraint to create a peace atmosphere that would help implementation of a final political settlement.

It calls on France and Indonesia to increase consultations in order to reconvene the Paris conference which will work out details of the final settlement. Diplomats said the conference may be reconvened in November.

In addition, the resolution urges Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to make preparatory studies to set up the U.N. peacekeeping force in Cambodia. More than 20,000 personnel will participate in the force during the transition period, the largest U.N. force involved in a peace process.

MEXICO CITY (SEPT. 19) UPI - President Carlos Salinas de Gortari led a subdued ceremony Wednesday marking the fifth anniversary of the devastating earthquake that left thousands of Mexico City residents dead.

''This is a homage to all those that died in the earthquake and a call for us to stay united and to join forces to move forward,'' Salinas said.

The mumber of mourners at the Zocalo, or central square, was far fewer than last year, and commemoration ceremonies throughout the city were on a smaller scale than previous years.

The earthquake, which made concrete crumble and glass shatter, hit Sept. 19, 1985 at 7:19 a.m. local time, measuring 8.1 on the open-ended Richter scale. An aftershock of 7.5 on the Richter scale shook the city again the following day.

The government has said 9,000 people died in the disaster. U.S embassy officials and private aid groups, however, put the death toll at more than 20,000.

The skeletons of many of the some 4,500 buildings damaged still stand on downtown streets as testaments to the $20 billion worth of destruction that sacked the city.

Half a million people were left homeless from the quake. The government constructed thousands of new apartments in an attempt to relocate all those affected, but many remain living in dangerously damaged houses in the city center and on the streets.

Former President Miguel de la Madrid said Mexico received $75 million in foreign emergency aid to help rebuild after the earthquake.

Mexico City Mayor Manuel Camacho Solis said recently he was satisfied with the government's programs to relocate those left homeless.

''Today, five years after the earthquakes, there are no more housing needs for those affected,'' Camacho Solis said at Wednesday's ceremony.

Reconstruction of Tlatelolco, a housing project in the north of the city where some 500,000 people live, has yet to be completed. The area was among the most affected by the quakes. A large apartment tower collapsed leaving some 1,000 dead and several other buildings were torn down because of large scale damage.

Housing officials have blamed the building delay on lack of funds, while tenant groups claim officials have been stealing the money available for the construction.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 19) UPI - Ted Turner's new publishing division Thursday releases its first book, ''Portrait of Great Britain and Northern Ireland,'' a glossy 190-page ''coffee-table'' volume depicting the countries' people and landscapes.

The Turner Publishing Inc. book was inspired by a four-part documentary, ''Portrait of Great Britain,'' which aired on Turner Broadcasting System's ''Portrait of the World'' series earlier this year.

''We selected Portrait as our first publication because we are interested in projects that have tremendous international possibilities and universal, broad-based appeal,'' said Turner Publishing Vice President and Publisher Michael Reagan, who took the pictures that appear in the book.

The collection of 260 color photos features scenes from England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, with chapters on the prehistoric assembly of megaliths known as Stonehenge, the farms of Cotswolds, the city of London, the mines of Easington and the stately homes of Beaulieu.

The text was drawn from the words of the countries' inhabitants interviewed in preparation for the television series.

The next Turner Publishing product will be a book titled ''Kisses,'' celebrating famous kisses of American film stars taken from TBS's collection of MGM film classics.

The book, to be released by Valentine's Day 1991, will be co- published with Carol Publishing Group.

Earlier this year, Turner Publishing reached a licensing agreement with Little Brown Co. to publish ''Season of Giants,'' inspired by the Turner Network Television miniseries focusing on the Italian Renaissance rivalry between Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci.

Turner Publishing, created in November 1989, also supervises The Turner Tomorrow Award, a literary competition offering a prize of $500, 000 to the author who creates the best futuristic novel incorporating solutions to global problems.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) UPI - The dollar rallied against all European currencies Wednesday in New York on Congressional testimony by Alan Greenspan, the Federal Reserve chairman, suggesting firm U.S. short-term interest rates.

Currency analysts interpreted Greenspan's remarks, in which he said the U.S. economy was not yet in recession and stressed the inflation threat, as a broad hint that the Fed was not in a hurry to ease credit.

David Jones, chief economist for the Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. investment bank in New York, saw ''a significant change in tone .. on the dollar.''

He said Greenspan's remarks ''suggested that further dollar declines would be unfavorable in terms of increasing import prices and thus raising inflation fears.'' This called for a policy of firm interest rates.

National Westminster Bank corporate trader Mark Morris added: ''The upshot of all of it is we're not likely to see interest rates drop.''

Late in the New York session, the dollar was quoted at 1.5725 German marks, up 2 pfennigs from 1.5525 marks Tuesday, and at 137.58 yen, down slightly from 137.75 yen the previous day.

Previously the Fed was not considered to be unduly concerned about the dollar slump of recent months. While inflationary where imports are concerned, a weak dollar can boost exports and help the manufacturing sector.

But expectations of a U.S. interest rate decline as rates overseas are moving up threatened to set off a dollar free fall. This could frighten away foreign investment and thereby drive up long-term interest rates.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.31 Swiss francs, ahead from 1.2890; 5.2660

French francs, up from 5.1865; and 1,174.25 Italian lire, up from 1,162.25.

Britain's pound fell off to $1.8845 from $1.9135.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly higher against the main currencies on the U.S. central bank chairman's comments.

''The dollar strengthened because of Greenspan's comments that inflation and not recession was his priority,'' said Allan Chase, an economist with National Westminster Bank.

In London, the British pound was hurt by comments from Bundesbank head Karl Otto Pohl that Britain's double-digit inflation made sterling's entry into the European Exchange Rate Mechanism difficult any time soon.

It dropped three cents against the dollar to $1.8862 vs. $1.9180.

In Frankfurt the dollar rose to 1.5665 German marks from 1.5470 Tuesday, and was also up in Zurich, to 1.3060 Swiss francs from 1.2835.

The dollar fell slightly in Paris and Milan, to 5.1975 French francs vs. 5.2030 and 1,162.25 Italian lire vs. 1,162.55. But in Brussels it strengthened to 32.03 Belgian francs compared with 31.85.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar continued its recent gains against the Japanese yen, closing at 138.05 yen against 137.68 yen Tuesday.

The dollar was buoyed by its rally Tuesday in New York in spite of the poor U.S. economic figures released then.

''Investors bought back the dollar after they saw it didn't sag in New York,'' said currency manager Noburu Yokohashi of Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank.

Gold closed lower in Zurich at $386 an ounce vs. $387.50. It also declined in London, to $386.75 an ounce vs. $388.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $386.75 an ounce, off from $388.25 Tuesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $386 an ounce, also off from $387.60.

Silver was unchanged in Zurich at $4.80 an ounce, but was higher in London at $4.83 an ounce from $4.80.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.79 an ounce, down from $4.82. Comex silver finished trading at $4.769 an ounce, down from $4.79.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 19) UPI - City officials Wednesday began investigating the collapse of two brick building facades that killed three tourists near the city's historic district and injured 10 others.

''We are checking the history of the buildings on Market Street and making safety checks on the ones that went down,'' said Cynthia Bayete, spokeswoman for the Department of Licenses and Inspections.

Improperly secured facades on the fronts of two downtown buildings collapsed Tuesday, crushing Carmen Garcia Burgia, 26, a newlywed from Spain, and her friends, Jose Dans, 60, and his wife Rosa, 55, of Hellertown, Pa.

Burgia's husband, Angel Amado, 30, suffered a broken leg and pelvis. Four police and nine others were hurt by falling debris or while helping pull bodies from the rubble.

Fire Commissioner Roger Ulshafer said the weight of signs and a security gate pulled the buildings down, creating chaos in one of the city's busiest shopping districts a half-dozen blocks from historic Independence Hall.

Bayete said the owner of the building, Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association, was cited in June for failing to get a permit or zoning variance for a sign that extended over the sidewalk.

''We are not saying that that or anything else is the cause. There are several possibilities,'' said Bayete, declining to elaborate.

PMA officials did not return a call for comment.

The city's investigation, involving 10 people from four city offices, focused on records and permits issued to the building's owner for the last 20 years.

''Our people were out there yesterday into the night, and were there today and will be several more times before we conclude the investigation,'' Bayete said.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - Crude oil prices fell slightly Wednesday but had regained most of their earlier losses caused by an unexpected rise in U.S. gasoline inventories, while relative quiet prevailed in the Persian Gulf.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery ended the day on the New York Mercantile Exchange down 23 cents to $33.18 a barrel after having traded as much as $1.16 below Tuesday's close.

After opening at $32.31 a barrel on the Merc, ''WTI slowly crept up all day. It never showed any signs of turning back,'' said Tom Bentz, director of trading at New York's United Energy Inc.

The trader said buying may have been given a spur by a report that Colombia had announced it was going to stop crude exports of nearly 200, 000 barrels a day as a result of weekend pipeline bombing by guerillas.

''I think the market was looking for a reason to firm up,'' Bentz said.

Unleaded gasoline for October delivery, which had dropped 3.61 cents from Tuesday's close earlier, finished the day down 1.71 cents at 89.90 cents a gallon.

October-delivery heating oil finished the day up 2.10 cents to 88.53 cents a gallon after being down 1.63 cents in earlier trading.

Late Tuesday, the oil industry's American Petroleum Institute reported gasoline inventories last week rose 5.9 million barrels from the prior week to 217 million, close to year-ago levels of 218.6 million barrels.

The API also reported that heating oil supplies rose 1.6 million barrels to 131.7 million, more than 10 million barrels above last year, while crude oil stocks dropped 4.5 million barrels.

''It's the disappointing API statistics report, particularly gasoline,'' said Kirk Kinnear, a trader with Salomon Brothers' Greenwich, Conn.-based Phibro division, in explaining the drop in early trading Wednesday.

He said the market had been expecting ''a breakeven or a drawdown in gasoline stocks.''

The unanticipated rise in gasoline inventories was ''a big number, one of the biggest I can remember,'' the trader said.

With the Sept. 3 Labor Day holiday weekend marking the end of the heavy summerdriving season, the API statistics also indicated daily demand for U.S. gasoline dropped 600,000 barrels - 8 percent - to 6.8 million barrels, said Bentz.

The United States accounts for about 25 percent of the world's oil consumption.

''The pullback in the products weighed on crude prices,'' Bentz said. ''Profit taking in the European market is also putting pressure on us,'' he added.

On the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent was unchanged at $36.10 a barrel after being down $1.40 at midday.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai Light, the key Middle East crude shipped mainly to the Far East, was up 5 cents to $29.30 a barrel after being down $1.25 at midday.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, WTI for prompt delivery lost 25 cents to $32.15 a barrel.

Wednesday was one of the few days since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait that the Middle East crisis didn't dominate oil markets.

''There was no news in the market,'' Bentz said.

Iraq passed a law allowing it to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad and declared it was no longer responsible for the safety of foreign property in occupied Kuwait and Iraq.

That move came as the U.N. Security Council prepared to discuss an air embargo against Iraq to tighten enforcement of economic sanctions imposed after the invasion.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - On a 256-155 vote largely along party lines, the House today approved a 283-BILLION-dollar defense authorization bill. The measure... which is under a veto threat because it kills the B-2 Stealth bomber... includes one-BILLION dollars for Operation Desert Shield items such as danger pay for military personnel in Saudi Arabia. The House bill now must be reconciled with a 289-BILLION-dollar version adopted by the Senate.

#90262u2001 09/19/1990 ~United Press International

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) UPI - Stocks closed lower Wednesday in very quiet trading, reflecting early selling tied to a bleak assessment of the economy made by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 3.96 Tuesday, fell 13.86 to close at 2557.43.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 0.97 to 173.91 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index eased 2.00 to 316.60. The price of an average share dropped 17 cents.

Declines outpaced advances, 887-582, among the 1,968 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 147,530,000 shares, up from 141, 130,000 traded Tuesday.

In prepared testimony for his appearance before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, Greenspan said the surge in oil prices resulting from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait threatened to push the economy into recession. But he stopped short of saying one has already begun.

Greenspan also did not indicate whether the Fed was inclined to pump up the sluggish economy by lowering interest rates.

Whether the Fed ''would seek higher, lower or unchanged interest rates will depend on the specifics of the situation, which are shifting day by day,'' Greenspan said. One aspect of the interest-rate question is whether an agreement can be worked out on cutting the size of the federal budget deficit by congressional and administration negotiators, he said.

That remark threw cold water on hopes that an interest-rate cut was in the offing, and stocks and bonds both fell.

''Greenspan didn't say it, but 'recession' was on his lips,'' said James Andrews, first vice president in charge of institutional trading at Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia.

Bonds recovered in the afternoon, however, up about 1/2 point after the midday release of a periodic Fed economic report known as the ''beige book.'' It depicted a sputtering economy.

''The beige book indicated we're slowing in areas,'' said Andrews. ''That was another factor today.'' The report showed the economy was especially weak in the Northeast and mid-Atlantic regions.

But aside from Greenspan's testimony and the Fed report, Andrews said there was ''not much happening in the market today. There's just no pizzazz, no volume.''

Even the market's decline Wednesday had no punch, he said. ''The market wasn't down because of any panic selling. It was just a case where no one wants to step up and buy,'' said Andrews. ''That's been a fact for the last three or fourweeks.''

Andrews noted the drop in oil prices and said that it should have given stocks some kind of boost but that traders' attention was squarely focused on the Fed chairman's remarks.

A major factor in the Dow's decline was a selloff in Merck stock, trading in which opened long after the start of NYSE trading Wednesday morning as a result of order imbalances.

The Dow had recovered to unchanged levels after early weakness but fell suddenly again when Merck opened with a loss of $4 a share - said to be because of a stock rating downgrade by Vector Securities amid concerns about the effectiveness of Merck's prostate drug, Proscar.

On the trading floor, General Electric was the most active issue, tumbling 2 1/2 to 56 1/8.

Philip Morris followed, up 7/8 to 46. Merck was third, sinking 3 1/8 to 76 7/8.

Mortgage investor Fannie Mae was also active, down 1 to 26 1/2, apparently reflecting fading optimism about interest rates.

Prime Motor Inns was heavily traded as well, up 1/8 to 5/8 after plunging Tuesday when the company filed for Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy protection.

Among other blue chips, Eastman Kodak rose 1/2 to 42 1/8, IBM gained 1 1/8 to 108 3/8, Primerica fell 1 7/8 to 21 1/4, Procter & Gamble lost 1 1/8 to 75 1/4 AT&T eased 3/8 to 30 3/4, Coca-Cola dropped 1 1/2 to 39 3/4 and McDonald's lost 5/8 to 26 1/4.

Elsewhere, Pitney Bowes tumbled 4 1/8 to 30 1/8 after saying it expects 1990 earnings to be below year-ago levels. The company also said it would no longer remanufacture used copier equipment and will take a third-quarter charge of $86 million as a result.

American General plunged 6 3/8 to 33 5/8. Its board has authorized management to add a restructuring plan as an alternative to the sale of the company, which American General is also pursuing.

And Corroon & Black sank 3 1/2 to 32 after rejecting a $40-a-share takeover offer from Aon Corp. in favor of a stock-swap merger already agreed to with Britain's Willis Faber PLC.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 176,384,940 shares, vs. 169,438,210 traded in the previous session.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index fell 0.72 to close at 318.97. Declines led advances 308-226 among the 788 issues traded. The price of an average share lost 3 cents. Composite volume totaled 12,002,000 shares, vs. 12,647,200 traded Tuesday.

Energy Service led the Amex issues, up 1/8 to 3 7/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index closed down 0.53 to 371.68.

RENO, NE (SEPT. 19) UPI - A federal bankruptcy trustee is the new ''madam'' at the Mustang Ranch and says she will run the legal brothel ''like any other business.''

But first Jeri Coppa needs a staff since the bordello's ''working girls'' left the Mustang Ranch before federal officials closed it Tuesday because the owner tax criminal Joe Conforte, missed a payment on his tax bill.

''I will run it like any other business, a bar or a store,'' Coppa said. ''The point is, an operating business sells better than one that is shut down.''

Coppa acted as trustee for a bankrupt brothel near Fallon several years ago. It never sold and creditors eventually foreclosed.

Conforte, apparently acting on advance notice that bankruptcy court intended to liquidate his bawdy business, had closed the bordello and sent his employees away before receiving formal notice.

Coppa said the prostitutes were out on the street with no where to go and urged them to return to the 105-room Mustang Ranch, which is located about 12 miles east of Reno in Storey County where brothels are legal under county law.

Conforte's much publicized attempts to sell the brothel through public stock offerings for about $23 million failed twice in recent years.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge James Thompson converted the 5-year-old Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding into Chapter 7 at the request of the IRS, clearing the way for liquidation.

Coppa said Conforte had failed to meet a $75,000 monthly payment schedule to satisfy a $12 million or $13 million debt in back taxes.

But Peter Perry, Conforte's Reno lawyer, said the brothel owner owed the government about $5 million. He said the government was presented with an offer by a prospective buyer Tuesday but turned it down. He did not identify the would-be buyer.

''The IRS was given a proposed $5 million purchase,'' Perry said. ''The sale would have satisfied the debt. The government would have agreed to the price but wanted to harass the Confortes. Every time they get to a sale, the IRS turns it down.''

Perry also accused the IRS of quashing the public stock offerings in the Mustang Ranch and of seeking revenge against Conforte and his wife, Sally. He declined to elaborate.

Conforte was sentenced to four consecutive five-year prison terms in 1977 on four counts of federal tax evasion. The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the four-count conviction and one five-year sentence in 1980 but reversed the other three prison terms and remanded the case back to the lower court for resentencing.

Shortly after the Supreme Court denied Conforte's petition for review on Dec. 1, 1980, Conforte fled to Brazil.

He returned to Nevada 1983 to testify against then U.S. District Judge Harry Claiborne with the agreement that his prison sentences and tax liabilities be reduced. Conforte subsequently served less than two years in prison and his estimated $20 million tax bill was sizeably reduced.

Claiborne, who once acted as Conforte's attorney, was impeached and sentenced to prison for tax evasion. However, Conforte's testimony did not help obtain the conviction.

Conforte testified at Claiborne's first trial in Reno, but his testimony about an alleged bribe weakened the government's case to such an extent that a second tax trial was required in order to eliminate Conforte's bribery allegations from the case.

The Mustang Ranch is located about 12 miles east of Reno in Storey County, where prostitution houses are legal.

If all goes well at the employee meeting, Knudson said, the 105-room brothel could be back in business by Wednesday night, but state regulations that keep the operation legal may stand in the way.

''We've hit a couple of snags (because) the girls left,'' he said. ''When the girl leaves the gates, her (medical) certificate becomes invalid. They need to come back and get a doctor's certificate and an HIV clearance before they can come back.

''Storey County is going to want certain documents before they let these girls go to work, which is OK by me,'' Knudson said.

Knudson said federal bankruptcy management of ''the oldest profession'' is no different from any other business takeover. Coppa had taken charge of another financially-troubled Storey County bordello in the community of Salt Wells in 1982.

''This is just another business in Nevada,'' he said, ''just like a 7-11 store. The only thing that might be different around here is a face or two that they don't know, watching where the money goes.''

Knudson said he did not know how long the government would hold the reins at the ranch, but, he said, ''We're going to be here a long time.''

PRINCETON, N.J. (SEPT. 19) UPI - More than a century of tradition is to fall Sunday at Princeton University when the all-male Ivy Club allows women to apply for membership, the club's undergraduate president said Wednesday.

''We will be 'bickering' women starting this Sunday, in compliance with the court decision,'' said Blair Haarlow, referring to an order Tuesday by U.S. District Judge John Lifland.

Bickering is the term for membership drives similar to the student ''rush'' employed by fraternities and sororities.

The ruling to admit women came after Lifland was asked to resurrect the Ivy Club's 1986 suit against New Jersey that claims that Ivy, as a social club, has the right to pick its members.

Lifland has agreed to hear the suit but ruled the club has such a slim chance of winning that it must comply with previous orders to admit women to the eating club.

About 65 percent of the students eat at Princeton's 13 eating clubs, which are the campus equivalent of fraternities and sororities. The clubs date to the late 1800s.

The judge's ruling was the latest in a sex-discrimination suit filed 11 years ago by Sally Frank, a Princeton law student who now teaches at Drake University.

Frank said the men-only policies of the Ivy, Tiger and Cottage eating clubs violated New Jersey law barring sex discrimination in public accomodations.

The Cottage Club voted to admit women in 1986 and the New Jersey Supreme Court ordered the Tiger and Ivy clubs to do the same. Members of both clubs have also given preliminary approval to allowing women.

The Tiger Club was ordered to admit women at its next membership drive in the spring.

Haarlow wasn't sure what the effect of the judge's order would be on Sunday's membership drive. ''At this point we don't know (if any women will apply),'' he said.

He said the club voted to admit women last spring, though a second vote is needed to make changes in club policy permanent.

Asked if admitting women would improve the Tiger Club, Haarlow said, ''I hope so. I think it will be a change and I think it will be better.

''There's a certain sense of anticipation - there's no dread,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - Effective family planning methods could reduce the number of infant and child deaths in the Third World by 20 percent - about 3 million people - the Population Crisis Committee said Wednesday.

The study said that such infant deaths could be reduced by at least 1.8 million just by increasing the length of time between births to a minimum of two years - an effort that would cost only $20 per couple for clinic services, contraceptives and building the infrastructure of a comprehensive family planning program, the committee said.

''Through family planning, the cycle of weak mothers giving birth to weak children can be broken,'' said Sharon Camp, senior vice president of the committee. ''Family planning should be the first step toward improving child survival. It gives both mothers and children a chance.''

The Population Crisis Committee's analysis of the connection between family planning and infant mortality is contained in a new report, ''Family Planning and Child Survival,'' prepared for the United Nation's Children's Summit, which will begin at the United Nations at the end of September.

Some 60 heads of state, including President Bush, are expected to address the conference, which hopes to draw attention to a host of ills affecting children around the globe.

The anlaysis by the Population Crisis Committee brings together material from a growing body of literature that suggests a dramatic relationship between childbearing patterns and the health of both mothers and children.

According to the analysis, two factors are consistently related to deaths among both mothers and children:

-Births less than two years apart.

-Childbirth before age 20.

Short birth intervals, according to the PCC analysis, ''pose the greatest risk to the health of children.''

The PCC analysis showed that a child born less than two years after a previous child has a 60 percent to 70 percent higher risk of dying in infancy - before age 1 - and even after age 1 there is still a 50 percent higher risk of dying by age five.

Children born to mothers under age 20 are a third more likely to die before age 5 than children born to mothers aged 25 to 34. It said, for example, a first child born to an adolescent mother has an 80 percent higher chance of dying before age 5 than a second or third child of a mother 25 to 34.

Camp said the improved patterns of childbearing could not be brought about without the extensive use of effective, modern contraception.

She also said that studies show that about half of all women in developing countries do not want any more children, suggesting enormous potential to avoid child deaths by preventing unwanted births.

''If developing country birthrates were cut in half, to 15 births per 1,000 population per year, the average family would have only two children - about replacement level.

WESTPORT, CT (SEPT. 19) UPI - Nearly 9 tons of milk packaged in cartons that do not require refrigeration is being shipped to Jordan with plans to get it to women and children first, officials said Wednesday.

The shipment was arranged by Save the Children, a Westport-based relief organization that has been sending medical and food supplies into Jordan since Aug. 20.

More than 28,000 units weighing nearly 9 tons were scheduled to be flown to Jordan Wednesday night from Kennedy International Airport in New York, officials said.

''We will make every effort to distribute this milk to children and women first,'' said Barnett Baron, vice president of international programs for Save the Children.

The planeload of milk was the first of several shipments of food, medicine and other supplies that Save the Children planned to send to Jordan from the United States, Baron said.

The milk was donated by the Aseptic Packaging Council, which represents Tetra Pak Inc. of Shelton and Combibloc Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, which manufacture the drink boxes.

The fresh milk is packaged and sterilized at high temperatures in the soft-sided boxes, which maintain freshness for up to a year without refrigeration or preservatives, officials said.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) UPI - As the ink dried on the settlement saving the New York Post, union officials and management at the Daily News Wednesday assessed the status of their own contract talks, aimed at keeping New York's largest tabloid alive.

Representatives of the 10 unions at the News have been unsuccessful all year in landing a contract with management, which has taken a markedly different negotiating position than Post owner Peter Kalikow.

A federal mediator postponed face-to-face talks between News management and the Newspaper Guild scheduled for Wednesday. Talks with the machinists union were set for Thursday, a News spokeswoman said.

Reporters, editorial workers, photographers and advertising employees agreed Monday to a reduced work week, pay cuts, and 43 less jobs so the nation's oldest daily newspaper could remain in business.

Kalikow practically guaranteed the ''yes'' vote when he offered buyouts to any employee who chose to resign by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Union officials said similar concessions could be worked out with the News if management expressed a genuine interest in negotiating instead of trying to portray the unions as the cause of the paper's financial problems.

News spokesman John Sloan, meanwhile, said, ''The implications for the News are probably negligable because the aims and circumstances at the News are vastly different from the Post's.''

Sloan urged the union to refrain from making ''contentious and accusatory commentary which exacerbates our differences in negotiations.''

The agreement credited with saving the Post came after Kalikow allowed the union to scrutinize his financial records to prove his claims that the paper needed more than $27 million in savings to continue publishing.

The News has steadfastly refused to let union accountants review the books, but instead has blamed the paper's losses on union overmanning and featherbedding for keeping the paper in red ink.

Theodore Kheel, an unpaid advisor to the unions, said the News's strategy ''has been decimated by the Post settlement, but that doesn't mean they'll abandon it.''

The Post owner gave unionized employees 20 percent ownership of the company, a move a Newspaper Guild spokesman said would be accepted if made by the Chicago-based Tribune Co., which owns the News.

''We'll give them a lot of the concessions we gave the Post if they give us 20 percent of the Tribune stock,'' said the union spokesman, Tom Pennacchio.

''Kalikow said, 'I need help,' and the unions accomodated him,'' Pennacchio said. ''We've said openly we would be receptive if the News asked for relief.''

In an interview to be broadcast Wednesday on cable's CNBC's ''McLaughlin,'' Kheel said, ''The only solution that has some possibility of saving the News is for the Tribune Company to put it up for sale. ... I do know there is at least one bidder.''

Said Kheel, ''The unions have invited the News to adopt an approach similar to that taken by Kalikow ... but that would mean abandoning its basic strategy of trying to make the unions irrelevant.''

Union officials have said management wants them to strike so they can replace them with non-union employees.

''The difference between the Post and News is simple,'' Pennacchio said. ''The News wants to get rid of the unions. The Post never did.''

SOFIA, Bulgaria (SEPT. 19) UPI - Prime Minister Andrei Loukanov named a new all-Socialist government early Thursday and promised to begin work within two weeks on a program to stabilize the economy.

If approved by the Parliament, the new Cabinet will represent a continuation of one-party rule by the Bulgarian Socialist Party, the successor to the Communist Party that has dominated Bulgaria since 1944.

The opposition led by the Union of Democratic Forces rejected repeated invitations to join the Socialists in a coalition government.

Loukanov, reading his list of Cabinet nominees at a late-night session of the National Assembly, promised to present within two weeks a program of radical reforms designed to combat inflation and stabilize the economy.

Although all the nominees are Socialists, the proposed Cabinet is expected to become Bulgaria's first democratically elected government in 44 years.

The Socialists won historic multi-party balloting in June and control 53 percent of the seats in the parliament, more than enough to ensure approval of Loukanov's nominees.

Several ministers in the current acting Cabinet were renominated to their old posts, although there were also a number of new faces. Loukanov also announced the creation of several new ministries and the restructuring of others.

After the list of nominees was presented, UDF spokesman Stoyan Ganev told the parliament his group would work the new government in a ''new spirit of constructive opposition.''

The UDF had set a number of conditions for participating in a Socialist-led coalition government, including the acceptance by the Socialists of the UDF's program of radical economic reform.

The opposition also insisted that key economic positions be awarded to officials who were untainted by association with the hard-line government of Todor Zhivkov. Zhivkov was overthrown Nov. 10 by moderate communists who relinquished their guaranteed monopoly on political power and organized free elections.

BEIRUT (SEPT. 19) UPI - Rival Christian forces battled with heavy arms Wednesday along frontlines in east Beirut after a bomb blast struck the American University of Beirut in the Moslem sector of the divided city.

Police said followers of Gen. Michel Aoun and militia chief Samir Geagea engaged in two hours of violence, trading fire with mortars, rockets and automatic weapons.

Blasts after nightfall forced some residents of the Christian part of the capital to seek refuge in underground shelters, radio reports said. There were no reports of casualties.

Aoun 15,000-man force in east Beirut has engaged Geagea's 10,000 men in street fighting since last January.

The general has refused to relinquish his power to Elias Hrawi, who was elected president following a peace accord worked out by the Lebanese parliament in Taif, Saudi Arabia, last October.

Moslem security sources reported that 10 of Aoun's officers and 60 other military personnel fled the general's enclave to join the 20,000- strong force of army Gen. Emile Lahoud.

Witnesses have reported mounting reinforcements by Lahoud's army around Aoun's region in a tactic to increase pressures on the renegade general.

But pro-Syrian officials warn that they might oust Aoun by force.

Early Wednesday, a small bomb blew up in the AUB campus in Moslem west Beirut, causing some material damage, a university official said.

The official, who requested anonymity, said the home-made bomb went off near the residence of AUB Deputy President Ibrahim Salti ''who was out of campus when the explosion occurred.''

He said AUB security guards found another small bomb before it went off.

The AUB's Board of Trustees has recently decided to close down the university's Off Campus Program in east Beirut, triggering uproar by Christian leaders and figures.

The program was introduced in the early days of the civil war that erupted in 1975 and divided the nation along sectarian lines.

AUB has been a frequent target of terrorism in recent years.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - The State Department says only one more flight will leave Kuwait to evacuate American women and children. Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler says U-S officials believe that most Americans who can get out of Iraq and Kuwait have already left... and the last evacuation flight will leave on Saturday. So far, about 17-hundred Americans... mainly women and children... have been airlifted out of Kuwait and Iraq since the August 2nd Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Defense Secretary Cheney today approved imminent danger pay for about 150-thousand U-S military personnel in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf waters. The move would provide each service man and woman an extra 110 dollars a month, regardless of rank. Cheney says the supplemental benefit to the troops on the front lines is an appropriate step given the risks they face and the harsh conditions in which they serve.

The cost of delays launching the space shuttle Columbia have topped three-Million dollars. But NASA officials say the cost of tests to track down the source of elusive hydrogen leaks aboard Columbia, lost fuel, overtime and travel expenses is minuscule compared to the overall price of a shuttle launch... more than 300-Million dollars. Officials also cite the need to make absolutely sure that NO dangerous leaks are present at launch that could endanger a shuttle or its crew.

Sources at Cape Canaveral say the launch of a powerful Air Force Titan-4 rocket carrying a classified military satellite has been delayed at least 24 hours, apparently because of a problem with the rocket or its payload. The sources say the unmanned rocket... which was set to lift off around midnight... now won't be launched until late tomorrow. Unlike other military rockets, all Titan-4 launches are conducted in secrecy with NO advance warning of launch dates or times.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - The Federal Reserve issued a new ''beige book'' today, giving its analysis of how the economy is performing across the nation. The Fed reports that the Northeast and mid-Atlantic regions are the weakest right now- from an economic standpoint. But there are pockets of strength. The Mideast, the Midwest and the West Coast all report slow growth.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan acknowledged the slow growth today in testimony on Capitol Hill but warned that the economy is headed for a recession. He said high oil prices brought on by the Persian Gulf crisis have increased inflation and inhibited business expansion. Greenspan is already referring to the Gulf crisis as the ''1990 oil shock.''

The Senate Judiciary Committee concluded five days of testimony today in confirmation hearings on Supreme Court nominee David Souter. The panel heard this week from Souter and more than 40 other witnesses- both pro and con. Feminists and abortion-rights groups were unable to foment opposition to the nominee- although a group of feminist leaders clashed with Republican senators on the panel last night and today demanded an apology for being treated like- quote- ''bad girls.''

A federal Appeals Court in New York has upheld a U-S ban on funding for foreign agencies that counsel women on abortions. The ban applies to agencies even if they pay for abortion counseling with other funding. The Planned Parenthood Federation of America says the ruling will be felt in developing countries, where illegal abortions are one of the leading causes of death for women.

LAGOS (SEPT. 19) UPI - More than 200 Nigerian children died last month after taking contaminated doses of an analgesic used to treat fever and health officials banned the drug, it was reported Wednesday.

The children, mostly between 6 months and 6 years, were given paracetamol syrup at three government-run hospitals but a preliminary investigation blamed a falsely labeled poisonous chemical that caused kidney failure, according to the British Broadcasting Corp.

Paracetamol syrup is a widely prescribed analgesic for children under 10.

The Nigerian Federal Ministry of Health said it had no choice but to ban sales of paracetamol syrup until the source and scope of the problem are identified.

About 100 manufacturers of the syrup in Nigeria protested the ban but it was not known how many brands were contaminated.

Nigeria is among several African countries troubled in the past by contaminated drugs.

(SEPT. 19) UPI - Iraq today said it is NO longer responsible for what happens to foreign property in Iraq and occupied Kuwait. That's part of a law passed by Iraq's ruling Revolution Command Council allowing Baghdad to seize assets of governments and companies that have frozen Iraqi assets abroad. The move is likely to further aggravate tensions with the West. It came as the U-N Security Council prepared to discuss an air embargo against Iraq.

The International Monetary Fund says rising oil prices from the Persian Gulf crisis will weaken the world's economic output this year and push inflation higher. But the I-M-F says in its world economic outlook that the oil shock is NOT expected to be as severe as that of the 1970's. It projects that the world's economy will slow to about two percent growth this year... down from three percent in 1989.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 19) UPI - The increased price of oil and its worldwide inflationary impact will top the agenda when economic officials of the seven largest industralized nations meet Saturday in Washington, analysts said Wednesday.

But the so-called Group of Seven was expected merely to underscore the organization's stance of firm monetary policy to counter inflationary pressures, rather than taking new collective actions to offset the effects of more costly oil.

An exception to this could be a G-7 endorsement of an initiative by the major economic powers to cushion the devastating effects of higher oil prices on countries in the developing world, some analysts said.

But no significant policy realignment either on currency exchange rates or on the world interest-rate structure was anticipated.

''I tend to take the view that right now, given the (Persian Gulf) crisis, all the major economies are pretty clear as to what they can do and can't do,'' said Richard O'Brien, chief economist of the London- based American Express Bank.

He said G-7 officials meeting in the U.S. capital before the annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank may try to reassure nervous world financial markets that are punchy from the Iraq oil shock.

''It will be a balancing act,'' O'Brien said when asked what he thought the G-7 stance would be. ''The world isn't going to end, but we're going to have to do something.''

The G-7 nations are the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy, Great Britain and Canada.

David Jones, chief economist of Aubrey C. Lanston & Co. in New York, said G-7 officials will lay the strongest stress on the inflationary threat.

Officials ''do not want to repeat the mistakes of the 1970s, when almost all central banks eased prematurely in response to the (oil) shock out of fear of recession and ... created a raging inflation psychology,'' he said.

Earlier this week, David Mulford, Treasury under secretary for international affairs, confirmed oil would dominate the weekend discussions.

G-7 finance ministers and central bank governors will ''make an assessment of (the impact of) oil price increases on the global economy, '' he told reporters at a briefing. ''Some countries are more heavily impacted than others.''

Although the Mideast crisis has sent oil prices soaring, Mulford said the group would try to discern the longer-range implications. ''I don't think we should hang on each day's movement in (the oil) price,'' he said.

''We are very concerned that there should be a continuation of growth in the world economy,'' Mulford added. G-7 officials, therefore, will also talk about ''what higher interest rates mean for the market.''

Foreign-exchange dealers - perhaps most sensitive to G-7 gatherings, which can move currency prices - did not expect anything new.

''I don't think there's any anticipation at all'' ahead of the meeting, said Robert White, currency manager with Los Angeles-based First Interstate Bank.

He said U.S. officials see the currently weak dollar as beneficial to exports and thus a help to the faltering economy. G-7 partners whose currencies have appreciated benefit because oil is priced in dollars.

''The Japanese are a lot happier buying oil at this level (of about 137.5 yen to the dollar) than when (the dollar) was at 150,'' White said.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 19) UPI - A federal judge Wednesday dismissed outright a Chevron Corp. lawsuit against Pennzoil Co. over cash-rich Pennzoil's $2.1 billion purchase of an 8.8 percent stake in Chevron.

Chevron, the world's sixth-largest oil company, filed suit against Houston-based Pennzoil last Dec. 7, charging it violated antitrust laws and lied to federal regulators when declaring its massive purchase of Chevron stock was strictly a ''long-term investment.''

Chevron maintained that Pennzoil never intended its acquisition to be passive but rather had secret designs to gain a seat on Chevron's board of directors and possibly force Chevron to divest some assets.

U.S. District Judge Sam Conti granted Pennzoil's motion to dismiss the last remnant of the Chevron lawsuit.

In his ruling, Conti found that ''Chevron has raised no genuine issue of material fact'' to show that Pennzoil violated Williamson Act disclosure requirements or lied about its intentions toward Chevron.

Stephen Bomse, Pennzoil's attorney, said: ''We are very, very pleased and gratified the judge has concurred in our position that the Chevron suit did not have any merit.''

''It means now the lawsuit is at an end,'' Bomse said.

Chevron attorney William Edlund said he had not yet read the judge's entire 23-page opinion and could not comment on it. He indicated Chevron would keep open its options to appeal the ruling.

Pennzoil purchased the Chevron shares with proceeds from an unprecedented $3 billion settlement wrested from Texaco Inc. as a result of a 1988 lawsuit over the takeover of Getty Oil.

After lawyer fees, Pennzoil netted $2.6 billion to invest from the Texaco settlement. The company chose Chevron, fourth largest among U.S. oil companies in hope of getting a tax break based on its reinvestment in a similar industry.

Pennzoil indicated in July it desired to invest the balance of its $480 million Texaco settlement in Chevron, meaning Pennzoil would hold up to a 9.9 percent stake, Bomse said. He said whether Pennzoil will proceed with this would depend on the outcome of a review by federal regulators and on market conditions.

A purchase of more than 10 percent of Chevron's outstanding stock would trigger its ''poison-pill'' shareholder protection plan, designed to make a hostile takeover prohibitively expensive for a company seeking to engineer an acquisition.

Pennzoil negotiated the Texaco settlement based on claims that Texaco illegally bought Getty Oil out from under Pennzoil.

Pennzoil sat on the settlement nest egg for more than 18 months before quietly accumulating Chevron stock beginning in October 1989.

Ultimately Pennzoil spent $2.1 billion of the settlement on Chevron stock.

Conti cited sworn declarations by Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke, who said Pennzoil had two priorities for investing the Texaco proceeds: achieving maximum long-term value for Pennzoil's shareholders and, if possible, a tax deferral on the settlement proceeds.

The Liedtke statement also disclosed that Pennzoil had considered buying smaller oil companies outright but decided they were either fully priced or unavailable.

He also said Pennzoil considered buying British Petroleum PLC shares but was outbid by BP itself.

Pennzoil, the 18th-largest oil company in the United States, purchased shares in Burlington Resources Inc. but sold the stock at a considerable profit after a lawsuit similar to Chevron's was filed.

Liedtke said Pennzoil rejected an effort to take on debt required to obtain an 18 percent interest in Chevron and settled on a position of less than 10 percent as a long-term investment.

He said he had hoped Pennzoil could work with Chevron ''on a friendly basis'' to bolster Pennzoil's tax position.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - States will receive $246 million in the first round of payments for their share of money raised through timber sales and other uses of the national forests, the Forest Service said Wednesday.

The money is earmarked for local schools and roads. The largest first-round payments will go to Oregon, $111 million, California, $43 million, Washington state, $26 million, and Idaho, $10 million.

Total payments are estimated to reach $328.1 million. The first round amounts to 75 percent of the expected payment to each state. The final payment is made in December, after the Forest Service has a chance to precisely count the revenues.

By federal law, 25 percent of Forest Service revenue from timber sales, grazing fees, recreation, minerals and land use is given to the states where national forests are located.

There are 156 national forests and grasslands covering 191 million acres.

President Chaim Herzog delivered an upbeat message, welcoming the record number of immigrants who arrived in Israel this year.

But Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir carried a more somber, inspirational message. He said the gulf crisis had shown the world that ''the central problem of the Middle East is not the Israel-Arab dispute,'' but ''the persistent instability of the Arab world.''

Shamir called Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ''a giant-size evil,'' adding that Israel was prepared to defend itself if the crisis led to war.

A key House Democrat indicates that prospects are dim for an auto fuel economy bill this year.

Democratic Representative John Dingell of Michigan says House Speaker Thomas

Foley does NOT appear inclined to put a fuel economy bill on the legislative fast track. And that decision probably would doom the measure for this year.

Dingell, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, says Foley indicated to him that he won't schedule the bill for accelerated floor consideration by the House.

That means the fuel economy bill would stay in Dingell's committee, where he could bottle it up for the remaining few weeks of the congressional session.

Dingell questions the technological feasibility of meeting the higher fuel efficiency requirements that would be set under the bill.

His remarks come as the Senate moves toward passage this fall of fuel economy legislation that would raise the average federal gasoline mileage standard for new cars from 27-point-five miles a gallon to 40 miles a gallon by 2001.

LONDON, Ohio (SEPT. 19) UPI - Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said Wednesday that American farmers will be helped rather than hindered if the Soviet Union succeeds in converting to a capitalist economy.

The agriculture secretary, at a press conference, also hinted it might not be politically feasible for the United States to continue to insist that export subsidies on farm products be eliminated immediately.

Yeutter told reporters there is too much regulatory interference in the farm bill now in a House-Senate conference, but that he does not hold out too much hope of eliminating ''micro-management'' of agriculture in the fat, 1,600-page bill.

And Yeutter said agriculture may have to accept its fair share of spending reductions in the current budget negotiations in order to reduce the budget deficit from $170 billion to $64 billion over five years.

The secretary said if the Soviets ''get their economy on track, it's my personal opinion that they will very likely import more from us rather than less.''

He said Korea, which had to be propped up economically in the 1950s and '60s, now imports $2 billion worth of agricultural products a year from the United States.

Yeutter was asked about a report that U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said the U.S. is prepared to back away from its insistence on 100 percent elimination of export subsidies.

He said he could not confirm the report but ''it may not be politically feasible'' to ask the European community to reduce its export subsidies from $11 billion to zero in a 10-year General Agreement on Agriculture Tariffs now being negotiated in Europe.

Yeutter said industrial export subsidies have been eliminated and ''in my judgment, we ought to get rid of agricultural export subsidies as well. They're just an onerous, distorted trade barrier of the worst kind.''

On other matters, the secretary said:

- President Bush will veto a textile trade bill recently passed by Congress despite intense lobbying by the sugar, peanut and cotton industries seeking to retain protections;

- the president's food embargo of Iraq is working, and has ''sky- high'' support from most farmers as long as other Americans are willing to sacrifice.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 19) UPI - The State Department said Wednesday that most Americans who can get out of Iraq and Kuwait have already left and the last evacuation flight of American women and children from Kuwait will leave Saturday.

A U.S.-chartered Iraqi Airways plane landed at 6 p.m. EDT Wednesday at London's Gatwick Airport with 328 American women and children, 35 Britons and an unknown number of other foreign nationals.

The Americans were to spend the night in London before flying Thursday to Raleigh, N.C.

One more flight is tentatively scheduled to leave Kuwait Saturday, said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler. With that flight, she said, the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait believes that every American who is able to leave and wants to leave will have been taken care of and there will be no more evacuation charter flights.

The State Department is putting out hourly messages over the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp. urging American women to immediately contact the embassy if they wish to leave on the final evacuation charter flight.

So far, about 1,700 Americans, mainly women and children, have been airlifted out of Kuwait and Iraq since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi forces.

Tutwiler said that some women who are American citizens have decided to remain in Kuwait with their husbands.

According to State Department estimates, some 1,200 Americans remain in Kuwait and another 120 in Iraq, including diplomatic personnel in the embassies in Kuwait and Baghdad.

''Iraq's barbaric hostage-holding continues. Men from numerous countries are not being allowed to depart and obviously are being held there against their will. We and the rest of the international community will continue to press for the right of departure of all foreigners and for the release of those who the Iraqis detain,'' Tutwiler said.

It is estimated that 82 Americans are being held by Iraqi authorities, reportedly as human shields around military and industrial installations that might be targets of U.S. forces in case of an outbreak of hostility.

U.S. Embassy officials have had no access to any of the detainees for more than a week.

Tutwiler said the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait remains in business, although conditions are getting more difficult.

''We'll continue to be there as long as we can,'' she said.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (SEPT. 19) UPI - President Carlos Menem risked a temporary setback in popularity at home by sending ships to join the naval blockade against Iraq but he expects international dividends as compensation.

Menem narrowly avoided disaster Wednesday when the majority opposition in Congress nearly voted on a bill to render illegal his order to send a force to the Persian Gulf.

A group of official Peronist Party deputies, exchanging heated epithets with rival deputies, blocked the vote by walking out of the legislative chamber, leaving it without a quorum.

Menem used his executive powers Tuesday to order two navy destroyers and two air force planes to join a military blockade of Iraq.

Argentina's decision to become the first Latin American nation to send forces to the Persian Gulf is a sharp departure from its history of non-alignment.

Argentina was neutral during World War I, prospering by selling grain and beef to the warring armies. It stayed neutral most of World War II, declaring war on the Axis, under heavy international pressure, only days before the fall of Berlin.

On Wednesday, many Argentines criticized the government's change in policy but a few defended the decision to send forces to the Gulf.

''The United States never helped us,'' said Eugenio Diaz, 28, a small shop owner.

''One of the arguments the government gives for sending ships is that the industrialized countries are going to give us more money now in loans,'' Diaz continued. ''That's crap. Other countries, like Mexico, have benefitted from staying neutral.''

But another shopowner, Enrique Molinski, 66, said ''Saddam Hussein is equal to Hitler. He wants to conquer everything.''

Molinski, a Jewish emigre from Poland just before World War II, said both ''Argentina and the Americans have to destroy the Iraqi forces because if not, the day they leave Saddam will attack Israel.''

Public opinion polls show that 60 percent to 70 percent of Argentines oppose Menem's decision to join the multinational blockade against Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Even Menem's estranged wife, Zulema Yoma, said Wednesday she was ''very sad and ashamed'' over her husband's decision.

''One should consult the people, through Parliament, to see if it is necessary or not to send troops to a conflict that should be resolved by the Arab world '' Yoma told the independent news agency Noticias Argentinas. Both Menem and Yoma are of Syrian descent.

Though unable to vote Wednesday, congressional sentiment was hostile. Menem sidestepped Congress with semantics, saying the Argentine warships were a ''peace force'' not intended to engage in combat.

Since the mission is non-belligerent, Menem argued, it did not need approval by Congress as required by the constitution in cases of war.

But Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo told a news conference of foreign correspondents that the Argentine warships ''would obviously defend themselves'' if they were attacked.

He said the task force was to help put teeth into U.N. sanctions and was authorized to ''use proportionate force as stipulated by the United Nations,'' meaning minimum force.

Whether Argentina fights or not, Menem is after bigger stakes than showing the light blue-and-white flag in the Middle East.

His real goal is to build a better relationship with the United States and other Western countries that in the past have been suspicious of his Peronist Party, founded in the 1940s with a distinct nationalist and anti-U.S. tint.

PALMDALE, CA. (SEPT. 19) UPI - Lockeed Corp., which is several weeks behind Northrop Corp. in the competition for the Advanced Tactical Fighter jet, made a small advance Wednesday when its YF-22 prototype completed a low- speed taxi test.

The Lockheed prototype will probably make its high-speed taxi test in a few weeks, then make its first flight a few weeks after that, said Lawrence Harris an aerospace analyst with brokerage Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards of Los Angeles.

Teams led by Northrop and Lockheed are building two prototypes in an Air Force competition to build the Advanced Tactical Fighter, a new generation jet that could produce as much as $100 billion in revenues. The deadline for submission of technical proposals is in December.

But Harris said that the Air Force is likely to move the deadline back, since Congress may not authorize full-scale development funding for the program in fiscal 1991.

Northrop said Tuesday that its prototype YF-23 ''supercruised'' for the first time in a test flight by flying at supersonic speed without using engine afterburners.

Northrop, noting that no current Air Force fighter is able to supercruise, did not disclose the speed of the aircraft during the flight.

Northrop, which is teamed with McDonnell Douglas Corp. of St. Louis on the program, flew the YF-23 for the first time on Aug. 27. Tuesday's flight was the fifth for the prototype.

Lockheed teamed with Boeing and General Dynamics Corp., also based in St. Louis, in the competition.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (SEPT. 19) UPI - The Soviet Union is considering proposals to open an arctic shipping route that would significantly reduce the distance freighters must travel carrying goods between Europe and the Far East, officials told this week's Northern Regions Conference.

The icy sea route stretching beyond the northernmost reach of the Russian land mass is used by Soviet icebreakers traveling between Soviet Europe and the Soviet Far East, but shippers from Europe to America want the route opened for international cargo traffic.

''I believe that if the Northeast Passage can be opened, it will be the biggest thing to happen to the northern region in this century,'' said Ivar Ytreland, governor of Norway's Trondelag province.

''The Northeast Passage could become a new fantastic maritime route between Europe and the Far East,'' Ytreland said. ''For example, a sea- route between western Europe to Japan and Korea would be 10,000 kilometers (6,000 miles) shorter than the sea route via the Suez Canal.''

''It's a big proposal but we're determined to see it through,'' Paul Fuhs, mayor of Unalaska, site of a major Alaska fishing port at Dutch Harbor, said of proposals to open the arctic sea route.

Port directors in Alaska and Tacoma, Wash., want the arctic sea route opened, and Fuhs said talks were planned with Soviet shipping officials in Anchorage for the 11-nation Northern Regions Conference.

''Our government is considering the issue of opening the Northeast Passage,'' said Artur Chilingarov, who overesees Soviet arctic policy as deputy chairman of the Soviet state committee for hydrometeorology. ''Results will be conveyed to all interested parties very soon.''

But Chilingarov hinted that, despite a warming in U.S.-Soviet relations, there may be military obstacles to opening the waterway across the Soviet north.

Freighters carrying cargo between Europe and North Pacific ports in the Far East and the West Coast of North America travel south around continents and through the Suez and Panama Canals.

The proposed arctic shipping channel is variously called the Northeast Passage the Northern Sea Route or the Arctic Great Circle Trade Route.

Under most scenarios, cargo from Asia and North America would leave Tokyo, Seoul and Tacoma on ships bound for Dutch Harbor, Alaska, to pick up fish and supplies, head through the Bering Strait and cross the arctic to northern European ports. On the return trip, European goods and Alaska fish would be delivered to Tokyo, Seoul and Tacoma.

The journey would require Soviet nuclear icebreaker escorts and possibly the use of Soviet freighters with reinforced hulls. Ytreland said Soviet icebreaking capabilities could keep the passage open most of the year.

Norway and Alaska would serve as gateway ports on either end of the journey, Ytreland said.

Fuhs said the shorter northern sea route would dramatically improve the marketability of forest, mineral and fisheries products and other goods.

Although the transarctic route would benefit trade between northern Europe and the Pacific Rim, Jostein Berg, a professor at the Norwegian Institute of Technology, said, ''The Soviets would benefit the most.''

Berg said the northern shipping route would mean business and goods entering Soviet ports. He said the Soviets could becoming trading partners and earn western currency for their role in shipping.

In a later speech on Soviet arctic policy, Chilingarov raised Soviet concerns about a significant and continuing military presence in the far north. He said the military might stationed in the arctic must be examined in light of the changing world situation.

Chilingarov told northern officials that current Soviet policy was reflected in President Gorbachev's Murmansk Initiatives, in which the Soviet leader criticized U.S. and NATO activity in Norway, Canada, Greenland and called for reduced military activity in the north. Chilingarov's earlier remarks on opening the northern sea route implied that these military concerns had to be addressed for the Soviets to open their arctic waters.

ISSAQUAH, WA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Egghead Discount Software announced this week that Senior Vice President Larry Foster has resigned his position to launch a new software firm.

Foster joined Egghead in 1985 as vice president of purchasing, was promoted to senior vice president in early 1988, then launched Egghead's ''Project Embryo'' new products group in September 1989.

''As Egghead's first vice president and founder of Project Embryo, we'll miss Larry,'' said Egghead President and Chief Operating Officer Matt Griffin. ''As a company, however, we remain committed to the new products group and to its charter: to seek out and assist in developing exciting, new PC software and accessories and to provide our customers with a consistent flow of new items. As we do with all innovators in this industry, we look forward to doing business with Larry's company. We wish him every success,'' Griffin concluded.

According to Foster, ''I'm excited to apply the new product and business development knowledge I've gained in the last five and a half years to a new venture. Egghead has provided me with a base I intend to build on, developing products that will fill the needs of this ever-expanding market.''

Egghead Discount Software is the largest-volume software reseller in North America, selling software, peripherals and accessories to consumers, businesses and government accounts through its 189 retail stores and its 317-person direct sales force.

GLENDALE, CA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - O. James Woodward III, executive vice president and manager of the Guarantee Group of Glendale Federal Bank, announced his retirement Thursday.

He is leaving Glendale Federal Bank, effective Nov. 1, 1990, to join the Fresno law firm of McCormick, Barstow, Sheppard, Wayte & Carruth.

''We are extremely pleased that Jim is joining the firm and expect that he will make significant contributions to our real estate and banking practice,'' said Mario Beltramo, chairman of McCormick's management committee.

The law firm represented Guarantee Savings for many years prior to its merger with Glendale Federal Bank, and has continued to represent the bank after the merger.

Woodward joined Guarantee Savings in early 1983 working in subsidiary operations, particularly real estate development, and later moved into management of banking operations. He was named executive vice president and group manager in January 1988, following Guarantee's merger with Glendale Federal Bank in late 1987.

''Jim played a critical role in the transition period following the merger,'' said Keith P. Russell Jr., president of Glendale Federal Bank. ''His contributions to the bank have been substantial and he will be missed.''

In making the announcement, Woodward said he was retiring from Glendale Federal Bank to pursue other career and personal objectives at this time.

''With the recent well-received name change to Glendale Federal Bank and the successful computer systems conversions completed, I can leave comfortably knowing that our major goals following the merger have been achieved. Now, Glendale Federal Bank can capitalize on the structure we have built together to continue to maintain and enhance the excellent market share position in the Central Valley,'' Woodward said.

Woodward obtained his J.D. in law from the University of California at Berkeley, where he also completed his undergraduate degree. He obtained his M.B.A. from the Stanford Graduate School of Business.

Following graduation, Woodward was Associate General Counsel for the University of California Board of Regents, and later practiced law for a number of years in Fresno. After being with a real estate development partnership in Newport Beach, Calif., he returned to private law practice in Fresno in 1977. Prior to joining Glendale Federal Bank, Woodward had also been associated with another Fresno area financial institution.

Woodward has participated in many community activities, and presently serves on the boards of directors of the Fresno Metropolitan Museum, Fresno Regional Foundation, Valley Children's Hospital Foundation and Fresno Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

GLENDALE, CA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Glendale Federal Bank, the nation's fourth-largest savings bank, announced Thursday it will reorganize its California Retail Banking Operations to unite the strengths of its Guarantee and California groups into a single, highly competitive marketing organization.

''This move creates a stronger and more efficient sales organization,'' said Keith P. Russell Jr., president. The reorganization takes effect Nov. 1, 1990.

Marcia VanDyck Nagel has been named to head the Northern California region of the California Group which unites the 75 banking offices in the Central Valley and the San Francisco/San Mateo markets. Nagel is currently senior vice president and regional manager of the Guarantee Group.

James Riordan has been named to head the Southern California Region of the California Group which includes the Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego county markets for a total of 72 banking offices. Riordan is currently senior vice president and regional manager of the San Francisco/San Mateo market.

Steven McGough, as California Group real estate loan manager, is responsible for residential real estate lending statewide. Jack Good, senior vice president and real estate/commercial lending manager for the Central Valley, will report to McGough. Tony Frisicaro has been appointed consumer loan manager-Southern California and William Lynch has been named consumer loan manager-Northern California.

Sue North remains senior financial officer for the California Group. These managers as well as Nagel, Riordan and McGough will report to Jack Daly, executive vice president and manager of the California Group.

''We anticipate that through this reorganization of the California Retail Operations, we can enhance our already strong market position and our success in providing basic, consumer financial products and services in the communities we know best,'' said Russell Jr., president, Glendale Federal Bank.

Glendale Federal Bank has over $25 billion in assets and operates 235 banking offices in California, Florida and Washington.

VANCOUVER, WA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Red Lion Hotels & Inns is making getaway weekends in California twice as much fun with a special low rate.

Guests who stay Friday, Saturday, or Sunday at any of Red Lion's 12 California Red Lion hotels pay a low weekend rate, plus they have the option of an additional room for half price or staying the next night for half price. Now guests can invite friends to join them, or extend their stay for 50 percent of the cost.

''Airfares are less expensive when travelers stay over a Saturday night, so this is a great incentive for business travelers to add a weekend getaway to their trip,'' said Steve Giblin, Red Lion's executive vice president of sales and marketing.

''These special low rates make it easy for frequent travelers to turn a business trip into a vacation by bringing a spouse, children, or friends.''

The ''Twice as Nice'' rate is available now through Dec. 30, 1990, at the following Red Lion Hotels:

-- Red Lion Inn/Eureka	$69
-- Red Lion Inn/Redding	$69

BIRMINGHAM, AL (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Precision Standard Inc. (NASDAQ:PCSN) announced Thursday that the Hayes Targets Division of its Pemco Aeroplex subsidiary had surpassed the $100 million mark in sales since its inception.

Matthew L. Gold, chairman and chief executive officer of Precision Standard said, ''I congratulate Mr. S. Wesley Teague Jr., president of the Division, his staff and employees on the steady growth and strong market position which the division has achieved.''

Hayes Targets is a leading manufacturer of supersonic and subsonic aerial tow targets. The market served by the Targets Division includes all of the U.S. Armed Forces as well as military customers in Europe, the Middle East, Australia and South America.

''Because aerial tow targets play an important role in the evaluation of weapons systems and the training of military personnel, future demand for such targets is expected to remain strong,'' Teague said.

Precision Standard, with facilities in Alabama, California, Colorado and Florida and offices in Denver, Boston and London performs maintenance and modification of aircraft for the U.S. government and foreign and domestic commercial customers.

The company also manufactures aircraft cargo systems, aerial targets for military customers, precision springs and components, and rocket vehicles and control systems.

SALT LAKE CITY (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Bonneville Pacific Corp. (NASDAQ: BPCO) Thursday reached a definitive agreement that will permit Portland General Corp. (NYSE: PGN) to acquire up to 49 percent of Bonneville's common stock.

Closing on the agreement is anticipated for mid-October.

Headquartered in Salt Lake City, Bonneville develops, owns and operates independent energy projects. It also has subsidiaries active in fuels exploration and development, food processing and greenhouse operations, and waste management.

Portland General is an energy holding company headquartered in Portland, Ore. A major element in its business strategy is to develop its independent power business.

Under the agreement, Portland General will purchase from Bonneville, for an aggregate price of $34 million:

-- a $10 million debenture convertible into 1,333,333 common shares at $7.50 per share;

-- 3,333,333 new common shares at $6 per share;

-- Outstanding warrants at $1 each to purchase 4 million additional common shares at $6 per share.

In addition, Portland General has obtained an option from Bonneville to acquire additional common stock sufficient to total 49 percent of Bonneville's outstanding common stock.

As a result of the contemplated affiliation with Portland General, Bonneville plans to review certain of its current accounting policies with the goal of more closely conforming such policies to those of Portland General.

Portland General's purchase agreement is subject to a brief due diligence period, the approval of its board of directors, and the expiration of the applicable waiting periods under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvement Act.

ST. LOUIS (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - After rejecting a previous contract offer from the company and working nearly a month without an agreement, Brown Shoe manufacturing employees Thursday ratified a new contract offer, making major gains in their pension plan and health care costs.

The new three-year contract, ratified by a margin of 5 to 1, covers 7,000 workers in Missouri, Tennessee, Illinois and Arkansas represented by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union (ACTWU) and the United Food and Commercial Workers Union (UFCW).

Throughout the last week union members discussed the proposal and voted by secret ballot at local meetings. The final count was tallied in St. Louis Thursday afternoon.

''We have increased pension benefits by nearly 20 percent and won significant improvements in healthcare benefits,'' said Joan Suarez, southwest regional director of ACTWU. ''These issues are of critical importance to Brown employees and retirees.''

According to the new agreement, Brown employees will receive a pension benefit increase from $7.25 to $8.50 per month for each year of service as well as a new early retirement benefit. The contract also allows the company and union to negotiate health care cost discounts with local providers -- an important item for the workers -- and provides increases in the lifetime maximum, sickness and accident benefits. Hourly wages will increase 60 cents over the life of the contract. The last contract expired at midnight Aug. 24.

''The workers showed the company that they wesg willing to turn away a contract offer for the first time in 30 years and fight for what they needed, and they won,'' said William Treece, assistant director for footwear for UFCW. ''The company should take note that these employees -- many of whom will still experience hardship despite these gains -- will be demanding to share in Brown's growth.''

Brown Shoe Co., a division of Brown Group Inc., is the largest manufacturer of women's shoes in the U.S., selling under brand names that include Naturalizer, Connie, DeLiso and Natural Sport.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - At its meeting Thursday, members of the board of directors of The Bank of California elected Yasumasa Gomi president of the bank.

This is in addition to his current responsibilities as chief operating officer.

''This new title and the addition of the formal responsibilities of president reflect Gomi's broad perspective for our long-range performance and growth, as well as the day-to-day operations, of the bank,'' bank Chairman Osamu ''Sam'' Yamada said.

Yasumasa Gomi joined The Bank of California in August 1989 as executive vice president and chief operating officer. Prior to this assignment, he was general manager of the Tokyo Regional Office of The Mitsubishi Bank, Limited, The Bank of California's parent.

Gomi's previous assignment was as chief manager of the International Planning Division in Tokyo, where he participated in the 1984 acquisition of this bank. Gomi has held a variety of positions in various regional offices, as well as in the domestic and international planning divisions of Mitsubishi Bank since joining the organization in 1966.

He is a 1966 graduate of the University of Tokyo with a Bachelor of Arts degree from the Faculty of Economics. In 1985, Gomi completed the senior executive program, Sloan School of Management, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The Bank of California, the first incorporated banking institution in the West is the state's sixth-largest bank with $8.4 billion in assets. It operates 50 domestic offices in California, Washington and Oregon and 14 international offices.

SEATTLE (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - The Seafirst Bank board of directors Thursday announced that Luke S. Helms will become chairman and chief executive officer of Seafirst Bank effective Oct. 15, 1990, and will assume the title of chairman and CEO of Seafirst Corp. upon the retirement of Chairman Richard P. Cooley on Dec. 31, 1990.

At a board meeting today, directors of the state's largest bank named Helms chairman and Kevin B. Ferrell president effective Oct. 15, 1990. Cooley continues as chief executive officer of Seafirst Corp. and chairman of the executive committee of the board.

Helms, 46, is currently president of Seafirst. He joined the bank in 1974 in the National Department and was elected a vice president in 1976. In 1980, he was promoted to senior vice president in charge of the National Division and in 1982 he became head of the International Division. He was promoted to executive vice president and manager of the World Banking Group in 1983 and manager of the Northwest Banking Group in 1986. He was named president of Seafirst Bank effective Jan. 1, 1988.

A native of Lubbock, Texas, Helms was raised in Phoenix, Ariz., and is a graduate of the University of Arizona. He earned a master's of business administration from the University of Santa Clara and is also a graduate of the Pacific Coast Banking School.

Helms is a director of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, the Washington Council on Economic Education, the University of Washington Foundation, the Pacific Northwest Ballet, the Downtown Seattle Association and the Seattle Chamber of Commerce among other community responsibilities.

Ferrell, 43, is joining Seafirst from Bank of America where he is senior vice president in charge of the San Francisco Corporate Office as well as the High Technology Industry Group. He is responsible for the bank's relationships with corporations and institutions in Northern California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Nevada and Hawaii, and to high technology companies throughout the United States. Before that, he was a senior vice president in Corporate Treasury, managing the funding, interest rate risk and capital position of the bank and its parent holding company, BankAmerica Corp.

Ferrell began his banking career in New York, working in corporate finance before joining Bank of America in 1976. He has had assignments in London as senior account manager of the Energy Group and in New York as vice president with administrative responsibility for the bank's offices in the eastern United States.

In 1979, Ferrell served for one year in the Office of the Secretary, in the U.S. Department of Energy in Washington D.C. and earlier in his career served in the Executive Office of the President on the staff of the Council on International Economic Policy. He has a bachelor's in mathematics and a master's of business administration from the University of California at Berkeley.

Cooley, 66, joined Seafirst in 1983 as chairman and chief executive officer after a 33-year career at Wells Fargo & Co. where he served as chief executive officer for 16 years.

With $12.4 billion in assets, Seafirst Corp. is the state's largest bank-holding company and offers banking services at 188 branch offices. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of BankAmerica Corp., yet functions with an independent board of directors.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA (SEPT. 21) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of Alaska

Housing Finance Corp. (AHFC) authorized the sale and issuance of three home mortgage bond issues totaling $252 million at their meeting on Sept. 18.

The three issues include $177 million in tax-exempt collateralized home mortgage bonds designated for AHFC's ''First Time Homebuyers'' program. The bonds are expected to provide sufficient funding for the program for the next three years.

The $152 million 1990 Series A bonds are considered a ''current refunding'' for federal tax purposes. As such, these bonds will not be subject to the alternative minimum tax. This exclusion creates an interest cost savings to AHFC by making the bonds attractive to investors.

Also included was $75 million in taxable Collateralized Mortgage Obligation (CMO) bonds. Loans financed by these bonds must meet Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., Federal National Mortgage Association, or Government National Mortgage Association requirements.

A re-offering of $25 million in collateralized home mortgage bonds that will fund tax exempt loans under AHFC's ''First Time Homebuyers'' program was also included. Under new tax laws, borrowers funded by these bonds must meet certain income and purchase price requirements.

The Collateralized Home Mortgage 1990 Series A bonds were marketed initially by Merrill Lynch Capital Markets. After conversion to fixed rate securities, they will be re-marketed by a group lead by Merrill Lynch, with First Boston, Kidder Peabody, Paine Webber, and Bear Stearns invited to join. This is the same marketing group that participated in the re-marketing of the 1989 Series B-2.

Marketing of the CMO's Series 1990-2 involved an underwriting group led by First Boston, with Bear Stearns, Merrill Lynch, Chemical Securities, Kidder Peabody and Paine Webber participating.

The housing market in Alaska is recovering from a downturn which began four years ago when oil prices fell and revenue to the state of Alaska dropped dramatically.

Alaska Housing Finance Corp., an instrumentality of the state of Alaska, is the major purchaser of home mortgages in Alaska. The bonds were rated AAA by Standard & Poor's, and Aaa by Moody's Investor Service.

In the first quarter of 1990, demand for AHFC mortgage funds grew to 127 percent of the 1989 volume. A record number of 923 loans have been made through May of this year. The average loan is now $85,833.

SANTA CLARA, CALIF. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - National Semiconductor Corp. Thursday announced that sales for the first quarter ended Aug. 26 were $442.7 million compared with $397.6 million for the comparable quarter a year ago.

The company reported a net loss of $165.5 million, or $1.63 per share, versus a net loss of $21.9 million, or 24 cents per share, in the first quarter a year ago. Results for the first quarter include a pre-tax charge of $143.6 million in connection with restructuring activity announced on Aug. 21.

Charles E. Sporck, National Semiconductor president and chief executive officer, said: ''National Semiconductor's operating performance was affected by several factors, including a seasonal slowing in shipments, pricing pressure in certain product areas and operating losses in the product areas identified during recent restructuring activity.''

In connection with the restructuring activity announced during the first quarter, National Semiconductor said that it will cease development of very high-speed, high-density SRAMs (one megabit and above). The company will continue to manufacture 256k BiCMOS SRAMs, as well as BiCMOS SRAMs at lower densities.

It will continue active development of BiCMOS process technologies in support of a wide range of products throughout the company.

Additionally, as part of the restructuring, National Semiconductor said it will refocus its ASIC organization, concentrating on ECL and high-performance gate arrays, as well as CLASIC and CMOS customer-owned tooling. The company will discontinue development of high-density CMOS gate arrays, while continuing to support existing CMOS families.

The company will consolidate all military-product assembly and test activity into its South Portland, Maine, plant, and will close its Tucson, Ariz., military and aerospace facility. It will also close one fab line at its Puyallup, Wash., plant.

As a result of these actions, National Semiconductor announced on Aug. 21 a worldwide workforce reduction of approximately 2,000 positions.

Sporck continued: ''As we had anticipated, bookings during the summer were significantly below the record levels which the company experienced during the spring. Given the uncertain economic environment, we are taking a cautious position concerning the near-term outlook for the semiconductor industry.''

National Semiconductor Corp. designs, manufactures and markets high-performance semiconductors and board-level connectivity products. With headquarters in Santa Clara, the company is a global leader in mixed analog-and-digital technologies.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Managing Partner George T. Shaheen on Thursday announced that Andersen Consulting has become the first professional services firm to join the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC) as a shareholder.

The announcement was made jointly with Craig I. Fields, president, chief technical officer and chief operating officer of the consortium of advanced technology companies, at a news briefing.

''We are pleased to welcome Andersen Consulting and the broad industry perspective they will bring to our research team,'' Fields said. ''An applications focus and user sensitivity are vital to technology development, and Andersen Consulting has demonstrated expertise in these areas.

''This orientation is particularly important to our efforts because it complements MCC's implementation of a 'vertically integrated' research strategy.''

Shaheen added: ''Demands caused by globalization, competitive pressures and the growing sophistication of end users often require that businesses implement promising and innovative technologies quickly. Our shareholder position in MCC will enhance our ability to help clients integrate those technologies faster.''

Andersen Consulting will participate in MCC's newly launched Formal Methods Transition Study and the Software Technology Program.

W. James Fischer, Andersen Consulting's managing partner of technology services, will serve on MCC's board of directors, allowing the firm to assist in setting the consortium's policies and overall research agenda. In addition Andersen Consulting will join MCC's Technical Advisory Board, which provides strategic technical planning for the consortium.

Andersen Consulting and MCC, along with the University of Michigan, were awarded one of six collaboration technology (or ''groupware'') research grants from the National Science Foundation (NSF) in June 1989.

''After working together with MCC on the NSF groupware project and after conducting a careful and detailed review of their initiatives, we found that the synergy between MCC and Andersen Consulting research projects was very high,'' said Shaheen.

LAS VEGAS (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE (SEPT. 20) - Goldriver Limited Partnership (Goldriver), the owner of Sam's Town Gold River Hotel and Gambling Hall and its wholly-owned subsidiary Goldriver Finance Corporation (GFC), announced today that based on unaudited income statements for the months ended July 31 and August 31, 1990 which reflect net losses of $1,398,000 and $2,085,000, respectively, and based on recent information provided by California Hotel & Casino, the operator of the facility, Goldriver and GFC now anticipate that Goldriver will not be able to fully fund (and GFC to pay) the November 1, 1990 interest payment on GFC's 13-7/8 percent First Mortgage Bonds due May 1, 1997.

Goldriver and GFC also announced that based upon expressions of interest received to date, it is unlikely that Goldriver will obtain subscriptions for the additional $3,904,749 of equity required by October 12, 1990 under the Bond Indenture.

The failure to obtain said subscriptions will obligate GFC to make (and Goldriver to fund) a $1,180,000 cash payment to Bondholders by October 19, 1990. It presently appears that the cash payment may not be made.

Goldriver will shortly schedule a meeting with Bondholders to review the situation and discuss possible solutions.

QUINCY, MA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Clean Harbors Inc. (NASDAQ:CLHB) Thursday announced its results for the quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990 and the recent decision by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection regarding the hazardous waste incinerator which the company has proposed to build at its Braintree, Mass. facility.

Revenues for the second quarter increased by more than 15 percent to $40,585,000 with net income of $1,427,000 or $.16 per common and common equivalent share, as compared to revenues of $35,123,000 with net income of $1,327,000 or $.15 per common and common equivalent share during the second quarter last year.

Six-month revenues were $75,121,000 with net income of $2,046,000 or $.23 per common and common equivalent share, as compared to revenues of $68,172,000 with net income of $1,748,000 or $.19 per common and common equivalent share for the six-month period ended Aug. 31, 1989.

In response to the recent determination by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection that the company's Braintree site is not suitable for the proposed hazardous waste incinerator, the company expects to write down its investment in this project during its third fiscal quarter, which would result in a one-time pre-tax charge against operations of approximately $16 million.

SHELTON, CONN. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Transnational Industries Inc. (NASDAQ:TRSL), a diversified aerospace company, Thursday reported a net loss for the second quarter ended July 31, 1990 of $354,000, or 15 cents per common share after giving effect to preferred dividends of $55,000, as compared to a $106,000 profit, or after preferred dividends of $49,000, 2 cents per common share in the second quarter of fiscal 1990.

Net sales for the second quarter of fiscal 1991 were $6,747,000 compared with $8,000,000 a year earlier.

Commenting on the results, Thomas J. Flaherty, Transnational president stated that ''reduced shipments, principally of military orders, and normal start-up costs on new commercial programs at both our jet engine amnd airframe subsidiaries were the major contributors to the loss. The new commercial programs, which are in the final stages of their initial production, will be in full production in the second half of our fiscal year.

Backlogs at Transnational's jet engine and airframe components business continue to be strong at $29.4 million and $28 million, respectively, at Aug. 31, 1990.

Consolidated backlogs hit a record $61.2 million as compared to $54.5 million at Aug. 31, 1989.

Revenues for the six months ended July 31, 1990 were $12,997,000 down from $15,498,000 in the compatible period a year ago. Net loss for the period was $486,000, or, after giving effect to preferred dividends of $93,000, 22 cents per share, as compared to a profit of $332,000, or, after giving effect to preferred dividends of $98,000, 9 cents per share in the comparable period of fiscal 1990.

Headquartered in Shelton, Transnational through its subsidiaries, AlloyTek Inc. (Grandville, Mi.) and Magna Mill Products Inc. (South Gate, Calif.), specializes in the fabrication of oil tanks and precision components of afterburner assemblies for jet engines, and in the machining of landing gear and other complex airframe components.

Through its Spitz Inc. subsidiary (Chadds Ford, Pa.), the company designs and manufactures a variety of state-of-the-art simulation equipment, including computer-controlled astronomical simulators and simulations domes.

SANTA CLARA, CALIF. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - 3Com Corp. (NASDAQ:COMS) Thursday announced results for the first quarter ended Aug. 31.

Net income was $5.0 million, or 17 cents per share, on sales of $106.2 million as compared with net income of $1.2 million, or 4 cents per share, on sales of $89.1 million during the year-earlier period. Orders for the current fiscal period were $96.9 million, up from $94.8 million a year ago.

''Strength in our adapter business continues to contribute favorably to the overall growth of our data networking business,'' said Eric Benhamou, 3Com's president and chief executive officer. ''New product sales in the transmission systems segment of our business helped partially offset the softness experienced this quarter in workgroup systems products.''

Benhamou noted that customer acceptance of the recently introduced 10Base-T products and the Etherlink 16 adapter has been encouraging. Revenues from new products represented 33 percent of total sales in the first quarter as compared with 10 percent in the previous year's quarter.

''While first quarter results reflect a significant improvement over the prior year, we recognize the need to continue working to increase profitability. Key to achieving this objective is increasing the incoming order rate in all product areas while sustaining gross margins and carefully monitoring expenses '' Benhamou said.

3Com's balance sheet at the end of the first quarter posted cash increasing more than $5.6 million to $92.3 million from the May quarter. Continued strong performance in both accounts receivable and inventories contributed to positive cash flow during the quarter. 3Com Corp. is a leading independent global data networking company, providing multivendor connectivity that spans organizations and businesses worldwide. The company designs, manufactures, markets and supports networking systems based on industry standards and open systems architecture.

NASHVILLE, TENN. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Dr. Jerome S. Tannenbaum, president and chief executive officer of REN Corporation-USA, Thursday announced that James W. Egan has joined REN as executive vice president and chief financial officer.

Egan has served for the past four years as president and chairman of Preway Inc., a public company involved in manufacturing and consumer products. Prior to joining Preway, Egan was vice president (finance), treasurer and director of General Housewares Corp., a manufacturer of houseware products, where he was responsible for all financial accounting, tax, legal, audit, public reporting and planning activities.

Egan, a Certified Public Accountant, also served previously as supervising senior manager at Peat Marwick Main and Co. in New York City.

Commenting on Egan's appointment as executive vice president and chief financial officer, Tannenbaum stated: ''We are indeed fortunate to have a person of Mr. Egan's capabilities join REN. His 25 years of experience with the financial and investment community and his demonstrated strengths in operations will greatly benefit REN as we continue to grow.''

REN Corporation - USA is engaged primarily in providing renal dialysis services to patients suffering from chronic kidney failure. Dialysis services are provided principally at the company's 23 freestanding outpatient REN Centers located in nine states. The company also provides outpatient dialysis services to patients in their homes and inpatient dialysis services through contracts with 20 hospitals.

In addition, the company performs blood, tissue and urine testing services for its REN Centers, as well as for independent physicians and industry, at its three clinical laboratories. The company's common stock is included in the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol ''RENL.''

CLEVELAND (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Ameritrust Corp. (NASDAQ:AMTR) Thursday announced the appointment of three executives to key positions in its Credit Policy and Risk Management Group.

These appointments are effective immediately.

Peter R. Butcher has been named executive vice president and senior credit policy officer and will be responsible for managing the quality of the corporation's loan portfolio, and for developing and implementing lending policies and strategies.

Kevin M. Blakely has been named senior vice president and will be responsible for the review of credit and credit administration risk throughout the corporation.

Karl G. Grunawalt has been promoted to senior vice president and will oversee the management of all assigned assets in workout and the early identification of potential problem loans.

Formed in May, 1990, the Credit Policy and Risk Management Group is responsible for the implementation of corporate-wide risk policy and for the improvement of asset quality. William Haffke, executive vice president, was appointed head of the group. Butcher, Blakely and Grunawalt will report directly to Haffke.

Butcher's career in banking began in 1956 with Midland Bank in London. Over a 32-year period, he held positions of increasing responsibility in credit policy and review functions with the Midland organization in the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States, including senior vice president and senior credit policy officer of Crocker Bank. Most recently, he has been a principal of ICON Associates, a bank consulting firm.

Blakely joined the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) in 1973 as a field examiner following his graduation from college. His entire professional career has been with the OCC in bank examination and supervision. He was most recently deputy comptroller for Special Supervision and served as chairman of the Appraisal Subcommittee, which was created to provide regulatory oversight of appraisers.

Grunawalt joined Ameritrust in 1980, and has served in several assignments in the Corporate Banking Group. In 1986, he formed and managed the Corporate Finance Unit and in the following year was named vice president of the Mezzanine/Equity Finance Department, a unit of the Merchant Banking Division.

SUNNYVALE, CA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Telebit Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:TBIT), pioneers of the high-speed dial-up modem, Thursday announced a corporate restructuring reflecting its strategic diversification plan initiated in mid-1989.

A major element of the restructuring is the creation of four autonomous business units, each sharing corporate finance, administration and sales functions, with each maintaining independent marketing and engineering activities.

The newly created Telebit Network Systems and Telebit Software Products units represent an extension of the company's core technology into the inter-networking markets and an entry into the communications-related software markets, respectively. Both units will introduce their first products in the fourth quarter of 1990.

The company's core business will be focused in the Telebit Data Communications unit, while the Telebit International unit will focus on the rapidly growing international markets.

Accompanying the organization restructuring will be an approximate 10 percent reduction of the company's workforce. This stems in part from the restructuring of the marketing and engineering functions, and in part from the maturing of several engineering development efforts.

Telebit Corp. designs, manufactures and markets advanced high-speed products for dial-up networking and wide-area communications. The company's patented Packetized Ensemble Protocol (PEP) and proprietary digital signal processing technologies provide extremely reliable error-free communications across the worldwide switched telephone network.

Telebit markets its products worldwide through distributors, OEMs and VARs. Located in Sunnyvale, Telebit is a publicly held corporation.

YORKVILLE, N.Y. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - For the second consecutive year, the member companies of the Digimetrics group have set records for combined sales, net income and earnings per share.

A 15 percent increase in sales, 74 percent rise in net income and near doubling of earnings per share were among the highlights of the results for the 12-month period ending June 30, announced by Patrick G. Shields, the organization's president.

He said combined net sales for the parent company, Digimetrics Inc. of Yorkville, and its subsidiaries, Control Chief Corp. of Bradford, Pa., and Bradford Classics Woodworking of Randolph, N.Y. were $6,112,562 compared to $5,331,294 last year.

Each member of the group, he noted, contributed to the increase; Digimetrics, with a sales growth of 6.7 percent; Control Chief, with an increase of 11.2 percent; and Bradford Classics Woodworking, with an increase of 66.3 percent.

The companies' combined net income climbed to $326,770 for fiscal 1990, from $188,089 recorded the previous year. Earnings per share also jumped 74 percent, to $.101 from $.058.

Shields explained that Digimetrics Inc., which manufactures weld monitoring devices for automated welding operations, had 1990 sales of $881,914; Control Chief Corp., which makes remote control systems for a wide range of industrial applications, had sales of $4,561,539; and Bradford Classics Woodworking, which prodces wood parts such as furniture components and stair balusters and newels for the furniture and home building industries, had sales of $669,109.

He said the group's strong sales performance was accepted by the fact that as of this past June 30, the backlog of orders for the three companies combined stood at $1,185,723, compared to $635,794 at the same time last year.

The backlog at Control Chief was the highest in its history and Bradford Classics' backlog was its first ever. Shields described the high levels of backlog orders as an indication of the strong demand for the companies' products.

Further commenting on the results, he said, ''Control Chief Corporation experienced an exceptionally significant increase in its profits, and although Bradford Classics Woodworking showed a modest loss for the year, the deficit was substantially less than the comparable figure last year. Of course, these losses were anticipated as this new subsidiary, formed in 1988, continues to absorb start-up costs as well as expenses related to its acquisition of the assets of Blood's Grinding and Turnings Inc. in early 1989.

''Overall, we were delighted with Bradford Classics' growth. With the adjustments made in its pricing structure beginning to show results in the fourth quarter, we are confident about its ability to contribute to the future profitability of the group.''

Shields said a comprehensive report of the group's results for fiscal 1990 will be made at the organization's annual meeting in November.

Digimetrics' stock is quoted on NASDAQ under the trading symbol DIGM.

BAYSIDE, N.Y. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - The Home Savings Bank (NASDAQ:HMSB) announced Thursday that its Board of Directors voted to suspend payment of the quarterly cash dividend on the Bank's common stock. The $0.1875 per share dividend was last paid on July 19, 1990.

''In view of the current difficult economic environment, the Board of Directors considered it prudent to suspend the dividend,'' said Richard A. Kraemer, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. He added, ''The Board will continue to review the dividend policy on a quarterly basis.''

Mr. Kraemer stated that this action should have no effect on the proposed merger between Home Savings and a subsidiary of H.F. Ahmanson & Co. The proposed merger, which was approved by a vote of Home Savings' shareholders yesterday, is subject to regulatory approval.

The Home Savings Bank, with assets of $1.6 billion, operates 13 full-service banking offices in the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, as well as Nassau and Westchester Counties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Drug Emporium Inc., Thursday announced that it has acquired one franchise and agreed to acquire two others.

Chief Executive Officer Gary Wilber said the company acquired its Charleston, S.C.-based franchise. The territory includes Columbia, S.C., and Augusta, Ga., as well as the Charleston area.

Wilber also announced that the company has preliminary agreements to acquire its franchises in St. Louis, and San Diego.

He added, ''We expect these transactions to close within the next 60 days. We are also continuing active negotiations on other franchises and believe that we will acquire at least one more this year.''

The Charleston, St. Louis and San Diego franchisees currently operate a total of nine Drug Emporium stores. Wilber pointed out that the transactions involve a combination of Drug Emporium common stock and cash, with an estimated value of $8.8 million. He stated that ''All the markets have room for growth and fit into our expansion plans.''

Including these three acquisitions announced today, Drug Emporium, a national deep-discount drugstore chain, would own and operate 96 stores and franchise another 103 stores specializing in brand-name health and beauty aids, cosmetics and prescription drugs.

CARMEL, IN (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Conseco Inc. (NYSE:CNC) announced Thursday that it has entered into an agreement to acquire Beneficial Standard Life Insurance Co. from a subsidiary of CalFed Inc. (NYSE:CAL) for approximately $140 million in cash.

Conseco intends to consummate the acquisition through Conseco Capital Partners L.P., a Delaware limited partnership to which Conseco and other institutional investors have committed $70 million in equity capital for the purpose of acquiring and operating life insurance companies.

The purchase agreement also calls for close cooperation prior to the closing between representatives of the buyer and seller on management decisions involving Beneficial's operations. The acquisition is expected to close by Dec. 31, subject to the approval of the insurance commissioners of California and Arizona.

Beneficial, rated A+ (Superior) by A.M. Best Co., specializes in annuity and single premium life insurance products. Beneficial markets these products through a combination of general agents and national marketing organizations, and is licensed in 48 states and the District of Columbia. Beneficial had total assets at June 30 of approximately $1.8 billion and total premiums collected and other revenues in the first six months of 1990 of approximately $412 million.

Conseco Chairman Stephen C. Hilbert said, ''Beneficial has been very successful distributing its annuity products through financial institutions. This is a rapidly-growing niche market where Conseco also has considerable expertise. The synergies inherent in this acquisition are very attractive.''

Conseco, a financial services holding company, is headquartered in Carmel. Beneficial would be the third acquisition for Conseco Capital Partners: Great American Reserve Insurance Co. was acquired in June 1990 and the pending acquisition of Lomas Financial Corp.'s life insurance group is expected to be completed during the fall of 1990.

BARTLESVILLE, OK (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Phillips 66 Company and Partek Corporation Thursday announced a joint venture that will recycle high density polyethylene plastic (HDPE).

A subsidiary of Phillips 66 Company holds a 51 percent interest and Partek a 49 percent interest in the new venture called Phillips Plastics Recycling Partnership. The partners are investing $3.5 million to launch the joint venture. Phillips is investing nearly $1.8 million and Partek over $1.7 million. John R. VanBuskirk, Phillips 66 senior vice president, plastics, said: ''We see HDPE recycling as a positive step in preserving our environment while providing good business potential. That will be the goal of Phillips Plastics Recycling Partnership.''

The joint venture announced plans to construct a HDPE recycling facility at a site to be determined. Construction of the plant is expected to begin this year and be completed in the summer of 1991. The facility will have the capacity to recycle 20 million pounds of polyethylene a year. The plant will recycle HDPE used by both industries and consumers. Phillips will market all of the recycled polyethylene.

The possibility of building additional recycling facilities at other locations is being studied. Phillips 66 Company has been a major producer of polyethylene in the United States. The company currently is rebuilding its polyethylene production facilities in Pasadena, Texas. The facilities were destroyed in an accident last October. The first 300 million pounds of production capacity is coming onstream at the facility next month.

Partek is a pioneer in developing HDPE recycling technology. It began operation in 1987 and is headquartered in Vancouver, Wash. HDPE is used in a wide variety of consumer, industrial and municipal applications.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - The organizers of United Bank of Philadelphia, a black-controlled commercial bank in organization here, Thursday announced that they have received approval from the Pennsylvania Department of Banking to incorporate as a state-chartered banking institution.

Emma C. Chappell, who will serve as the bank's chairman, was joined during the announcement by Pennsylvania Secretary of Banking Sarah W. Hargrove; Pennsylvania Secretary of the Commonwealth Christopher A. Lewis and by top management representatives from United Bank's principal corporate investors including: Samuel A. McCullough, chairman and CEO, Meridian Bancorp; Robert Palmer, president and CEO, First Pennsylvania Bank; Betty Sue Peabody, president and chief operating officer, Mellon Bank (East); John A. Miller, chairman and CEO, Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Robert E. Chappell, chairman, president and CEO, Provident National Bank; and Ralph F. Desiderio, senior vice president, Continental Bank.

Also participating in the announcement were several of the new bank's board members, including Bishop Frank C. Cummings, bishop of the First Episcopal District, AME Church and James F. Bodine, former president, First Pennsylvania Bank.

According to the State Banking Department, United Bank's charter approval is the first granted for a black-controlled commercial bank since Dec. 12, 1923, when Philadelphia's Citizens and Southern Bank was chartered.

Because Citizens and Southern also was the first black-controlled bank to receive state charter approval, the United Bank charter represents just the second such charter ever approved by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

''This is an important day in the economic history of Philadelphia and its African-American community,'' said Chappell. ''With our charter now approved, we can begin to sell the bank's common stock and to raise the balance of our capital requirement.

''We have an aggressive capital development plan, the support of the city's business and financial leaders and a community that's anxious to have its own financial institution,'' she added. ''We are confident that our effort will be successful, and that United Bank will open its doors this winter as the Commonwealth's only black-controlled commercial bank.''

To date, the bank's organizers have received commitments for $2,770,000 of the total $5 million of required capital. They plan to open the institution at 714 Market Street in center city Philadelphia.

There are currently 36 black-controlled commercial banks in the United States. Philadelphia, the nation's fifth-largest city, has not had a black-controlled commerical bank since 1956, when the Citizens and Southern Bank closed after 36 years of operation. There are currently no black-controlled commercial banks in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, PA. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Plans to ship the industry's first 256/512K VGA featuring the Tseng Labs ET-4000 chip set were unveiled Thursday by Groundhog Graphics Inc.

The uniqueness of The Rainbow lies in its speed, which exceeds the newly released one megabyte cards in the market by 5 to 10 percent. The Rainbow has been found to further exceed the speed of graphics adapters in its own class by over 200 percent.

The Rainbow is expandable from 256K to 512K and is bundled with the ColoRIX Jr. paint program and Lightning Zoom! multiple viewpoint driver, which increases Autocad redraw speed 10 times or more. Further boosting the value of The Rainbow is Groundhog's trademark lifetime warranty.

''This is literally the most exciting development in the graphics board market since the advent of the one megabyte VGA,'' said Doug Sandlin, executive vice president at Groundhog Graphics. He continued, ''We're encouraging our dealers to order now; initial production runs (of several thousand) are already nearly sold out! The market response we're receiving is phenomenal.''

The Rainbow lists for just $199 with 256K memory. For further information, contact Groundhog Graphics at 800/283-2322 or (outside United States) 814/938-8943.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, PA (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Groundhog Graphics has revealed plans to start production of its third hi-res graphics card, The Sunburst 8514/A.

Going beyond the 8514/A standard set by IBM, The Sunburst supports up to two megabytes of dual ported V-RAM, displaying a brilliant 1280 by 1024 resolution in 256 colors. Preliminary tests show The Sunburst to be faster than even the TI-34010 based cards.

Doug Sandlin, executive vice president at Groundhog, commented, ''This board has an incredibly strong price/performance ratio. Users can now access truly sophisticated graphics applications at affordable pricing.''

Through Groundhog's proprietary design, the chip count is only eight, which ensures reliability. The card is vector intensive for CAD/CAM applications, as graphic computation is offloaded from the CPU. Scissoring, line drawing, patterning, color mixing, bit block transfer are among its key features.

The board supports interlaced and non-interlaced display modes, and is hardware accelerated to support hi-res 8514/A monitors and compatibles (pixel clock runs up to 80 MHz). The Sunburst runs any register level compatible or true AI driver, such as Windows and Presentation Manager.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - First Commercial Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:FCLR) announced Thursday that its board of directors has approved a new provision of its Shareholder Dividend Reinvestment and Common Stock Purchase Plan.

Under the new provision, First Commercial shareholders can purchase additional stock at 95 percent of market value through reinvestment of dividends. Previously, dividend reinvestment purchases were made at full market value.

The new common stock purchase discount privilege will take effect with the dividend payable on Jan. 2, 1991, to shareholders of record as of Dec. 14, 1990. However, shareholders may begin signing up for the dividend reinvestment discount privilege immediately by contacting First Commercial Corp. - Investor Relations, Post Office Box 1471, Little Rock, Ark. 72203; 501/371-7289. There are no brokerage commisions or service fees for dividend reinvestment purchases.

First Commercial Corp.'s board of directors has also adopted a Shareholder Rights Plan designed to prevent an acquiror from gaining control of the corporation without offering a fair price to all of First Commercial's shareholders.

First Commercial Corp. emphasizes that the Shareholder Rights Plan was adopted in response to general developments in corporate takeover activity in order to ensure equitable treatment of all FCC shareholders. FCC is not aware of any effort underway or contemplated to acquire control of the corporation.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - National Fuel Gas Supply Corp., the pipeline subsidiary of National Fuel Gas Co. (NYSE:NFG), announced Thursday that it plans to accept a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) order approving the final phase of the Niagara-Import Point Project.

Under the order, National Fuel is authorized to transport an additional 161.5 million cubic feet (mmcf) per day of Canadian gas. The volumes will be delivered as follows: Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Co., 125 mmcf/d; an Indeck cogenerating facility at Oswego, N.Y., 12 mmcf/d; the Indeck cogeneration facility at Tonawanda, N.Y., 12 mmcf/d; and 12.5 mmcf/d for National Fuel system supply.

In order to provide this service, National Fuel is authorized to construct an 8,600 horsepower compressor station in the Town of Concord, N.Y., at an estimated $12.3 million dollars.

In addition, National Fuel will also own 46 percent of the facilities approved to be constructed by Tennessee Gas Transmission Corp. Tennessee is authorized to build the remaining 17.8 miles of the full 49.2 miles of looping on its Niagara Spur, and add 7,000 horsepower to its compressor station at Lockport, N.Y. Construction of all facilities is expected to begin this fall to be completed during the summer of 1991.

Total cost of the jointly owned facilities is estimated to be $65.4 million dollars. National Fuel's share will be $30.1 million dollars.

Richard Hare, president of National Fuel Gas Supply Corp. said, ''When these projects are completed, National Fuel's pipeline system will be a major artery connecting Canada's principal pipeline (Trans-Canada) with Leidy, Pa., the 'hub' of major pipelines that serve the growing markets of the northeast.''

''This is one more step in our strategy to become a prominent supplier of transportation and storage to utilities, cogenerators, and other Northeastern customers purchasing natural gas in Canada.''

Completion of this phase will boost National Fuel's new Canadian gas transportation capacity to 326.5 million cubic feet per day.

CLEARWATER, FL (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of PRIDE (Prison Rehabilitative Industries and Diversified Enterprises Inc.) Thursday announced the selection of Pamela Jo Davis, Ph.D. as PRIDE's new president.

''New visions, new leadership and new opportunities will be the cornerstone of PRIDE's ability to meet the challenges of the '90's. Dr. Davis' acceptance is a tremendous plus for PRIDE,'' said F. Philip Handy, chairman of PRIDE. ''Her public and private sector experience is an excellent blend with PRIDE's unique public-private partnership.

''We look forward to her direction and guidance over the coming years.''

Davis has a solid professional background in the public and private sector arenas. She currently serves as a Market Development Manager for Motorola Inc., where she is responsible for strategic and long range planning, product development and marketing activities in domestic and European markets.

Prior to that she served as the Deputy Secretary for the Department of Community Affairs overseeing agency administrative activities including administering millions of dollars in grants, loans and tax exempt housing bonds, lobbying for the agency budget and interfacing with Federal agencies.

Her experience in the public sector also includes a strong background in the corrections arena. As assistant secretary for the Office of Management and Budget in the Department of Corrections, Davis handled administrative services in the areas of finance and budget, information management, and capital construction.

Prior to this she served as the Director of the Women's Detention Center, Metropolitan Dade County where she was responsible for the total operations of a county correctional facility including detention, training, treatment, pretrial services and work release for 190 females.

Davis received both her B.B.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Miami. She will be replacing outgoing president J. Floyd Glisson who is leaving to pursue other opportunities. Davis will officially assume the duties as president in late October.

The PRIDE program currently operates 56 industries ranging form printing, to computer aided design, to furniture refurbishing at 23 state prison locations. Last year PRIDE trained more than 6,400 inmates and sales exceeded $81 million.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - Barbara Caulfield, a partner in the San Francisco law firm of Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison, will join Pacific Telesis Group as a senior counsel for its Pacific Bell unit in late October.

Caulfield has been with Brobeck since 1983, specializing primarily in product liability litigation.

Pacific Telesis Group has 29 senior counsel, of whom about one-third are women. Since the beginning of the year, five new attorneys have been added to Pacific Bell's Northern California litigation group.

The other new additions to the staff include: Ray Churchill, formerly of Sedgwick, Detert, Moran & Arnold; Bob Mazique, formerly of the Alameda County District Attorney's Office; Joyce Norcini, formerly of Thelen, Marrin, Johnson & Bridges; and Lisa Zinkan, formerly of Cooper, White & Cooper.

Besides leading Brobeck's litigation training program, Caulfield, 42, has taught trial practice for the National Institute for Trial Advocacy and several Bar Associations. She is an adjunct professor at Stanford Law School, and has been invited to teach at Harvard Law School. She also has traveled overseas on behalf of the State Department to participate in international trial training programs.

Caulfield received her J.D. in 1972, as well as her B.S. in 1969 in political science, from Northwestern University. She was a trial lawyer until joining the law faculty at the University of California's Hastings College of the Law (1978-83), where she also served as the academic dean from 1980-82.

Caulfield is married to attorney Stephen Mayo. They have five children and reside in Mill Valley. She is a native of Chicago.

MIAMI (SEPT. 20) BUISNESS WIRE - FDP Corp. (NASDAQ:FDPC) Thursday announced the financial results for its third quarter, which ended Aug. 31.

Total revenue for the quarter decreased $527,678 to $3,862,318, compared with $4,389,995 for the comparable period in 1989. The company reported a net earnings of $144,146 (4 cents per share) for the quarter vs. a net earnings of $261,034 (8 cents per share) for the comparable period in fiscal 1989.

Total revenue for the first nine months ended Aug. 31 increased $1,402,495 (13 percent) to $12,365,300, compared with $10,962,804 for the comparable period in 1989.

The company reported a net earnings of $290,703 (9 cents per share) for the nine months vs. a net loss of $46,367 (1 cent per share) for the comparable period in fiscal 1989. Comparisons to the second fiscal 1990 quarter showed an increase in total revenue of $135,681 (from $3,726,636), an increase in net earnings of $78,565 (from $65,581).

Michael C. Goldberg, chairman, reported that results for the third quarter and the first nine months were positively affected by increases in software related sales of $171,763 (7 percent) and $1,766,024 (30 percent), respectively, from the comparable periods in 1989.

Goldberg noted that the FDP/CLAS System has been licensed to a joint venture of ITT Hartford and ELAR Partners, which is an alliance of independently owned and operated marketing organizations. He also noted that the 30 percent improvement in software sales for the nine months was spread across most of the company's product areas.

FDP's financial condition remains extraordinarily strong with cash and marketable securities of $13,884,071, a current ratio of 8.4 to 1, no debt, and shareholder's equity of $16,967,475.

Miami-based FDP Corp. develops and markets applications software systems for the marketing and administration areas of the pension and life insurance industries.

AVENEL, NJ (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - CONCORD CAMERA CORP. (NASDAQ/NMS Symbol: LENS) Thursday announced financial results for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended June 30, 1990.

Revenues for the fourth quarter ended June 30, 1990 were $6,847,214 compared to $6,889,650 for the comparable quarter in 1989. The net loss for the quarter ended June 30, 1990 was $2,362,449, or $(0.57) per share, as compared to net income of $304,312, or $0.07 per share, reported for the fourth quarter ended June 30, 1989.

Revenues for the year ended June 30, 1990 increased to $28,381,201 from $24,774,678 for the year ended June 30, 1989. The net loss for fiscal 1990 was $3,198,225, or $(0.77) per share, as compared to net income of $2,537,590, or $0.62 per share in fiscal 1989.

As a result of the fiscal 1990 loss, CONCORD CAMERA CORP. has failed to satisfy a number of the financial covenants in its bank loan agreement. Although the Company anticipates receiving a waiver of such defaults, the loan agreement provides that the bank may declare a default and exercise its remedies thereunder.

Commenting on the results, Jack C. Benun, Chairman and CEO, stated, ''Fiscal 1990 results were disappointing, but were largely attributable to a series of unusual and unanticipated events. Wrongful actions by certain former officers and directors of the Company's wholly owned Hong Kong subsidiary, Dialbright Company Limited, directly resulted in, among other things, the disruption of manufacturing operations and the re-valuation of certain inventories they had purchased. Our operations in the Far East have since been reorganized under new, on-sight leadership. The Company has initiated legal proceedings in Hong Kong against Dialbright's former managing director and other employees and has been granted an injunction freezing certain of the their assets.

''Additionally, general softness in the retail industry in the third and fourth fiscal quarters forced the Company to increase its selling efforts and expenses, to reduce the prices of its cameras and offer discounts in order to remain competitive and maintain market share.''

Benun further noted, ''Despite these setbacks, the Company believes it has positioned itself to resume profitability in the new fiscal year. As previously announced, the Company is presently producing more cameras than at any time in its history to satisfy existing and anticipated demand and expects to introduce a number of new lines of camera products in the current fiscal year.''

CONCORD CAMERA CORP. is principally engaged in the manufacture and sale of inexpensive 35 millimeter and 110 cartridge cameras which it manufactures and assembles in the People's Republic of China under the CONCORD trademark as well as under private label.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 20) BUSINESS WIRE - ASARCO Incorporated (NYSE:AR) Wednesday announced that the company has temporarily suspended mill construction at its Ray copper mine expansion project in Arizona pending the resolution of an issue related to permitting at the site.

Construction of in-pit crushing and conveying facilities and mine development work will continue without interruption. Asarco said it is currently in discussions with State and Federal Environmental Protection Agencies and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers regarding issues related to the optimum location of a mine tailings disposal site, which is part of its previously announced $194 million expansion program at the Ray Mine.

The expansion will result in an increase in Ray's mining and milling rate to 60,000 tons of ore per day and an increase in production capacity from today's 115,000 tons-per-year rate to 182,000 tons of copper per year by 1992.

The program consists of new mining equipment, in-pit crushing, accelerated pre-mine stripping and the construction of a new mill located at the mine site.

The company noted that mill construction at the Ray Mine is currently well ahead of schedule and if the tailings location matter is promptly resolved, as the company expects, the Ray expansion should remain on schedule for its 1992 completion date.

ASARCO Incorporated, headquartered in New York City, is one of the world's leading integrated producers of nonferrous metals, principally copper, silver, lead, zinc and gold. Asarco also produces specialty chemicals, minerals and other industrial products and provides environmental services. Asarco had 1989 sales of $2.2 billion.

SHEET METAL WORKERS NATIONAL PENSION FUND OWNS 27,347,109 SHARES (68.03%) OF CHRONAR CORP (TICKER: CRNR) OF LAWRENCEVILLE, NJ.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

On Aug. 3 and Sept. 6, 1990, EJC paid an aggregate of $800,000 to Chronar as further deposits towards the $4 million purchase price of the contemplated sale by Chronar to EJC of certain technology relating to the Eureka equipment previously sold by Chronar to EJC. Pursuant to a stock purchase agreement dated Sept. 13, 1990, EJC agreed to issue 1 percent of its common equity to Renaissance in partial consideration for Renaissance's consent to the sale of the Eureka technology. At the same time, Sheet Metal Workers National Pension Fund entered into a note purchase agreement with Harbert pursuant to which NPF purchased Harbert's 25 percent interest in the loan receivable arising out of Chronar's indebtedness to Midlantic, thereby eliminating the need for Harbert's consent to the Eureka purchase. The Eureka purchase was then consummated on Sept. 13, 1990.

STAMFORD, CT (SEPT. 20) COMTEX - Due to a transmission error, duplicate Form 4 filings were released for a number of companies, including the company you are researching.

Please carefully inspect the filings of the company you are researching to determine which are duplicates. It appears that some filings were sent five times each, so it is likely that there are four unnecessary duplications of each filing that was sent during the period when this technical problem occurred.

We regret any confusion this problem has caused.
